ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Twenty-five years ago, Craig Winn was an entrepreneur. The turbulent story of his last adventure is shared in his first book, In The Company. It is an entertaining read, providing an eyewitness account into the culture of a private and then public company.

After the Islamic suicide bombings of 9.11.01, Craig met with al Qaeda and wrote Tea with Terrorists to explain – Who they are, Why they kill, and What will stop them. His most widely read book, Prophet of Doom – Islam’s Terrorist Dogma in Muhammad’s Own Words has now been updated and substantially expanded, becoming God Damn Religion after witnessing the sadistic savagery of Muslims on 10.07.23 in Israel. The resulting assessment of Islam is irrefutable because the deplorable nature of this death cult was revealed by reordering the Quran chronologically and setting it into the context of Muhammad’s life using the earliest and most credible Hadith, notably Al-Tabari’s Tarikh | History and Ibn Ishaq’s Sirat Rasul Allah | Life of Allah’s Messenger. Also, by citing the Torah and Prophets, he has conclusively demonstrated that Allah was invented in the 6th century CE and is not God, much less, Yahowah, the God of Abraham and Moses. If you want to know why fundamentalist Muslims commit 90% of the world’s most heinous terrorist acts, these 5 volumes will answer your questions.

In his quest to resolve a puzzling prophetic anomaly, Craig began translating the text of the Dead Sea Scrolls. That endeavor led to the 3-volume series providing An Introduction to God, the 9 volumes of Yada Yahowah, the 5 books encouraging Observations, 3 exploring Babel, 5 for Questioning Paul, now Twistianity, and then to the 3 volumes devoted to Coming Home. Throughout, Mr. Winn has been committed to providing amplified translations, which are not only more accurate and complete, they are readily verified. As a result, he has been afforded thousands of unique insights into the words Yahowah inspired, many of which are unheralded and profound.

Beyond his books, Craig Winn has been interviewed as an expert on religion, politics, and current events on over 5,000 talk radio programs and has hosted 5,000 more, leaving a vast quantity of archived shows from Shattering Myths to Yada Yah Radio. He currently produces a live podcast every Friday evening, where he discusses insights gleaned from his translations.

Mr. Winn is not a theologian, nor is he associated with any religious or political institution. He does not accept donations or receive financial backing from anyone. Everything he has written is shared freely online. Even his 35 printed books are offered without royalty.

Craig has devoted his life to exploring Yahowah's revelations. He enjoys God's company and is enriched by the experience. If you have an open mind and a desire to learn, you will enjoy his translations and insights.

He encourages readers to share his translations and resulting conclusions, albeit with two important caveats: 1) You may not use them to promote any religious, political, or conspiratorial agenda. And 2) You may not use them to incite or engage in a violent act. When it comes to exposing errant and counterproductive ideas, wield words wisely.

You may contact Craig at YadaYah.com. He enjoys constructive criticism and will engage with readers. But be forewarned: he is immune to religious idiocy and will not respond to threats or taunts. The YadaYah.com site provides links to his books, to Yada Yah Radio, to many of his audio archives, as well as to friends and forums.

Lastly, Craig has a bias and an agenda. He knows and respects Yahowah, and he has devoted his life to advancing God's primary objective: which is to call His people home.

The 4th volume of Coming Home is offered to reinforce two essential truths: Dowd / David is Yahowah's Firstborn Son, our Messiah, former and returning King, and our Savior ~ having fulfilled Pesach, Matsah, and Bikuwrym in year 4000 Yah, and Yada | One Who Knows, in the role of Yahowah's Nakry | Observant Foreigner, has been equipped to serve as Dowd's Basar | Herald.

From God's perspective, these men are inseparable and essential. Their stories are only complete when the life of one is reflected by the other. As evidence of this, we find Dowd and Yada introduced in the opening chapter of the Towrah. In the midst of the Creation account, Yahowah reveals how the Lesser Luminary will reflect the Greater Luminary's brilliance as they work together to fulfill the Mow^{ed} | Restoring Witnesses to the Eternal Testimony. And so begins their unfolding story...

“God (wa elohym*) said with impending implications (amar* – He announced with the message playing out over time (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)), ‘There will be (hayah – it has been decided upon that there will exist throughout time and by choice (qal imperfect jussive third-person masculine singular)) Ma*owr* | Luminaries as Sources of Light (*ma*owr* – brilliant and shining providers of illumination and enlightenment; a compound of ma – to ponder the implications of owr* – light) in the expanse (*ba raqya – within the spreading out of matter and space to firmly extend the presence) of the heavens (ha shamaym – the spiritual realm of God) to understand the separation between (badal bayn – to distinguish and discern what it is to be set apart, to ascertain the means for inclusion and membership or cause of expulsion between) the time of light (ha yowm – the reckoning of time during the day) as it is distinct from (wa bayn – differentiated from) the darkness of the night (ha laylah – the period of substantially diminished light with the deprivation of illumination and ensuing ignorance).

They will exist (wa hayah – they will be (qal perfect third-person plural)) as symbols and signs, even as illustrious examples (*la owth – as a means to convey information on a banner, illustrations, and proof which make the message more clearly known when evaluating the account of recompense and reward, all by offering their consent; from uwth* – a means to be seen agreeing, providing permission) and for the Mow•edym | Appointed Meeting Times for the Restoring Witnesses to the Eternal Testimony (wa la mow•ed – concerning the designated periods which have been determined for a specific purpose authorized by the authority pertaining to restoration during the feasts; from mow – this pertains to ed* – the restoring witness to the everlasting testimony and enduring evidence, and ya•ad – to meet on an appointed schedule), as well as (wa) for the days (yowm – the reckoning of time when there is light) and for the years (wa shanah – the complete cycle of the seasons, a solar year which is a measure of age and the renewal of life).” (Bare•syth / In the Beginning / Genesis 1:14)

This is the opening line of the fourth creative day, and that means that nothing was created during this time period. This is also to suggest that the souls of these *Ma*owr* | Luminaries may have been conceived by Yahowah early in the process as they would become the most enlightening characters in His evolving story. Or, God could just be revealing how the plot will play out over the coming days and years.

One thing is certain: the reason for their introduction on the fourth day is that the timing is essential to our understanding of their role in God's plan. The Spring Mow•edym of Pesach, Matsah, and Bikuwrym were fulfilled by Dowd in his second of three lives in 33 CE, which was year 4000 Yah. And while King Dowd is the *Gadowl Ma*owr* | Greater Luminary, there wasn't any who recognized him as such, who realized that he is the Chosen One, Son of God, and Messiah who became our Savior until the Lesser Luminary began restoring his dignity in Yada Yahowah. And by doing so, Yada would open a window through which we might know Yahowah.

These enlightening individuals help us ponder the implications of being separated unto God or from Him. The first of the two would shine for all to see as the Son of God, Messiah, and King beginning on the third day, in the heart of Yah's timeline. Then he would reappear at the beginning of the fourth day when fulfilling the Spring Mow^{edym}, knowing that darkness would ensue. His brilliance would not be reflected again until, on the cusp of his return on the sixth day, the Lesser Luminary would emerge out of the darkness to shine a light on all he had and will achieve.

Independently and collectively, they would write and say more about Yahowah than any others, with Dowd writing most of the Mizmowr and Mashal and Yada, in Yada Yahowah, writing fifteen times more than all of the prophets combined. And as it would transpire, when designated as the Choter, Yada would compose the Nes | Sign Yahowah will raise to call His people home, literally fulfilling this prophecy.

But most especially, the Gadowl and Qatan Ma^{owr}, as men, are the two individuals who have and will fulfill the Mow^{edym}. Not only was Yada the first to recognize Dowd's contribution to Pesach, Matsah, and Bikuwrym, he has been assigned the responsibility for the Shabuw^{ah} and Taruw^{ah} Ingatherings. And as the ^{*}Adamah Parah on Taruw^{ah}, Yada will purge the remnant of Yisra^{el} of guilt, preparing them for Dowd's Kipurym return. Then during Sukah, Dowd and Yada will stand side by side as the Trees of Lives and Knowledge. So, just as the prophecy portends, these two men serve as the illustrious examples of the Restoring Witnesses to the Eternal Testimony while working collaboratively with Yahowah.

Even as we contemplate the days and years, they shine a brilliant light on the days and years God's plan plays out during our long journey out of and back to the Garden. Dowd, as Gabry^{*}el in 555 BCE revealed the exact day he would fulfill Chag Matsah in 33 CE, unambiguously revealing this essential date on God's calendar. Two millennia later, Yada was the first to explain Dowd's prophecy and then use the result to establish the rest of the timeline, even explaining when Shabu^wah, Taru^wah, Kipurym, and Sukah would transpire.

The two Ma^wowroth | Sources of Illumination and Enlightenment are presented using one of the rare occasions in which a masculine noun becomes plural using a feminine suffix. This may indicate that these men are able to navigate through time because Yahowah envelops their nepesh | souls (feminine) in His ruwach | spirit (feminine) as they move through the millennia. Further, Yahowah's Lamp is a Manowrah, which is also feminine in Hebrew grammar.

By scribing owr* in the infinitive, it serves as an actionable title for the Ma^wowr. They are owr* | Sources of Illumination and Enlightenment, thereby expanding the Light of Heaven to the Earth.

Both Ma^wowroth | Sources of Enlightenment are called Gadowl, which is to say that they are important to God and man and influential conveyers of Yahowah's message. They are always intense, sometimes loud, and distinguished from others. Their mission is to promote growth by magnifying and amplifying the means to be enriched and empowered by the Covenant.

Also, while they are both important, one is more influential than the other. He is Sovereign of the day – those days being when the nation of Israel was born and when it will be restored when he was and will be King.

“Therefore, they will exist (wa hayah – they will be (qal perfect third-person plural)) for enlightenment as luminaries (la ma^wowroth – to ponder the implications of light and as sources of illumination) to firmly extend the presence (ba

raqya^o – in the expanse and within the spreading out of matter and space) of the spiritual realm (ha shamaym – of the heavens) to be an *owr | Light and provide illumination and enlightenment (*la owr – to illuminate and shine brightly (hifil infinitive construct – reveals that they were being deployed by Shamaym under the descriptive title Owr with ongoing implications over time)) upon and over (al – unto and for) the Earth (*ha erets).’ And therefore (wa), it will continue to exist like this thereafter based upon what preceded it (hayah ken). (Bare^osyth / Genesis 1:15)

God (*wa elohym), He acted and engaged to appoint for this particular task (asah* – He did what had to be done to make with ongoing implications over time (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) what pertains to these two (eth shanaym* – both) ha Ma^oowroth | Sources of Illumination and Enlightenment (Ma^oowroth – Lights and Lamps) who are Gadowlym | Substantial and Empowering, Important and Influential (ha gadowlym – great, intense, loud, and distinguished; from gadal – promoting growth and magnifying and amplifying the means to empowerment (masculine plural absolute)) – with ha Gadowl | the Greater and Most Distinguished (eth ha gadowl* – with the most important and influential, the loudest and most distinguished) of ha Ma^oowr | the Luminary (ha ma^oowr – source of illumination and enlightenment) Memshalah | Prominent and Powerful, having Dominion and Authority, the One Governing as Sovereign (memshalah – leading with illustrative proverbs, painting pictures with words to describe; from mashal – to rule and reign with proverbs and poetry conveying ethical maxims) of the illuminated time (ha yowm – the daylight hours) and (wa) with ha Qatan | the Lesser, younger, and more recent (eth ha qatan* – the more recent, less significant, and more detested) ha Ma^oowr | Luminary (ma^oowr – source of illumination and enlightenment) Memshalah | Prominent and Powerful, having Dominion and Authority, the One Authorized to Lead through Illustrative Insights (memshalah – leading by drawing pictures with words and becoming an effective communicator to advance understanding; from mashal – to lead by conveying ethical maxims) of the time of darkness when the light is not known (ha laylah – the night during the scarcity of light, the comparative period of ignorance as a result of failing to observe) along with the heavenly powers (*wa eth ha kowkab – in addition to the spiritual luminaries).” (*Bare syth / Genesis 1:16)

This is now the second of four times that Yahowah will address the *Ma*owr* in the opening chapter of the Towrah, which is remarkable in itself. The first time it was to say that they would serve as owth Mow*edym* | Signs and Symbols of the Restoring Witnesses to the Eternal Testimony. This affirmed that they would write about and then fulfill the seven annual Invitations to be Called Out and Meet with God, enabling what Yahowah intended. And now in the second iteration of the *Ma*owr* | Sources of Enlightenment, they are Memshalah | Prominent Leaders who are Authorized by God to Govern. And they will do so in the style Yahowah favors ~ Mashal } which is to effectively communicate by drawing pictures with words. Dowd would write them and Yada would explain them.

I find it particularly telling that King Dowd, as the Gadowl | Greater of the *Ma*owr* | Luminaries, is heralded as the Sovereign of the Day which means that the Qatan | Lesser *Ma*owr* will serve the King when He returns, his seat of honor shining as brilliantly as the sun. This means that the leadership and advice of the Lesser Luminary is now, during this time of darkness. It will conclude on Yowm Kipurym in 2033 when his King returns as brilliant as the sun. After that time, Yada will serve Dowd by educating his subjects.

Their purpose is to enlighten...

“The Almighty (*wa elohym), He offered them as a gift, placing them in this position for this ongoing purpose (*nathan eth hem – He bestowed, appointed, and assigned them for this opportunity and task (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) in the vast expanse as extensive and solid evidence (ba raqya – extended to be beaten; from raqa – to stretch out, trample, and beaten) of the spiritual realm (ha shamaym) to provide light and enlightenment (*la owr – for illumination and sunlight) upon (al*) the Land and Earth (*ha erets – the material realm).” (*Bare syth / Genesis 1:17)

While I may be reading too much into this, nevertheless, when we turn to the root of raqya, we find that raqa speaks of these men being set out to be trampled and beaten. This is what happened to Dowd when fulfilling Passover and will occur with Yada on Taruw^{ah}. Thereby, Yahowah would provide solid evidence of the means to enter the expansive spiritual realm of the heavens by what they share pursuant to their sacrifices during the Mow^{edym}.

In addition to enlightening mankind, the Greater and Lesser luminaries would become leaders of men...

And to govern, showing leadership by offering proverbial, illustrative, and memorable pictures comprised of words (wa la mashal – placed in charge, leading by quoting that which is intelligently communicated while making informative connections (qal infinitive construct)) during the light of day (ba ha yowm) and through the darkness of night (wa ha laylah – during the time of ignorance for failing to be observant), providing a contrast to set apart or expel by severing any association (wa la badal – to determine who is withdrawn or who is abandoned and excluded (hifil infinitive construct)) through understanding and discernment, and by making intelligent connections leading to comprehending (bayn – offering insights and wisdom to properly distinguish) the light (*ha owr – the shining and brilliant source of enlightenment) and comprehending the interval of time and understanding the darkness (wa bayn ha choshek – to realize the similarities between obscurity, concealment, and confusion, this diminishment of light and resluting ignorance).

God (*wa elohym), He saw (*ra*ah* – He perceived, considered, and regarded (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) that indeed (ky) it was good, beneficial, and productive (towb – it was useful and agreeable, valuable and appropriate, pleasing and beneficial).” (Bare^ssyth / In the Beginning / Genesis 1:18)

In His concluding narrative regarding these two Ma^aowr | Sources of Enlightenment, God discloses the intent of memshalah by using its root, mashal | to govern by painting pictures with words. When it comes to leading His people, it will be through these men. And they will guide as Yahowah has done ~ using illustrative depictions of what we need to know to get the most out of life.

God's Ma^aowr will serve in good times and bad, in obscurity and in the light. And while this is as we should expect, badal, when fully bayn | understood, is a bit of a surprise. Their role isn't just to provide a means to inclusion into the Covenant Family or a method to be withdrawn during the harvests of Bikuwrym, Shabuw^aah, and Taruw^aah, but to determine who is excluded. Badal addresses being severed from any and all association with God and being abandoned and expelled. Therefore, one's perceptions of these men ~ Dowd and Yada ~ will affect the disposition of one's soul. This being so, it explains why the Ma^aowr are featured so prominently in the opening chapter of the Towrah.

And in this light, Yahowah's intent is to help His creation bayn | make the proper connections between these men such that they comprehend the interval of time that will play out between this instruction and their fulfillment of the Mow^eedym. We can deduce that with this narrative being featured on the fourth day of the creation account that our return to the light will be made possible by what Dowd accomplished in year 4000 Yah such that our King will return after the Lesser Luminary begins to reflect his brilliance.

For anyone who may have been of the belief that God was speaking of creating the sun and the moon on the fourth day of the creative process, that isn't possible because plant life was conceived the prior day and the sun is much older than the Earth. Also, Hebrew has a word for sun, shemesh, and one for moon, yareach, but neither was used. But more revealing still, the sun and moon are not signs and they do not govern or speak.

Therefore, to fully appreciate the word picture God is painting and appreciate why the one symbolized by the moon would reflect the light of the one associated with the sun, without naming either, and understand why this was all presented in conjunction with the fourth day of the human experience – year 4000 Yah in 33 CE when Dowd fulfilled the Spring Mow^eedym – we must turn to the 89th Mizmowr / Psalm. In the midst of His tribute to Dowd, Yahowah said...

“Therefore (wa), My steadfast commitment to the truth (*emuwnah *any) and (wa) My unwavering love, determined devotion, and enduring favoritism (chesed *any), are with him (im huw). In My name (wa ba shem any), his light will radiate and enlighten and his brilliant crown (qeren huw) will be lifted up and raised on high (ruwm). (Mizmowr / Psalm 89:24)

He, himself, will call out to Me and welcome Me, in conjunction with the Miqra^eey, announcing (huw* qara* *any), ‘You are my Father (*ab *any *atah)!’ (Mizmowr 89:26) I (*any), also (aph), will appoint and make him (nathan huw) Bakowr *any | My Firstborn Son (bakowr *any), *elyown | the Hand of the Almighty, the Influence of God (*elyown) in contrast to the rulers (la melekym) of the Earth (*erets). (Mizmowr / Psalm 89:27)

Forevermore (la owlam), I will focus on him and keep watch over him (shamar la huw). My unwavering love, unrelenting devotion, and genuine favoritism (chesed *any) in addition to My Family-Oriented Covenant (wa beryth *any) are truthfully presented and reliably established, verifiable and enduring through him (aman la huw). (Mizmowr / Psalm 89:28)

And I will establish (wa sym) his seed, that which he sows, preparing his offspring for the harvest (zera^o huw^{}*) through the Restoring Witness and by way of the Eternal Testimony forevermore (la^{}ed*). His throne and position of honor (wa kise^{} huw^{}) will be equated to the days of heaven (ka yowm shamaym). (Mizmowr / Psalm 89:29)

However, if (im*) his children (beny huw^{}) continue to forsake, ignore, or reject (azab) My Towrah | Teaching and Guidance (Towrah^{}any*) and (wa) if they make a habit of failing to walk (wa lo^{}halak*) according to My means to justly resolve disputes and exercise good judgment (ba mishpat^{}any*), (Mizmowr 89:30) if (im*) they perpetually view My clearly communicated prescriptions for living with contempt (chuqah^{}any chahal*), and further (wa), if they consistently fail to observe the instructive terms of the relationship (mitswah^{}any lo^{}shamar), (Mizmowr 89:31) then (wa) I will hold them accountable (paqad) with the measure (ba shebet) of their religious rebellion and popular political revolt (pesha^ohem). The consequence of their deviation from the way and of their religious corruptions (awon hem*) will cause widespread death (ba nega^o). (Mizmowr / Psalm 89:32)

Accordingly (wa), My unwavering love, unmitigated favoritism, and generosity (chesed^{}any*) I will never remove from him (lo^{}parar min^{}im huw^{}*) because I will never communicate something which is not true nor will I ever contradict (wa lo^{}shaqar*) My steadfast commitment to the truth (ba^{}emuwnah^{}any). (Mizmowr / Psalm 89:33)

I will never dishonor or betray, nor will I poke holes in (lo^{}chahal*) Beryth^{}any* | My Covenant (beryth^{}any*) nor will I ever alter, disguise, or change (wa lo^{}shannah*) that which has gone forth from (mowtsa^o) My lips (saphah^{}any*). (Mizmowr / Psalm 89:34)

echad* | There is One (echad*) to whom I have affirmed the truth by having made a promise (shaba^{}*) by Qodesh^{}any* | My uniquely Set-Apart nature (ba qodesh^{}any*). If not to (im la*) Dowd | the Beloved (Dowd), I will shown to be a liar

(kazab). (Mizmowr / Psalm 89:35)

His offspring and that which he sows for the harvest (zera^o huw^o) will exist and endure (hayah) forever (la^oowlam). And (wa) his place of honor, his dignity and authority, as well as his outward appearance and throne (kise^o huw^o) will be as (ka) brilliant as the Sun (ha shemesh) before Me, as My conspicuous counterpart in My presence, openly in proximity to Me (neged^oany). (Mizmowr / Psalm 89:36)

Likened and related to (ka) the Moon (yareach), he will be appointed, established, and affirmed (kuwn) forevermore (^oowlam), serving as an enduring and reliable, truthful and dependable (wa^oaman) Witness (^oed) in the sky (ba ha shachaq). Pause now and contemplate what you have just read (selah).” (Mizmowr / Lyrics to Sing / Psalm 89:37)

From this we can conclusively deduce that Dowd is the Gadowl Ma^oowr | Greater, More Distinguished Luminary, symbolized by the sun, while Yada, as the first and only witness to reflect his brilliance, thereby serving in the manner of the moon, is the Qatan Ma^oowr | Lesser Luminary. Together, they have been painting pictures with words to explain the Mow^oedym | Eternal Testimony as Restoring Witnesses. And in so doing, we are the first to properly perceive the prophetic portent of Yahowah’s presentation in the opening chapter of the Towrah.

As the most acclaimed leader and lyricist, Dowd would fulfill the promise of Pesach, Matsah, and Bikuwrym in year 4000 Yah / 33 CE during his second of three lives. But then as the world fell into religious darkness, Yada would restore the Son of God’s dignity, reflecting all that the Messiah has achieved for the first only time in two millennia. This connection between these men and the symbols representing them is reinforced once again in the 104th Mizmowr...

“The most highly exalted mounts (harym ha gaboah) are to approach that which is valuable and beneficial (la ha ya^eel). The sharp rocky crag (sela^e) is a trusted shelter to seek protection (machseh), a treasured cover (la ha shaphan).” (Mizmowr / Psalm 104:18)

The Mounts are Choreb and Mowryah. They are exceedingly valuable and beneficial because this is where we approach our God. The instructions regarding the Mow^eedym were delivered on Choreb while Pesach and Taruw^eah are both fulfilled on Mowryah. And as for the sela^e | sharp rocky crag, we find him beneath the fire on the mountain of Moseh and on the mountain of Dowd as the sacrifice is burned. And this is why God revealed...

“The Moon (yareach – that which reflects the sun’s light (masculine singular)), he will act and engage (asah* – he will perform, doing the work required (qal perfect third-person masculine singular)) during (la) the Mow^eedym | as the Restoring Witness to the Eternal Testimony (Mow^eedym – the Appointed Meeting Times).

The Sun (shemesh), He knows Yada and is aware (yada^e – he is cognizant of and familiar (qal perfect third-person masculine singular)) of his arrival (mabow^e huw^e - of his appearance).” (Mizmowr / Psalm 104:19)

Painting His story, Yahowah uses symbols and metaphors as textures and shading. The Greater and Lesser Luminaries are equated to the sun and moon because one reflects the other’s light during the darkest hours. Even for the doubters, Yahowah’s revelations in Mizmowr 89 and 104 are convincing.

The second time we find Dowd and Yada interacting is also in the opening book of the Towrah, this time in Bare^osyth / Genesis 2. And this time, as was the case previously, their roles are clearly defined.

Yahowah wants His people to know the purpose of the ets | Trees presented in Gan^{}eden* | the Sheltered Garden of Great Joy because it leads men and women back to the Tree of Lives through the Tree of Knowledge. Just as our relationship with God commenced in the Garden, once restored, we will return to it. But just as the Greater and Lesser Luminaries represent Dowd and Yada, such is also the case with the Tree of Lives and the Tree of Knowledge. Even the references to tsamach | branch and adamah* | earth are indicative of Dowd and Yada. And that makes this the second prophetic iteration of the essential relationship between these two men.

“Therefore (wa), every serious consideration and subsequent conversation (kol syach – each thought put forth and musing pondered; from syach – to speak thoughtfully after seriously studying a situation, pondering and considering the narrative (note: syach can also mean quarrel, lament, or complaint, musing, study, or even shrub)) of the time before (terem – previous to and up to this point in time) the environment was cultivated for life (ha sadeh – the earth was suitable for growing plants or supporting animals), would exist, present in the land, itself (hayah ba ha^{}erets* – it existed within the ground (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)).

Then (wa), the full array of plants (kol^{}eseb* – the expansive variety of vegetation) of the environs suitable for cultivating life (ha sadeh) had not yet begun to branch out and grow (terem tsamach – were not ready to sprout and yield an increase in variety of species or reaching their full potential). This is because, by contrast (ky – indeed by comparison), Yahowah (Yahowah – God’s personal and proper name transliterated based upon His towrah | teaching regarding His hayah | existence) had not caused rain to fall (lo^{}matar* – He had not caused water to fall from the sky in liquid form (hifil perfect third-person masculine singular)) upon the ground (al ha erets – on the land). And then (wa) man (adam* – the name of the first man created in God’s image with a conscience in addition to consciousness) did not exist (ayin* – was not there) to work (abad eth – to expend the energy to cultivate and labor on behalf of (qal infinitive construct)) the earth (*ha adamah – the ground; the feminine of adam*).” (*Bare*syth* / In the Beginning / Genesis 2:5)

Yahowah introduced His narrative of life in the Garden following His Creation Account with syach | a thoughtful conversation to consider. He did not speak of mundane “bushes” as other translations infer but, instead, of a narrative we’d be wise to ponder. And so we shall. Further, God is saying that there is evidence of His conversation with us manifest in the Earth, itself, demonstrating how our planet resembles the Garden of Eden in that both were expressly tuned for life.

This is why we find Yahowah revealing through sadeh that He had cultivated an environment ideally suited for life to flourish, and for us to grow and reach our full potential. This is reflected in the erets* | Earth, itself. Yahowah knew that, with proper husbandry, it had the potential to produce the result He desired – and will in time. God realized long ago that He could set the stage for something extraordinary if we would listen and work collaboratively, cultivating life together.

As we know, plant and animal life emerged in the seas but it would not grow and thrive on land prior to rain. And once the earth was watered, man could be conceived and the work of developing a productive and mutually beneficial relationship begun.

In this regard, adamah* is a loaded term with prophetic implications, especially when following abad* | work. It is not only with *ha adamah that this story begins, it is with *ha adamah that it will conclude. Therefore, it is from where we began that we will return. Expecting us to eventually appreciate the underlying message Yahowah is conveying, we must come to appreciate how *ha adamah relates to both eden* and *ha adam.

When abad* and adam* are juxtaposed, the result speaks of Obed Edowm who is also the Man from Edom, a name and title based upon these same words, in the same order, telling the same story. Obed* is written identically to abad* in Hebrew and it reveals that this Man from Edom is the one in service to Dowd who will save the remaining remnant in the Land.

edowm* is adam* with a Wah / Y / Peg to Secure and Enlarge the Home by piercing the earth preceding the Mem / מ / Water. edowm* / מׁיׁדׁוּם (reading right to left in Hebrew) speaks of the Bloody Red Man of the Earth foretold by Shamuw^eel / Samuel and Yasha^yah / Isaiah who saves Israel while in service to Dowd. He not only assures the proper positioning of the Ark of the Covenant in anticipation of the King anointing it on Kipurym, he supplies the blood, while also preparing the final remnant of Yisra^el for Dowd's return. Pulling all of this together, we realize that Obed* is from abad* | work and Edowm* is adam* with the addition of a Wah | Y before the Mem | מ, which is the means to puncture the adamah* so that the subterranean waters are released on Taruw^eah to prepare those who will be celebrating the King's return.

Additionally, Edowm* is symbolic of the descendants of 'Esau, revealing that this man will restore the fractured family of Yisra^el by reestablishing the birthright of the firstborn. Therefore, in the pictographic depictions drawn in paleo-Hebrew, edowm* / מׁיׁדׁוּם is symbolic of the Ram who opens the door to life by enlarging and securing the home by way of the sea – symbolic of the fact he will be working with a Gowy to restore and cleanse his people.

Moving deeper into Yahowah's narrative, the next word, ed*, is one letter removed from adam* and two removed from edowm* ~ and in both cases, with the addition of the Mem / מ / Water ~ the source of life and purification. And so while almost everyone, myself included, has rendered ed* as "mist," that is inconsistent with the verb alah* | to rise because mist descends from the atmosphere. And it misses the point. Obed Edowm, this Man from Edom who, as the adamah Parah*, prevails on Taruw^{ah} because Yahowah will release a torrent of subterranean  / waters from beneath his sacrifice on the Temple Mount in the heart of the Land. Therefore, completing this picture, God revealed...

“A subterranean supply of fresh water (ed* – liquid water and moisture from an artesian source) rose up (alah* – he ascended after offering the sacrifice and was lifted up and exalted (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) from (min – out of and because of) the land (*ha erets – ground or earth). By this, He supplied water (*wa shaqah eth – He offered something to drink (hifil perfect third-person masculine singular)) to the entire (kol – the whole) presence and appearance (paneḥ – personal existence) of *ha adamah | the Bloody Red Man of the Earth (*ha adamah – or simply the soil).” (Bare^ssyth / Genesis 2:6)

This is to say that Yahowah had a plan in place to rectify His fractured relationship with humankind before humans existed. This is a prophetic portrayal of the sacrifice of the adamah Parah* | Bloody Red Man of the Earth who as the Productive Bull will purge the final remnant of Yisra^{el} of their guilt so that they may reenter Gan Eden*. This is an explanation of how the sacrifice depicted in Bamidbar / Numbers 19 will resolve the guilt of the Adulterous Woman presented in Bamidbar / Numbers 5. And in that example, her religious infidelity will not only be washed by the waters, she will drink them to prove that she can be trusted to reenter the Garden.

Not only was man conceived to engage in a relationship with God, that relationship would be restored by the apar* | ash of the Adamah Parah* as his corpse is set ablaze on Taruw^{ah} in year 6000 Yah. And to appreciate how this would all play out as three lives were lived three times so that others may live twice, we were given a neshamah | conscience. It is the one thing that distinguishes men from other animals. We can think, reasoning our way back to God's good graces.

“Then (wa), Yahowah (YaHoWaH – 𐤕𐤓𐤕𐤗), Almighty (elohym*), formed (yasar – He forged and fashioned, planned and prepared, devised and shaped (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) for association and accompaniment (eth* – accordingly) the man, *Adam (*ha adam – 𐤇𐤁𐤀𐤌, the male, this individual masculine person), out of (min – from) the material substance (apar* – the fine and very small natural particles of earthen elements, dust and ash) of (min) the ground (*ha adamah – the soil or earth).

He blew (wa naphach – He breathed (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) into his nostrils (*ba *aph huw – into his nose and breathing passageway) a neshamah | conscience (neshamah – the capacity for rational thinking and good judgment, of recognizing the difference between right and wrong, discernment and discrimination) for lives, restoring and sustaining lives (chayym – the plural of chay | life as a reviving, renewing, restorative, and prolonging process). And the man, *Adam (*wa ha adam – so this man), came to exist as (hayah – he became) a soul (la nepesh – with consciousness, the ability to observe and respond) for life (chay – alive and living).” (Bare’syth / Genesis 2:7)

Seldom considered by most, beyond a nepesh | consciousness to experience life, to observe and respond to our surroundings, Yahowah gave man a neshamah | conscience to experience God by coming to know the meaning of life. It is one of the most valuable gifts offered by Yahowah, even as it is squandered by most. It is our neshamah which enables our analysis of the words of this narrative so that we might more fully capitalize upon God's lessons. It is this ability to exercise good judgment and to reason that enables us to reach our potential, ultimately enjoying eternal life as an energy-based spiritual being following our material existence.

In this regard, while we will retain our neshamah | conscience going forward, it is our nepesh | soul that matters. It is the reservoir of our personality, our attitude and attributes, our experiences and accomplishments. Feed and care for yours and it will endure forever, long after your body is gone.

“Yahowah (𐤆𐤏𐤐𐤗𐤀 – a transliteration of YaHoWaH as instructed in His towrah – teaching regarding His hayah – existence), Almighty (elohym* – who is God), planted and established, firmly embedding a home to celebrate life (nata^o – firmly embedded the seeds for growth as a dwelling place, even pitching a tent as a protective covering (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) as a Gan | Sheltered Garden (gan – a shielded and surrounded enclosure with a protective fence; from ganan – a defended shelter suitable for sustaining life which is surrounded and covered) of (ba – in) eden | Great Pleasure and Joy (eden* – 𐤍𐤁𐤍, a favorable circumstance which is tremendously delightful, ultimately pleasurable, and extremely satisfying; from adan* – luxurious and pleasant and ed* | as a restoring witness to the eternal testimony) pursuant to a time long ago (min qedem – oriented toward the sunrise in the ancient past).

Then (wa), He placed (sym – He put and set (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) the man, Adam (*ha adam – this man), He had fashioned and formed (yatsar – He designed, prepared, and fabricated (qal perfect third-person masculine singular)) there (*sham eth – by name therein) for the benefit of the relationship and to show the way (asher* – to reveal the correct path to get the most out of life).” (Bare^osyth / In the Beginning / Genesis 2:8)

While we are here, it is worth noting that Yahowah’s name is readily pronounceable. He affirmed in His ToWRaH | Guidance that it is based upon the verb HaYaH | to exist, which provides the intended sound of each letter. And this becomes obvious because to eliminate the “o” sound from the Wah would turn towrah into trah and shalowm into shalm.

Gan is from ganan, and that means that the Garden was sheltered from the elements, protected, covered, and enclosed.

Additionally, it connects Sukah to the Garden because the name of the Miqra* is based upon sakak, also meaning “to protect, to cover, to shelter, and to enclose.” This is important because Yahowah is inviting a remnant of His people to reenter Gan *Eden on Sukah. This is why both Gan and Sukah represent a nata^o | celebration of life as well as conveying the symbolism of the Tent of the Restoring Witness.

And speaking of witnesses, that is something else *Eden conveys. Drawn as 𐤀𐤕𐤍 in paleo-Hebrew, the *Ayin / Eye / 𐤍 speaks of an observant eyewitness. The Dalet / Door / is Dowd, the Doorway to Life with two Dalet in his name. Dowd is also the Nun / 𐤌 / Son who has made Bikuwrym | Firstborn Children possible.

Among the most vibrant insights we can deduce from the Garden narrative is that Yahowah “placed (sym) the man (ha *adam) He had designed, fashioned, and formed (yatsar) there (sham *eth) for the benefit of the relationship and to show the way to the correct path to get the most out of life (asher).” When we understand asher in this context, everything else falls into place.

In this next statement, Yahowah is saying that He is responsible for life and its growth, and that these things happen in conjunction with the Tsamach | Branch of Life and *ha adamah | soil from which the Bloody Red Man of the Earth would emerge as the Tree of Knowledge in service to the Tree of Lives. And so here in the Garden as we have turned the page from Genesis One to Genesis Two that the Luminaries are represented as Dowd and Yada, Tsamach and adamah*.

“Yahowah (𐤕𐤕𐤓𐤕 – a transliteration of YaHoWaH as instructed in His towrah – teaching regarding His hayah – existence), who is God Almighty (*elohym), He enabled life to sprout up and grow (tsamach – He initiated and caused life to increase in variety and stature while promoting growth (hifil imperfect third-person masculine singular)) from (min – out of) ha *Adamah | the Ground of the Earth (ha adamah – the soil, the feminine of adam, the Hebrew word for man and red).” (Bare^osyth 2:9 in part)

Yahowah has assembled a cast of characters, and He works with them and through them. However, even as we consider them, never forget that Yahowah is the driving force behind them all.

Further, God designed this planet so that it would be conducive to life. And then, He conceived the lifeforms that would interact and thrive on it, initiating the process which would lead to the result we are currently observing. And it was all so that He and we could add to one another’s enjoyment and grow through shared experiences.

In this regard, there is a mundane and prophetic implication associated with *ha adamah. It can be as routine as dirt or as profound as the soil from which the Tree of Knowledge would grow and bear fruit. And speaking of its purpose, the adamah Parah* is the Productive Man of the Earth whose sacrifice as the Bull on Taruw^oah prepares the final remnant of Yisra^lel for Dowd’s arrival as King alongside Yahowah.

The more important of these assessments seems particularly appropriate considering how God’s narration transitions directly from *ha adamah to a singular ets* | Tree with notable qualities. This Tree is entirely chamad | pleasing to Yahowah because he is productive and fruitful, especially pursuant to the chamad | treasured harvest He is anticipating.

But this is no ordinary fruit because this ets* is mar^{eh} | conveying a revelation from God, one that is clearly presented to enhance mankind’s understanding of the Almighty. And this singular, masculine tree is performing in a towb | productive and beneficial manner.

Even more than this, ets* is akin to adamah* in that it can convey something as ordinary as a plant or something as prophetically powerful that this ets* becomes one of the most enlightening characters in God’s story. In fact, one of the most important and least appreciated prophecies pertains to him ~ that of the Choter who is enabled with the seven spirits of Yahowah.

It is in that prophecy, one presented in Yasha^oyah / Isaiah 11, that we find ^oets becoming etsah* and thereby developing some particularly relevant qualities. This ^oets | Tree of Da^oath | Knowledge etsah* | provides counsel and advice through diligence and effort on the entirety of the plan, framing the relevant issues while overcoming challenges to advocate for the proper response.

“The entire (kol – every aspect of the) tree (^oets – productive upright life with firmly embedded roots and branches which reach up to absorb the light of the sun; from atsah* and etsah* – to provide counsel and advice through diligence and effort on the entirety of the plan for the purpose of developing a backbone while overcoming challenges to advocate the proper response, even if painful while risking being shut out because it is in open defiance of the schemes of authority figures (masculine singular)), he is delightful, desirable, and pleasing, as he is fruitful in delivering a productive and treasured harvest (chamad – he is an attractive and valuable resource to whom to look forward in anticipation of his demonstrable fruitfulness (nifal participle masculine singular absolute)) to visually portray that which is clear and comprehensible, conveying a supernatural revelation (la mar^oeh – serving as a phenomenal vision; from ma – to ponder the implications of ra^{}ah* – what can be seen, perceived, and considered) and as a beneficial and good, productive and pleasing thing (wa towb – healthy and nutritious, acceptable and appropriate, pleasant and enjoyable) to consume for nourishment (la ma^{}akal* – to devour; a compound of ma – to consider akal* – what we consume and are nourished by).” (Bare^osyth 2:9 continued)

Now that we know that an ^oets is far more than a “tree,” we are exposed to Yahowah’s predilection to apply a variety of revealing metaphors and descriptive titles to the same individuals. In this case, the Luminaries come down to Earth to bear fruit as Trees.

“Ha ʿets | the Tree (ha ʿets – the productive upright life with firmly embedded roots and branches which reaches up to absorb the light of the sun; from atsah* and etsah* – to provide counsel and advice through diligence and effort on the entirety of the plan while overcoming challenges to advocate the proper response (masculine singular)) of ha Chayym | the Lives (ha chayym – of renewals and restorations, of revivals which lead to prosperity, to nurturing and nourishment, and to the promise of lives which are preserved and flourish, living and existing over lifetimes; from chayah – to having one’s life restored and sustained by Yah) was in the center (ba tawek – in middle and midst) of ha Gan | the Sheltered Garden (ha gan – protective, covered, and defended enclosure designed to promote and sustain life) along with (wa – in addition to) Ha ʿets | the Tree (ha ʿets – productive upright life with firmly embedded roots and branches which reach up to absorb the light of the sun; from etsah* – to provide counsel and advice through diligence and effort on the entirety of the plan for the purpose of overcoming challenges while advocating for the proper response (masculine singular)) of Ha Daʿath | the Knowledge (ha daʿath – of the acquisition of information with a focus on the application of discernment and judgment for the purpose of perceiving and comprehending; from yadaʿ – to know, be familiar with, and understand, developing comprehension) of Good and Productive (towb – of that which is beneficial and proper, favorable and desirable, agreeable and pleasing, moral and appropriate, useful and valuable) and (wa – along with) Bad (raʿ – evil, harmful, and wrong, erroneous from corrupt compatriots, morally inappropriate, malignant and disagreeable rhetoric from loud-mouthed associates, words and actions which are of no value, morally depraved, displeasing, and troubling).” (Bareʿsyth / In the Beginning / Genesis 2:9)

Consistent with Yahowah’s presentation of the Greater and Lesser Luminaries, in conjunction with *ha adamah we find the ʿets Chayym and ʿets Daʿath in the Gan | Garden adam* and Chawah would soon share with Yahowah. A most amazing drama is about to play out before our eyes.

With these magnificent developments laid out for us, let's not lose track of where we began. God set the scene with *ha adamah | the Bloody Red Man of the Earth who would be represented by a tree. His mission would be to nurture a restoration of life through understanding. Even with Yahowah announcing that He would facilitate all of this, should someone believe I'm overreaching and that *ha adamah was not intended to be anything more than "dirt," I would direct our attention to the famous prophecy regarding the adamah Parah* in Numbers 19. Why would what is thought to be the "Red Heifer" by many be dirty?

Much can be extrapolated from the realization that both adamah* and parah appear feminine, but this is also true for ruwach | spirit and nepesh | soul. Boats and planes are addressed as "she" in English, while neither machine is actually feminine. Similarly, having a ruwach and nepesh doesn't turn Yahowah, Adam, or God's Son, Dowd, into women. Since it is a function of Hebrew grammar, and recognizing that every noun is ascribed a gender, we should be observant without overreacting. And sometimes, the feminine "ah" suffix is actually about expanding the meaning beyond the mundane, even pointing out something profoundly important as is the case in the transition from ets to etsah*, particularly pursuant to portraying the Choter | Stem as the Tree of Knowledge ~ which is soon to become the principal lesson of this story.

adam* is a man, while adamah*, as an adjective, is telling us that a man of the earth will become bloody red when sacrificed as the adamah Parah*. Similarly, par means "bull," and parah reveals that he will be "productive and fruitful" in this endeavor, thereby designating the purpose of the Par | Bull. Both aspects of this title are addressing a particular nepesh | soul who manifests the seven ruwach | spirits of Yah, explaining why they are rendered in the feminine form. Taking this to its intended conclusion, Yada is the ets* | Tree who *Da*ath* | Knows that the ets Chayym* | Tree of Lives is Dowd.

Should you not be on the same page at this point, don't shut the book, because we are just getting started. Exploring these words further, we discover that ets | tree is from the verbal root atsah* which means “to shut or close,” suggesting that access would be impeded to ha ets ha Daath | the Tree of this Knowledge for a long time after Adam and Chawah claimed its fruit prematurely. But it also implies that this tree would become a book comprised of pulverized wood at some point, with pages of pulp which could be opened after having long been closed.

In this light, it is particularly interesting to note that when ets is scribed as etsah*, it is given an added dimension. It means that when we start with ets, we see a productive upright life with firmly embedded roots and branches which reach up to absorb the light of the sun. And in its simplest form, ets is symbolic of the Choter | Stem who is presented as a Natsar | Observant Branch in Isaiah 11. It is there that we are told that his sheresh | roots keep *huw | him steadfast so that he can be parah | productive and fruitful. With all of this confirmed in Yahowah’s voice through YashaYah, it’s patently obvious that the Choter is being described using the metaphor of a tree.

Just a string of coincidence, you say? I don’t think so. Further tying these stories together, when addressing the allocation of His ruwach | spirit, God selected the verbal phrase *nuwach *al huw to say that it will settle and remain on him. This is the same verb Yahowah will apply to positioning Adam in the Garden in Bare’syth 15. And ultimately God would bestow additional spiritual characteristics delivered by His ruwach to the Choter | Stem. Interestingly, they are all presented as feminine attributes, consistent with ruwach, giving this lone man the Spirit of Yahowah, Chakmah | Intelligence, Binah | Understanding, and fourth on the list, drumroll please... etsah* | the Tree Providing Counsel and Advice on the Entirety of the Plan. Yes, the fourth Ruwach | Spirit applicable to the Choter designates him as a very special ets, one with spiritual qualities in YashaYah / Isaiah 11:2.

Should you still be hesitant, God is about to remove all doubt. Following the Ruwach of Gibowrah | Courage, Conviction, and Confidence, the Choter | Stem is given the Ruwach of Da'ath | Knowledge ~ thereby ending the debate.

The Choter, errantly believed to be a Messianic figure, is actually the 'ets Da'ath | Tree of Knowledge. With the Ruwach | Spirit of Yahowah upon him, and the Ruwach of Chakmah | Intelligence and Binah | Understanding flowing through him, Yada becomes the 'etsah | the Tree of Comprehensive Counsel. With an ample application of the Ruwach of Gibowrah | Spirit of Competency and Courage, his is the fruit of Da'ath | Knowledge to restore Yir'ah | Respect for Yahowah. As is often the case, the Prophets contribute to our understanding of the Towrah, with Yasha'yah / Isaiah 11:1 and 2 explaining what we are now witnessing here in Bare'syth / Genesis 1 and 2.

But there is more. Not only would Yada be the first to make this connection between the Choter and the Tree of Knowledge, he was also the first to recognize Dowd as the 'ets Chayym | Tree of Lives. And this is because the Gadowl Ma'owr | Greater Luminary fulfilled Pesach | Passover in year 4000 Yah consistent with the narrative on the fourth day in Genesis one. Collectively, these are among the greatest discoveries every made pursuant to God and they were all derived by Yada as the Choter and Tree of Knowledge regarding Dowd as our Savior and the Tree of Lives.

Without Yada | One who Knows as the 'ets Da'ath, there is no life beyond human mortality because the means to the Beryth through the Mow'ed in the Towrah as enabled by Dowd would have remained unknown. And that is the lesson of the Garden, of the Towrah, and of the Prophets, as revealed by Yahowah. Whether you like it or not, Yada plays an essential role in Yahowah's plan to restore His Son's acclaim so that God can reconcile His relationship with Yisra'el.

These things known, I wish I had derived all of these conclusions sooner. But even late, it is timely because just prior to coming out of the closet and admitting that they believed in and spoke for a Mommy God, the Mother Goddess Cult that has emerged recently to defame me and negate Yada Yahowah, posted an AI Chat Bot essay denouncing my role as the Choter, saying that it was messianic and claimed by Jesus. They were wrong on this point and on every other.

The Choter | Stem and Sucker is giving the fallen and neglected Tree new life such that it is productive again. He, as the Nakry | Observant Foreigner is also metaphorically, the Netser | Observant Branch. The Choter is Sheresh | Rooted and Steadfast, as we would expect of a Tree. And, consistent with Yahowah's depiction, Yada is Parah | Productive and Fruitful. He is the Par | Bull of the Taruw^{ah} Harvest.

Yada as the Qatan Ma^{owr} | Lesser Luminary and the ets Da^{ath} | Tree of Knowledge is Yada | One who Knows. He is prophetically portrayed as the Choter | Stem and the adamah Parah | Productive Man and Bloody Bull. Enabled by the seven Ruwach of Yahowah, His primary purpose is to direct the world's attention to what Dowd has accomplished to make him the Gadowl Ma^{owr} | Greater Luminary and ets Chayym | Tree of Lives. And then at the end, he offers himself as the sacrifice to fulfill Taruw^{ah} and purge the remnant of Yisra^{el} so that they are prepared for Dowd's return.

Using Yahowah's Ruwach of Binah, Yada has made the connections to understand that the story of the Garden is prophetic, depicting where we are headed and how we will arrive at our intended destination. The etsah | Counsel of the Trees is the fruit of the etsah Da^{ath} and it is being offered by the Choter as the Nes | Banner throughout Yada Yahowah. And we are told prophetically that Yahowah will raise it to call His people home.

For the doubters and naysayers, I understand that it is a lot to absorb. We are just two chapters into the Towrah and we have pushed the boundaries of understanding well beyond what has been previously considered. But that is proof in and of itself. And what we will soon discover is that between Bare^{syth} 1 and 2 and Dabarym 18 and 29, then Bamidbar 5, 11, 12, 13 and 14, especially 15 and 19, Yahowah has made the case on behalf of Dowd and Yada. Then, over the next ten centuries the Nabyym | Prophets affirmed this same story a thousand times over.

And so now we know why Yahowah buttressed the meaning of ets with etsah*, revealing that this Tree would “provide counsel and advice through diligence and effort on the entirety of the plan, framing the issue for the purpose of overcoming challenges while advocating on behalf of the proper response, even in the face of open defiance. Just as ets becomes etsah* along with the other spiritual attributes afforded the Choter as a singular male, the same applies to the Par | Bull proving productive when conveyed as parah. This is similar to adam* | man becoming adamah* when more is required of him.

Building on our foundation of knowledge, ets is related to atsab*, a verb with the added connotation of “performing by shaping and fashioning a picture or image of something” God is trying “to convey such that it is properly framed.” And while obviously a positive endeavor, the secondary definition reveals that the resulting picture can be distorted by others such that, when it is perverted, it will grieve those who misrepresent God’s intent.

Additionally insightful when trying to process all of this, we learn that this Ets* | Tree asab*, making him one who works for another, is doing the job that his supervisor, in this case his King, requested ~ just as the Tree of Knowledge serves the Tree of Lives as the Herald of his Sovereign. Additionally relevant to this discussion, etseb* describes “hard work, an endeavor that is particularly difficult and challenging, requiring considerable effort, even as the process can be mentally anguishing at times.”

As for me, I have invested twenty-four years of twelve-hour days in Yada Yahowah. It has been rewarding, but it has also been anguishing at times to see its insights twisted, and even worse, ignored. But even this was something Yahowah anticipated, a realization that will become evident when I present the motive for the fall of man.

Fascinated by the possibilities while noting the profoundly important role this Tree plays in this story and in the reawakening of Israel to Dowd on the cusp of Yisra*el returning to the Garden, let's consider our King's reference to *atsah as the actionable root of *ets | tree. Its lone use is by Dowd in the 16th Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb. It is clearly prophetic of our frustrating experience with the deranged Mother Goddess Cult that attracts a following using my name to in an annoying, slanderous, and malicious manner.

“The one who closes (atseh* – the one who shuts out advice and counsel regarding the totality of the plan and its purpose as the instruction is provided after consultation and calculation to assist in the decision making process through thoughtful deliberation (qal participle)) their eyes (ayin huw – this person's perceptions) to the proper and full accounting and overall determined value of the thoroughly considered and recorded plan (la chashab – regarding systematic and logical analysis and rational thinking, using good judgment to convey highly esteemed insights in an ingenious presentation conveyed in an innovative manner to elicit a thoughtful response), that one is like an annoying insect, a malicious blood-sucking mosquito in hypocritical pursuit of slanderous and malicious speech to discredit and defame (*qarats sapah huw – they wink and purse their lips, signifying their destructive nature as they narrow the scope of the discussion to denounce and spitefully devalue (qal participle)), hallucinating while confusing in a perverse and irrational manner (tahphukowth – immorally providing a false perception to overthrow and overturn; from haphak – to change, reversing course in a obstinate manner), becoming entirely evil, determined to advance that which is completely wrong in the end and thereby perishing in depravity (*kalah ra*ah* – fulfilling the destructive prophecy by deciding to be miserable and malcontent shepherds, ruinous and wicked (piel perfect)).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 16:30)

God is aware of such individuals, and He isn't impressed.

And so, it is enlightening and edifying to witness the way He openly criticizes some and then supports and defends those who serve with Him. By following His example, our steps are guided. And even here, as we pondered the implications of the Tree of Knowledge in the context of a woman who would covet it, we find an explanation of what the modern incarnation of Chawah has done by prioritizing her desires over Yahowah's instructions.

After introducing the two Trees ~ Lives and Knowledge ~ God identified the river which yatsa | came out of Eden. He said that it was used to water the Gan, which I suspect is because Yahowah will cause a great upwelling of water to emerge from the Temple Mount during the sacrifice of the adamah Parah, thereby keeping these accounts properly synced.

Yahowah revealed that this nahar | stream of enlightenment and joy parad | separated and hayah | came to exist as four *ro*sh* | leaders – those being Moseh, Dowd, ElYah*, and Yada. Although at this time they were known as Pyshown, Gychown, Chideqel, and Parath. Their story is depicted in Bare^osyth 2:10 through 2:14.

Pyshown is from *pasha with the own suffix and addresses the entirely rebellious nature of the Yisra^oelites encircling Moseh throughout the Exodus. Of them, Yahowah said that they sabab | went around and around, turning every which way, while chuwylah | anguished and in travail.

Gychown is all things pertaining to gych | being brought forth and bursting onto the scene. It depicts Dowd, the Son who was brought forth and given to us. His three lives would change the world.

The Chideqel is from chedeq, revealing that ElYah* would be the thorn in the side of the religious and political. He would serve as a sarcastic prick to pierce through their nasty façade. As such, he is shown as the thorn in the side of ashuwr* | the Mother Goddess of Assyria who is also the Whore of Babylon.

The Parath is the Euphrates, and as such, it is the river that drains the swamp of Babel | the Confusing Commingling of religion and politics. And it was from here that Judaism's Talmud was conceived and that Islam was derived. As for the name, it is from Parah and, therefore addresses the Productive and Fruitful Bull.

God seldom misses an opportunity to paint portraits with words. We should expect no less going forward. So, after introducing the men who would serve humanity over the next 6000 years, Yahowah turned His attention to the man He conceived to benefit from them...

“Yahowah (Yahowah – written as directed by His towrah | teaching regarding His hayah | existence), Almighty (elohym*), relationally (eth*) He grasped hold of (laqach – He selected, received, and accepted (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) the man, *Adam (*ha adam – the human being), and He settled him restfully (*wa nuwach huw – He placed him, setting him down after settling all unresolved issues so as to foster an association and alliance; a derivation of nuwach – spirit (hifil imperfect third-person masculine singular)) in (ba) the Gan | Sheltered Garden (gan – protected, defended, enclosed, and covered place of care and concern for life) of Eden (eden – 𐤏𐤃𐤅 great joy, delight, and pleasure, of total satisfaction, in the favorable state of universal happiness) to work it (*la *abad hy – to labor in her, serve her, and to cultivate it) and (wa) to closely observe her (*la shamar hy – to pay attention to it, closely examining and carefully considering her, keeping focused on her).” (*Bare*syth* / In the Beginning / Genesis 2:15)

The initial verb suggests an agenda that would eventually play out over time. Fathers laqach | grasp hold of their children so that they can stand up and walk with them. And that is why there are five hands in Yahowah's name, with the largest of them reaching down and out to the people in His shem: 𐤅𐤍𐤏𐤃𐤅.

Continuing to tie these stories together, after introducing the central cast, Yahowah used nuwach | settled spiritually to foretell how the ruwach | spirit of Yahowah would nuwach al huw | settle upon the man serving as the Choter in Yasha^oyah / Isaiah 11:2 with the repetition of the verb.

The realization that gan is from gana and means “to shelter and protect, to cover and defend” reminds us that this is the intent of Sukah | Shelters because its root, sakak, is defined identically. Therefore, what was will be. This next time, however, we will be better equipped and prepared, such that we prove worthy of Yahowah’s attention and trust. And central to mankind’s restoration are the Trees of Knowledge and Lives.

Even the name of the Garden reveals Yahowah’s intent. He wanted to enjoy being with us. eden* | 𐤍𐤁𐤄 means “joyous.” The letters forming this delightful moniker reveal that “the 𐤁 doorway to 𐤍 life can be 𐤅 seen here. This is true not only because we find Dowd | the Beloved in the center of eden* as the Tree of Lives, the Gan is a celebration of life. And so in Gan Eden*, we witness the Son of God as the Door to Life for having fulfilled Passover.

But there is more to living than laughs. We are reminded that man was conceived to abad* | work with God whenever and wherever we are planted. It is our highest calling in life. Moseh, Dowd, ElYah*, and Yada serve as examples of men whose lives were committed to collaborating with Yahowah and doing whatever He asks of us.

As we know from the Towrah, God’s foremost request of us is that we be shamar | observant ~ closely examining and carefully considering His revelations to us. When we do, we are rewarded as has been the case with this examination of what occurred in the Garden, paying attention to the characters in the story, including the Trees.

Right from the outset, as a caring Father, Yahowah provided instructions for us to follow such that our lives might be long, productive, and fulfilling. While God has shared a plethora of prophetic portraits, this is the very first thing communicated directly between God and man. And you’ll notice, Yahowah did the talking and Adam was supposed to listen. This is the pattern God established for our benefit while we remain on the Earth. In other words, stop praying and start listening if you want to be on the same page with the Almighty.

“Yahowah (YaHoWaH), Almighty (*elohym), provided direction (tsawah – He instructed, spoke clearly and unequivocally with authority to benefit and equip the man on an ongoing basis (piel imperfect third-person masculine singular)) concerning (*al – beside, near, over, and on behalf of) the man, *Adam (ha *adam), saying (la *amar), ‘From (min) every (kol) tree (*esh) of ha Gan | the Sheltered Garden (ha gan) you may continually and actually eat (*akal *akal – you can genuinely devour and consume, consistently and enthusiastically being fed by and nurtured (qal infinitive qal imperfect)).’” (Bare *syth / Genesis 2:16)

When Yahowah shared this instruction in the piel imperfect, He revealed that it was for the man’s benefit and that it would affect his life in a meaningful and ongoing manner. This is to say that the tsawah | direction was enabling and sustaining. Moreover, as a friendly reminder, throughout, we find Yahowah speaking in a masculine and singular voice.

While it’s subtle, al* actually means that God was “over” the man, albeit “in close proximity” to him. All of God won’t fit in our universe, much less on one planet and in one person. When we read about God doing something, it’s always as a result of Him projecting an aspect of His nature and influence into lesser dimensions. And speaking of the other guy, as we know, *ha adam is literally rendered as “the man,” whereas Adam is simply a transliteration of the Hebrew noun.

Before we press on, you’ll note that Yahowah said that Adam could eat from any tree in the Garden with akal* | eat repeated for emphasis. This is important because Chawah misrepresented this instruction in her discussion with Satan. Then when addressing the Tree of Knowledge, akal* was negated and not repeated, then buttressed by the imperfect conjugation to say, “You should not make a habit of continually eating from it.” This is because, “As a consequence, during a day you will absolutely die” with muwth repeated to underscore this result.

Also, please note, Yahowah’s subsequent instruction pertained exclusively to the Tree of Knowledge. This is because He didn’t want its purpose preempted, or its fruit consumed before the Door to Life was opened.

“However (wa – but or then), from (min – out of) the Tree (ets* – productive upright life with firmly embedded roots and branches which reach up to absorb the light of the sun; from atsah* and etsah* – to provide counsel and advice through diligence and effort on the entirety of the plan for the purpose of developing character while overcoming challenges to advocate the proper response, even if the process is painful and one risks being shut out because it is in open defiance of authority figures (masculine singular)) of ha Da^{*}ath | the Knowledge (ha da^{}ath* – of the awareness, of the skillful acquisition of information through observation along with the exercise of good judgment leading to understanding, the ability to make rational connections between appropriate aspects of the discernable evidence by being discriminating, perceptive, and judicial; a noun based upon yada^{}* – to know in a relational sense, becoming aware and familiar) of Towb | Good, Proper, Productive, and Pleasing (towb – that which is beneficial and prosperous, correct and truthful, favorable and enjoyable, desirable and agreeable, moral and right, valuable and worthy, even beautiful, generous, pleasant, festive, and joyful) and (wa) of Ra^{*} | Bad, Wrong, Troubling, and Harmful (ra^{}* – evil and wicked, pertaining to corrupt compatriots, morally inappropriate, malignant, and disagreeable rhetoric from loud-mouthed associates, words and actions which are of no value, depraved, displeasing, and malicious), do not make a habit of continuing to eat (lo^{} akal – do not habitually devour or consume (qal imperfect)) from it (min huw^{}* – because of it (masculine singular)).

As a consequence (ky – because as a result, indeed, strengthening this statement by revealing the contrast), during the day (ba yowm – in a time) by defining and depicting yourself as having consumed from it (akal *atah min huw – devouring of it by you will actually and eternally destroy you because of him (qal infinitive construct – a literal verbal noun binding the action to you)), you will come to personify death and you will die, ceasing to exist forevermore (muwth muwth – you will perish and be removed from the living eternally, destroying your soul (qal infinitive absolute qal imperfect second-person)).” (Bare^osyth / In the Beginning / Genesis 2:17)

There was no religious, political, or conspiratorial corruption in the Garden, no militants, lies, or liars, so there was no merit in pursuing an education on what’s wrong with these counterproductive human contrivances. As someone who has written thirteen books systematically refuting Christianity, Judaism, and Islam, I know that the process of excoriating these plagues is laborious and frustrating, indeed miserable at times due to proliferation of malignant notions and logical fallacies. And even then, there was no point to condemning what wouldn’t exist for millennia.

While God realized that someone had to eventually repudiate religion in order for His people to finally be free of this plague, the endeavor had to be properly timed to combat the religiosity of the last two millennia. And unfortunately, it would be of limited utility since there would be relatively few who would capitalize on this monumental undertaking, with many more viciously condemning the result. And yet, without Babel, Twistianity, and God Damn Religion, the clutter obscures the truth such that it must be cleared for Yahowah’s testimony to been heard and seen.

Therefore, what was deadly before religion infected men’s mind, is now essential to cure them of it. Yada Yahowah and the Yahowah Vlog have become the Tree of Knowledge, without which, there is no way back to Dowd and the Tree of Lives. This is why Adam was told that prematurely devouring it would be destructive, leading to continual and unrelenting death. The Da'ath provided by Yada on behalf of Dowd become the fruit of life when he realized that our Messiah and King fulfilled Passover, opening the Door to Life.

Yada Yahowah reintroduces mankind to God's plan to enable the Beryth through the Migra'ey as prescribed in the Towrah and fulfilled as portrayed in the Naby'. Without this knowledge, there is no salvation, no reconciliation, and no eternal life. The Lesser Luminary would have to serve as a sign of the Mow'edym to reflect the Son's brilliance prior to his return.

It is only when the initial stories are juxtaposed that we unlock the six-thousand-year-old mystery of why death was the consequence of disregarding Yahowah's instructions pursuant to the Tree of Knowledge and why, once introduced, nothing more was said about the Tree of Lives at this time. This answer has been staring us in the face, revealing that the branches of these trees are so intertwined that they can only be understood when seen together. Knowledge leads to life when it is understood that Dowd made it possible for man to live forever by fulfilling Chag Matsah. Even then, after doing so, the Tree of Lives would remain unknown until the Choter | Stem revealed what the Tsemach | Branch had achieved.

Had this discovery gone unnoticed, had one not served the other, a day would have come when the Earth would have been swallowed in death and man would be no more. The 'ets would have to become chakmah and bynah by Yahowah such that the 'etsah could be parah | fruitful regarding the Da'ath of Dowd. In this way, the Qatan Ma'owr reveals why the Gadowl Ma'owr fulfilled the Mow'edym during the darkness to preclude death in a day.

Since the Mow'edym's methods of renewing life wouldn't be delivered for four millennia, and the means to extend life on Taruw'ah was six millennia away, the knowledge of these things was protected from being prematurely released by God and from being devoured by Satan and Chawah.

At the proper time, the Da'ath presented by Yada in Yada Yahowah has made it possible for man to appreciate what Dowd accomplished by fulfilling Chag Matsah. And with this Knowledge, the Shabuw'ah Qatsyr, Taruw'ah Laqat, purging of the Adulterous Woman representing the mortal remnant of Yisra'el, and Family Reunion for the King on Yowm Kipurym with the restoration of Gan 'eden on Sukah will all occur as planned. Otherwise, the human experiment would be for naught. As such, 'Ets Da'ath and its Choter | Stem of the Tree of Knowledge were worth protecting by Yahowah. And this explains why Satan and Chawah wanted to devour it, thereby depriving it of bearing its fruit in season.

Also, this narrative explains how, why, when, and where man's relationship with God was destroyed. This is something which must be understood if it is to be restored. For this to transpire, the lessons few have considered must be presented such that they are understood and the instruction becomes actionable. This is the reason Yada Yahowah was written as a Tree of Knowledge.

Equally insightful, like every story that we have returned to reconsider in the Towrah, God's presentation is also prophetic. This was not told for the benefit of those who experienced it, or for those who first heard it because they learned nothing from it. Realizing this, Yahowah was able to convey the events in the Garden in a manner that would resonate with us, at this time, when the situation is dire and the lesson is essential. As such, the narrative on the Choter was Yada's coming out party, the moment I went from anonymous to a named character in God's story ~ leading us back to the beginning so that we would be there in the end.

And so by featuring the Tree of Knowledge as the lead character in the opening and closing scenes of God's narrative of the events in the Garden, we are being invited to come full circle. It is from its roots, buried long ago, that a Choter | Sucker would emerge, bearing its fruit again in Yada Yahowah to reacquaint the world with Dowd as the Tree of Lives.

While I've made this point previously, it remains relevant to note that Yahowah communicated His instructions to Adam, but not to Chawah. She didn't even exist at the time. The implication is not only that Adam was conceived to learn from God but also that Yahowah seems to prefer communicating through men. So, it would be the man's responsibility to share Yahowah's instructions with women.

Immediately thereafter, we read something with haunting implications...

“Yahowah (Yahowah), Almighty (elohym*), said (amar* – He communicated (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)), ‘It is not good, productive, or beneficial (lo towb* – it is not correct or proper, favorable or enjoyable, desirable or agreeable, moral or right, pleasing or joyful) for the man, *Adam (*ha adam – mankind created in God's image with a neshamah | conscience), to exist (hayah – to become (qal infinitive)) alone by himself (la bad huw – apart and separated, withdrawn and isolated). I will engage and continually act on his behalf, producing for him (asah la huw – I will always work for him and fashion and prepare for him (qal imperfect first-person singular)) a helper and supporter (ezer – one who assists and serves, a positive influence who rescues, aids, renews, and provides benefits with the strength and power to accomplish these tasks) like (ka – similar to and in the manner of, even according to) his corresponding counterpart (*neged huw – describing that which is straightforward, right for him, open to him, close by in his immediate proximity).” (*Bare*syth* / Genesis 2:18)

The lessons here is sevenfold. First, this means that Yahowah created Adam to enjoy a relationship with him, but that it did not work out.

Second, this makes it obvious that woman was added to the equation to be with the man. God said that it was not good for man to be alone, but did not mention Himself.

Third, Adam was to work with God while Chawah was to work alongside Adam. So, quite literally, woman was conceived by God to help and support man.

Fourth, it was in man's image that woman was created, not God's. She would be his counterpart and correspond to him.

As profoundly important as these insights are to our appreciation of the Garden narrative, the fifth lesson is one few if any have considered. The only reason God would have made this statement is that His intent was to part company with man, leaving him. And for this to have been the case, man had to have been a disappointment to God.

The reasons for the disconnect are already obvious. Man was there to work but he showed no initiative. He made no contribution to life in the Garden. He was asked to listen and expected to respond appropriately, but he didn't. And so, he failed to demonstrate that he could be trusted.

The sixth lesson is that the purpose of man's ezer* | helper was to correct these problems. While the issues that separated man from God grew much worse before they got better, once we learned how to work together, decided to listen to God, and stood up after having fallen, thereby earning Yahowah's trust, the Garden could be reestablished so that we could try again.

Seventh, without woman, the man would have died alone, separated from God. So, for there to be a Covenant Family, the children born of woman would eventually become the sons and daughters of God. Therefore, the creation of woman became essential to developing the kind of family relationship Yahowah intended.

Therefore, it was time for a lesson in life...

“So then (wa), Yahowah (יהוה) – the correct pronunciation of YaHoWaH as guided by His towrah – teaching regarding His hayah – existence), Almighty (elohym*), He fashioned and formed (yatsar – He conceived and created, devised, planned, and prepared, thought about and then forged (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) out of the elements of the earth (*min ha adamah – from the feminine aspects of *Adam and out of the ground) every living animal (kol chayah – in recognition that all life comes from Yah) of the expansive environment (ha sadeh) in addition to every bird in the sky (*wa *eth kol owph ha shamaym) which He brought (*wa bow – He came (hifil imperfect third-person masculine singular)) to the man (el ha adam – toward and in the direction of the first man conceived in God’s image), in order to see (*la ra*ah* – to witness (qal infinitive construct)) what he would call them and how he would greet and welcome them (mah qara la huw). Therefore (wa), everything for the benefit of the relationship that (*kol asher) the man (*ha adam), approached and designated, called out to and encountered (qara la huw), that became the name and reputation (*shem huw) of that living soul (nepesh chay – of that conscious lifeform).” (*Bare*syth* / Genesis 2:19)

Here, the man is shown meeting with the lifeforms God had created. While I’m sure God would have preferred him to be more interactive in this situation, it nevertheless serves to define Yahowah’s purpose in creating life. In this case, He not only took the time to share His creative genius with the man, by memorializing it, He made certain we would be aware of this special moment in time.

As it would transpire, this is not only the lone interaction between man and God, it may also be relevant that He is not depicted doing this with the woman. Make of that what you will.

You’ll note that every lifeform was said to have had a soul. However, just because all animals have a nepesh, with it being a feminine noun, does not turn males into females. In my earlier writings, I had made way too much of this distinction, especially with the ruwach. And while I went nowhere near the absurdity that Yahowah was a hermaphrodite with two personas, one father, the other mother, or that the maternal manifestation of God’s nature had a voice, I was wrong in over extrapolating, which has led to what I've humorously called a "Mommy-ectomy" of the text.

Just as this experience with the animals was conceived by Yahowah as a learning experience for Adam, such is the nature of the Towrah and Naby^{ym} for me. For example, I have often considered God's narrative regarding the trees in the Garden and Chawah's response, devoting an entire Family Hour Yahowah Vlog to it not long ago. And I have analyzed every nuance of Yahowah's introduction of the Choter through Yasha^{yah} on a score of occasions. And while I recognized that Da^{ath}, representing the sixth of the spiritual attributes was the name of the Tree of Knowledge, I did not notice that the fourth gift of the ruwach to the Choter, Etsah, was to adroitly identify him with the ets | Tree in the Garden.

At issue here is perhaps the most important lesson of all ~ the more shamar | observant we become, the more we yada^e | know. The more we yada^e, the more we come to binah | understand by chakmah | thinking intelligently. Eventually, after decades of study, we can parah | produce the fruit offered by the ets Da^{ath} | Tree of Knowledge. This is the purpose of the Choter, making his Nes | Sign which is Yada Yahowah.

This is to say, Yahowah has given us what we need to process to know and understand. But that process often requires a lifetime of work. It is not a data dump. Just as we have witnessed here in the Garden, we are not given chakmah but, are instead, afforded the means to it.

This is how it will be forevermore, making eternity interesting and productive for both God and man. And that means, we must constantly discover new things, learn as a result, refine our conclusions based upon the evidence, correct our mistakes, and build upon all that which is verifiable and true. It is how we grow. And without growth, neither we nor God can be infinite ~ or interesting.

Returning to my misappropriation, whereby I pushed the envelope of Hebrew grammar too far regarding the ruwach, my projection of femininity is germane to this story. It appeared necessary to explain something Dowd later resolved when he became the Tree of Lives. So, in this case, I learned from our King.

At issue was the mechanism behind Matsah, which is the Mow^oed when the fungus of yeast is removed from our souls, and my confusion over why we were asked to approach the isheh*, which is the feminine rendering of fire, during the Miqra^{*}. Since there was a prophetic reference to the ruwach as a Garment of Light, I thought perhaps that God resolved the issue of our guilt by covering us with it, projecting this into the symbolism of the fire.

However, Matsah is not about the addition of something but, instead, the removal of the contamination of religious and political guilt. So, the moment I came to realize that Dowd's basar | body fulfilled Pesach, opening the Door to Life, and that his nepesh | soul carried our guilt away, depositing it in the darkness of She^{*}owl on Matsah, never to be seen again, my conjecture regarding the Spirit's Garment of Light became unnecessary clutter.

At the same time, I also came to realize that I had been wrong regarding the ruwach departing from Dowd during his fulfillment of Pesach, Matsah, and Bikuwrym. This is because Yahowah told us explicitly that the ruwach would never separate from him. And, of course, that means the ruwach protected Dowd's nepesh in She^{*}owl and facilitated his release.

But that's not the end of what can be deduced from this because it leads to another relevant assessment. Since the ruwach entered She^{*}owl, the place of separation from God, the spirit cannot be Yahowah but, is instead, a projected manifestation of His influence. This is why the Spirit of Yahowah can be offered to a man, as is the case today with the Choter, without that man becoming God. The ruwach, as the depiction in Yasha^{*}yah 11 explains, contributes to the intellect, understanding, counsel, courage, and knowledge of this man so that he more fully appreciates all Yahowah has to offer. The Spirit is, therefore, the most powerful and capable tool in the universe.

As for the isheh* | fire during the Mow'edym, there was a far better interpretation, providing a lesson for us all. Fire transforms dead and dying organic matter into light and radiant energy. This is symbolic of the superior vessel Yahowah intends for our souls so that we can discard the limiting and decaying nature of our physical bodies and eventually leave Eden and Earth to explore the universe with Him. When our nepesh is encapsulated in radiant energy and light, we are not only perfected and immortal, we are enabled, empowered, and enriched by such a great magnitude, in science, this transformation is measured in the square of the speed of light.

This progression from a thoughtful interpretation to a vastly superior comprehension of Yahowah's methodology comes with observation and contemplation, building over the decades. And the beauty of this process is that it becomes exponential. The more we know and understand, the better equipped we are to deduce a myriad of previously unseen insights and grow in our comprehension of God.

After having written 35 books comprised of uniquely amplified translations of the oldest extant sources, with the words scrubbed of man's religious corruptions, I had come to learn more about Yahowah than anyone since the last of the prophets twenty-five centuries ago. There were thousands of profound and unheralded insights to share, with the proper pronunciation of Yahowah's name and the recognition of His Son's achievements foremost among them. But that is when it became especially interesting because now I was in a position to educate Yahuwdym and Gowym and invite both to return to the Garden.

It was only after I had rewritten the entire library, some volumes a dozen times, and finally returned to Prophet of Doom, updating it as God Damn Religion, that Yahowah announced that the marginal utility of newer additions of the Yada Yahowah library would be less valuable than what we would achieve with the efficacy of a vlog. And so, God informed His Choter that it was time to prioritize speaking over writing and fulfill all He had written of ha Nakry | the Observant Foreigner. He took the man who had never, himself, posted so much as a single word online and transformed him into a vlogger, turning our home into a studio. And now, we are learning and sharing in real time, with contemplation and communication occurring simultaneously.

We are now learning at such a prodigious pace, even if my publisher and webmaster hadn't gone rogue along with the psychotic media manager, the recent tsunami of understanding has become so prolific, there just isn't enough time remaining to keep the library current. So, recognizing that Yada Yahowah has long been more than sufficient to lead His people Home, the better use of this opportunity was to share what we were discovering in real time.

Therefore, the Yahowah Vlog has become the literal embodiment of the prophecies pursuant to the Qatan Ma^{}owr, ^{}Ets Da^{}ath, and Nakry. We will vociferously share all that time and energy allow between now and the Shabuw^{}ah Harvest, leaving a vast array of spoken and written words to guide Yisra^{}el through the first half of the Time of Trouble. And while we are away, Yahowah will, as His first order of business, explain what I may have missed and all that needs to be corrected, and we'll do so collaboratively in the timeless realm of Shamaym. When we return, you can expect the best God has to offer from Yada and ^{}ElYah, all reinforced in the text and video from Yada Yahowah and the Yahowah Vlog He will scroll in the sky over our heads.

In conclusion, so while I have a nepesh | soul and have been afforded Yahowah's seven ruwach | spirits, that does not make me a mother. Similarly, the Choter is a man, and yet the attributes he is afforded are all scribed in the feminine form, as was ^{}ets as ^{}etsah, because they are being delivered by the ruwach. And of course, while many of the titles designated to describe Yada's collaboration with Yahowah are masculine, some are also feminine. Indeed, Obed Edom is symbolically presented as the Adamah Parah as his mission migrates from positioning the Ark of the Covenant for Dowd's return to serving as the sacrifice to prepare his people for his arrival. Yada, as the Bull, doesn't become a Heifer any more than a father is a mother.

Moving on, it's a subtle thing, but this initial introduction to *qara | to invite, to meet, to read, and to recite, which is the root of *Miqra, is in connection with Yahowah and man discussing the nature of life...

“Adam (*ha adam – the man) summoned and met with, greeting (*qara – invited and approached, proclaimed and announced, called out to and welcomed) by name (shem – by proper designation and reputation) all of the animals (la kol ha bahemah), the birds of the sky (*la owph ha shamaym), and every conscious lifeform (wa la kol chayah nepesh) of the expansive environment (ha sadeh – of the breadth of the land conducive to life). But (wa) there was not found (*lo *matsa – there was not discovered, encountered, or attained) for the man, *Adam (*la adam), a helper and supporter (ezer* – one who could assist and serve, a positive influence who could rescue, aid, renew, and benefit with the strength and power to accomplish these tasks) similar to and right for him (*ka neged huw – like him and corresponding to him who was straightforward and correct for him and open to him and receptive to him).” (*Bare*syth* / Genesis 2:20)

Other animals were good, but they were not particularly helpful or supportive because they were not sufficiently similar to man. Therefore, God created woman to be right for him, serving as his counterpart. We are most effective and productive when we work together ~ and life is more enjoyable.

This known, we are about to sail into uncharted waters. The verb Yahowah selected to present the conception and arrival of a woman from man is surprising. Naphal means “to fall, to go from a higher position to a lower one.” It can also convey “becoming inferior through failure and neglect.” And particularly insightful in this regard, the victims of the flood were Naphylym – which is a derivative of this verb. They were the reason God announced that He had regretted creating man.

So, this is not an auspicious occasion for God or for man. What we have perceived as augmentative with the addition of woman was actually announcing the fall of man. He was being degraded, not while he slept, but because he had been so listless. Man’s decline was as a result of Adam being tardemah | lethargic and apathetic, showing signs of indifference and dullness. He appears to have shirked the work God intended, failing to be diligent. And isn’t this the story of man?

“So (wa), Yahowah (Yahowah), Almighty (*elohym), He caused the fall (naphal – He initiated the lowering to an inferior position over time (hifil imperfect third-person masculine singular)) of man (*al ha *adam) for being somewhat lethargic and comatose due to a lack of work and diligence (tardemah – to the point of lassitude and apathy; from radam – being unaware and unconscious).

He slept, inert and inactive (yashen – he was unmotivated and sedentary (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)). So He grasped hold of (wa laqach – so He selected and took (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) one (echad) of his ribs, symbolic of this lameness, from his side (min tsela^o huw^{} – his bones and cartilage from around the heart and lungs; from tsala^o – to limp and be lame) and He sutured up to isolate (sagar – He closed by shutting and separating) the place beneath and succeeding it (thachath hy^{*} – under it and instead of it, replacing it in the ordinary succession of time) with flesh (basar – with a human herald, a suitable body to convey the good and welcoming news).” (Bare^osyth / Genesis 2:21)

I can’t recall ever reading something this surprising. Yahowah has plainly stated that He caused the fall of man. He even announced the reason and possibly, even the resolution.

I realize that Yahowah has covered considerable territory since introducing us to the concept of a nepesh | soul, and that the word was not mentioned here, but its inference lingers nonetheless. Our nepesh, as our “consciousness,” depicts a living organism’s ability to observe and respond to stimuli in the surrounding environment. It is the essence of life and it is what was being anesthetized. Man had not been particularly aware or responsive which made him apathetic. This was not appealing to God or compatible with our design.

The implications are profound because this astutely depicts the nature of humanity throughout the ages and unto the present moment. The preponderance of people have been and remain appreciably degraded, tragically unaware, and lacking initiative due to the neglect of our neshamah | conscience. This is the reason religion and politics have prevailed in controlling the masses, and it is why it’s now or never for the restoration of the Tree of Knowledge. We have reached a point in time when the majority have lost the will and ability to think. And the substitute is artificial intelligence.

Beyond this realization suggesting that most humans are neither worth saving nor even capable of being redeemed, with the inclusion of the hifil stem and imperfect conjugation modifying man’s naphal | descent, Yahowah is admitting that He had a hand in the result. He must have seen or experienced something in Adam that caused Him to realize that as an animal within a protected environment, he would never have developed the initiative or wherewithal to grow and be anything more than a pet – just a better version of the other lifeforms. He would need to stub his toes so to speak, to develop character from overcoming challenges, learning by necessity, even dying to appreciate the value of life.

The realization that God caused the fall of man by His own admission, not only upends all we have been led to believe, but it also prompts some initiative in us if we are to appreciate why this would be so. And I think that the answer is evident in this narrative. Yahowah was bored. Adam offered nothing of interest. He had no life experiences, no comparative way to even value the gift of life. He had learned very little and had achieved nothing. He had so little character that when tempted by Chawah, he showed no resistance, said nothing, and just followed along.

As a pet in a gilded cage, Adam was insufficiently interesting to be entertaining. It is as if we were looking at a goldfish swimming around in a bowl, somehow expecting something to change, like circling in the opposite direction or trying to jump out. After a few days, weeks, months, and years of nothing but an occasional bubble, it got old. And without challenges, obstacles and predators to overcome, there was nothing in that bowl that would lead to another or better result.

Coddled animals are dependent on the one caring for them. They do not exercise their muscles or brains. They accomplish and contribute nothing. There have been countless studies proving these conclusions and copious examples played out among those spoiled by their parents or an entitlement society. We must work and learn to grow and then stand once we have fallen to develop character. It is the only way to progress and contribute.

It is also obvious that the encounter with the other animals did not go well. God was not impressed. And so He created the woman to inspire something better ~ men and women who would think and work together to survive. We would cultivate the land, build homes, conceive children, and care for them. We would learn to stand by having fallen, only to get back up and try again. Sure, most men would be bad, far worse than useless, but there would eventually be some worth the investment of time.

Six thousand years later, there might be six thousand qualified individuals. But even if there were only six, that would still be much better than this one.

Clearly, Yahowah didn't want a pet; He wanted an explorer, a companion who would be capable of challenging Him, questioning Him, negotiating with Him, and contributing to the relationship with Him by having overcome life's challenges by learning and growing. Therefore, God caused the fall of man so that one day, men would rise, wiser and better equipped for the ordeal.

And perhaps this prepares us to better understand the nature of the ets* | tree. Remember, it wasn't all that long ago that we discovered that it is through etseb* | hard work, a struggle that is particularly difficult and challenging, requiring considerable effort, even as the process can be mentally anguishing at times that the ets* becomes parah | productive, and its fruit desirable.

We also found that as an asab* | the ets Da*ath* would work for and serve another, doing the job his sovereign and superior requested. This is as the ets Da*ath* as the Choter | Stem serves not only Yahowah and mankind, but in particular, one man, the one represented by the ets Chayym* ~ Dowd. This appears to be the process and result God intended. We would become interesting by learning and applying that which captures our imagination.

In our desire to properly process the possibilities, please ponder this interpretation of the preceding: “So (wa), Yahowah (Yahowah), Almighty (*elohym), He caused the fall (naphal) of man (*al ha *adam) for being somewhat lethargic due to a lack of work and diligence (tardemah). He slept, inert and inactive, unmotivated and sedentary (yashen), and so He grasped hold of (wa laqach) one (echad) of his ribs, symbolic of that which was limp and lame, from his side (min tsela huw*). He sutured up and isolated (sagar) the place beneath and succeeding it, even replacing it over time (thachath hy*) with a Basar | Human Herald (basar).” (*Bare*syth* / Genesis 2:21) That's an eye-opener to be sure.

Adam was lethargic, lacking the desire for diligence. It is a fact that should have become evident because after Yahowah told us that man's purpose would be to work in the Garden with Him, we are never told of anything Adam actually did to improve his situation or to make life interesting and productive.

And perhaps, this is foreshadowing the arrival of the Basar | Herald as the ets Da'ath. Someone would have to herald Dowd's accomplishment for man to return to the Garden and return to the Tree of Lives. At this point, I have already invested twenty-four years of twelve-hour days developing Yada Yahowah. Sure, it has been rewarding, but it has also been more challenging than most can comprehend. Imagine the effort required to invent an entirely new and better way to present God's testimony, then diligently pursuing this objective by scrubbing every word of the diacritical markings added thousands of years later by the Masoretes, while exploring every conceivable connotation derived from the oldest extant resources, and then parlay that result into a wealth of relevant commentary, explanations, and insights, like the one I've just shared. Days became weeks, weeks months, months years, and years decades without ever relenting.

Individually, then collectively, we would become interesting to Yahowah one word and day at a time. It was possible, and God recognized it when He anesthetized man to conceive woman and launch the greatest experiment in universal history.

And to think, without the utter foolology of those pretending to speak of a spirit mother while disparaging Yada Yahowah, it is unlikely that we would have returned to the Garden in pursuit of these lessons, leaving us bereft of some of the most relevant insights we have yet deduced. Not only did they have to fall away for me to emerge from the ordeal of the never-ending updates within the books and come alive on social media, this is what caused comprehension and communication to coalesce into a timely and unified stream of consciousness at precisely the right moment.

The first man was apparently lazy, far too inactive and sedentary for Yah's liking. Making this evident, the tsela^o | rib he removed from Adam is from tsala^o and means "limp and lame." Then as God sutured him up, in place of the that which had been developmentally disabled, Yahowah replaced this with a Basar | Human Herald. God wasn't giving up; He was rebooting the system. The game was not over; we were just beginning anew.

"Then (wa), Yahowah (Yahowah), as God (*elohym), He constructed, building a family on behalf of the son (banah – He built and made for the purpose of the family and procreation, establishing also for restoration (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) with the rib (*eth ha tsela^o – with the bones and cartilage from around the heart and lungs; from tsala^o – to limp and be lame) which (*asher) He had taken (laqach – He had selected and grasped (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) from (min) the man (ha *adam), a woman (la ishah – female). And (wa) He brought her with unfolding implications over time (bow hy*) to (*el) the man, *Adam (*adam)." (Bare^osyth / Genesis 2:22)

This woman was not only made for man; she was part of him. This means that it is likely that she came with a neshamah | conscience. If so, this would have made her worth getting to know. She would have had the potential to be of value.

Yahowah could have selected an existing woman for *Adam among the thousands scurrying about outside of the Garden of *Eden, but He did not do so for obvious reasons. Without a neshamah | conscience, such a woman would have been vastly inferior to *Adam – just as were all of the other animals. They would have had nothing to talk about or accomplish together. Moreover, as an outsider, she would have brought the world's problems into the Garden which would have been inappropriate, destroying *Eden's purpose.

Apparently, Adam understood the intent and appreciated God's gift...

"Then, the man (wa ha *adam), said (*amar), 'This (zo*th) is the way to conduct one's life (la pa^aam – the pattern of behavior to be followed, the motivation to push forward, the persistent heartbeat), its essential nature (etsem* – the skeleton upon which human life hangs, the substance and essence of an upright life) out of (min) my essence (etsem ^aany* – my bones and essential human nature), a living being able to communicate intelligently (basar – living tissue and flesh, a human herald filled with words waiting to be spoken) for my desire to share positive thoughts as a herald for humanity (min basar ^aany – out of my flesh, body, and human nature and for the purpose of me communicating the message such that the good news is announced and received).

For this reason (la z^ooth – concerning this discussion), she shall be greeted, welcomed, and called (qara^a – she will be invited and summoned, designated and known as) woman (ishah* – a female) because (ky) out of (min) man (iysh* – a masculine individual) she was taken (laqach z^ooth – this was obtained, selected, and received).” (Bare^asyth / Genesis 2:23)

Best gift, ever ~ or so she would have been if he had read and shared the Operator's Manual.

The best way for us to conduct our lives is by living together. Our essential nature was specifically designed for this purpose. This is because we were conceived to model the Covenant by conceiving children in a loving and supporting home, helping our children develop character, learn, and grow such that they can live productive and fulfilling lives.

And speaking of our function and highest calling, I'm drawn to the dual inclusions of basar | herald. While basar is typically rendered as “flesh,” the verbal root, also spelled basar, speaks a different story – “to convey a message, presenting what people need to know so that they are prepared for what's coming.” This is to say, we should eagerly trumpet Yahowah's message, proclaiming everything He wants men to know. This is particularly so as we qara^a | invite all who will listen to meet with God by reading and reciting His word.

Details can be intriguing. Previously when speaking of creating men and women, Yahowah chose zakar | man to remember and naqebah | female to perforate and bore. This time, woman is presented by Adam using the more common ishah* which is the feminine of iysh* | man. In other words, God described her differently than did man.

Interjecting again and trying to read between the lines on how we came to this place, God created woman because it wasn't good for man to be alone. And as previously stated, the only way that man would have been alone in the Garden is if God gave up on him and stopped peering into the fishbowl, expecting a different result. With one thing leading to another, Chawah was created so that after the fall, there would be a way to get back up.

This next statement affirms everything we have just deduced. Yahowah had been as a Father to Adam, but now it was time for the lethargic son to move out of the house and accomplish something on his own. And since He had conceived the first woman for this purpose, they would reproduce, conceiving children, with the woman engaged as a mother. And that is precisely why that has led to this...

“Accordingly, therefore (al ken* – so based on this it is also right that) man (iysh* – an individual male) shall leave (azab* – abandon and reject, desert and forsake, be absent from and release) his father (*eth *ab huw) and his mother (*wa *eth *em huw) and engage, becoming close (wa dabaq – join and be united in close association) with his woman (*ba *ishah huw – with his female partner and companion). And they shall exist as (wa hayah – they will become) a unified (echad* – a singular unity and one) declaration regarding heralding the pronouncements of life (la basar – uplifting declaration concerning living in the flesh).” (*Bare*syth* / Genesis 2:24)

And so it would be, even with the first family. The fracture would eventually heal with time and children. But alas, the journey would not be easy. From Adam and Chawah came Qayn

/ Cain and Hebel / Able, and ever more azab*. Men and women would not do well on their own recognizance. And yet, there would be a pronouncement worth heralding at the end. We achieve the best results when we are of like mind and purpose regarding basar | heralding the essential pronouncements of life while in the flesh.

This also sheds additional light on the 5th Instruction etched in stone. It instructs us to leave, even reject, our father and mother, and forsaking them would hardly be a way of honoring them. And, therefore, there must be another father and mother who fit that bill ~ and so there are with Abraham and Sarah leading us back home through the Covenant. And speaking of the Beryth, this is indicative of the 1st condition, where we are asked to walk away from the family of man and unto the Family of God. It is why Abraham and Sarah left Babel.

As we approach the culmination of life as it has transpired outside of the Garden, and near the time we are invited to return to Eden, I'm reminded of the essential role the Basar | Herald will play when determining who will be allowed back in. This additional iteration of basar is indicative of the fact that the most recent attacks launched at the Basar and Yada Yahowah are by the cult whose Spirit Mom doesn't much like the Choter. Through her cult, she has voiced her opposition to nudity. This is in response to me pointing out the obvious. Since we are being invited back into the Garden, we should be comfortable being completely exposed to Yahowah. I know so because in the Gan, we wore little more than a smile. Unlike the religious and conspiratorial, we should have nothing to hide from God. So initially, Adam and Chawah were comfortable being exposed in His presence. But not so apparently with the Mother Goddesses or her devotees.

mistaken, or the least bit stressed over it).” (Bare^osyth / In the Beginning / Genesis 2:25)

Unfortunately for mankind, our innocence wouldn’t last. We would shame ourselves, a practice we have refined over time. So, as you will note, with azab* | abandonment, came trouble.

But let’s hold on to azab* a moment longer before we press on. It’s primary meaning, which is to abandon, forsake, reject, to be absent. So, if I’m reading this correctly, I’d like to share an alternative point of view, one not only prompted by the full implications of azab*, but also cognizant that Adam and Chawah didn’t have a father or mother who they could reject for having abandoned them. However, someone far more important to God’s story did ~ Dowd. And when he was exposed for having killed a man to steal his wife, he so disappointed Yahowah that he needed someone to help him accept responsibility and right the wrong that would have otherwise precluded him from fulfilling his destiny.

So, what if this otherwise incongruent statement is prophetic? What if it is foreshadowing the transformative message of the concluding Word Picture in Mashal 31? Is Yahowah revealing that He will provide His Son with the mother he never knew in life to guide him while still in the flesh as human? If so, reconsider this narrative from that perspective...

“So (wa), Yahowah (Yahowah), Almighty (elohym*), He caused the fall (naphal) of man (al ha adam) for being somewhat lethargic due to a lack of work and diligence (tardemah). He slept, inert and inactive, unmotivated and sedentary (yashen). And so, He grasped hold of (wa laqach) one (echad*) of his ribs, symbolic of that which was limp and lame, from his side (*min tsela^o huw). He sutured up and isolated (sagar) the place beneath and succeeding it, even replacing it over time (*thachath hy) with a Basar | Human Herald (basar). (Bare^osyth / Genesis 2:21)

Yahowah (Yahowah), as God (*elohym), He constructed, building a family on behalf of the son (banah) with the rib, removing what was limp and lame (eth ha tsela) which (*asher) He had taken (laqach) from (min) the man (ha *adam), a woman (la *ishah). And (wa) He brought her with unfolding implications over time (bow*hy*) to (*el) the man (*adam). (Bare*syth 2:22)

Then, the man (wa ha *adam), said (*amar), ‘This (zo*th) is the way to conduct one’s life, the pattern of behavior to be followed and the motivation to push forward (la pa*am). It is the essential nature and substance of an upright life (*etsem). Out of (min) my essence and humanity (*etsem *any), a living person able to communicate intelligently, an individual with whom to talk in the flesh (basar) for my desire to share positive thoughts as a herald while human (min basar *any).

For this reason (la z*oth), she shall be welcomed and called, designated and known as (qara*) the woman (*ishah) because indeed (ky), for (min) man (*iysh) she was selected and obtained (laqach z*oth). (Bare*syth 2:23)

Accordingly, therefore (*al ken) a man, an individual male (*iysh), he will leave, rejecting and forsaking for having been absent from and abandoned by (*azab) his father (eth ab huw) and his mother (wa *eth em huw) and then engage, becoming close by being joined together with (wa dabaq) with his woman (ba ishah huw). And they shall exist as and become (wa hayah) a unified (*echad) declaration regarding heralding the pronouncements of life (la basar). (Bare*syth / Genesis 2:24)

And the two (wa shanaym), this man (ha *adam) and his woman (wa ishah huw), they were (hayah hem) completely exposed without barriers between them (arowm), and they were no longer wrong, disapproved, or mistaken (lo bowsh).” (Bare*syth / In the Beginning / Genesis 2:25)

Did I say, trouble? Enter the Serpent...

“The spellbinding serpent (wa ha nachash – so then the sorcerous snake, this venomous viper, the poisonous cold-blooded reptile, this tempting and toxic creature; from nachash – the one who enchants and captivates, the one who practices divination, magic, and sorcery, who indulges in fortune-telling, invoking supernatural knowledge and power) was at the time (hayah – existed as (qal perfect third-person masculine singular)) cunning and clever, (aruwm* – shrewd and subtle while appearing sensible, crafty and obscuring, elusive and ambiguous with his counsel, highly skilled at being mischievous, abusive, and treacherous, elusive in his counsel and ambiguous when obscuring the truth), more so than (min – distinguished in this way from) any other (kol – all) lifeform (chayah – living being, animal, wild beast, or supernatural creature) relative to (asher* – in relation to) the broad and open way (sadeh – the cultivated environment or great expanse of land [outside the Garden]) that Yahowah YaHoWaH), as God (elohym* – God), He had deployed (asah* – He had conceived or created, He had enabled or engaged (qal perfect third-person masculine singular)).” (Bare^osyth / Genesis 3:1 in part)

The nachash | spellbinding serpent representing ha Satan | the Adversary was merely symbolic. He is an amoral and immortal spiritual being. His outward appearance on this occasion would have been brilliant, radiant, and luminous. And he would have been known to Adam and Chawah because, as we discover in Ezekiel, Satan had been one of the Karuwbym positioned on the wall guarding Eden*.

I am pleased to see that Yahowah limited the period of time in which ha Satan would be particularly clever by using the perfect conjugation. I say this because the Devil’s most recent incarnation as Donald Trump is particularly pathetic. And prior to that, Satan was horrific in his portrayal of God in the Quran, which is arguably the worst book ever written.

Also telling and typically missed, it is evident that Yahowah deployed Satan at this time, using him. The meaning of asah* | engaged and acted is clear in this regard. Therefore, Satan was programmed to do as he has done, which has been to misquote God's instructions to elicit an adversarial response. Yahowah did far more than allow this to occur because the verb indicated that He facilitated, and may have even scripted, this encounter. In other words, this is how God caused the fall of man.

Therefore, once again we find affirmation that God had grown weary of the relationship between Himself and Adam in Eden. This means that after He gave up on Adam, given the choice to be with Chawah, man chose to be with his counterpart rather than with God. Therefore, the disappointment was mutual. And this having been the case, the breach in their relationship would provide a fresh canvas to paint the portrait God ultimately wanted to portray. Given time, His Beryth, Towrah, and Miqra^ey coupled with some men and women more to His liking, would lead many back into a position where only two had been previously. They would be afforded the opportunity to be better educated, more experienced, and far more interesting.

With even more evidence before us, we can now be assured that Yahowah wanted man to grow up and the only way for that to occur was to move out. And as we shall see, God was right. There was no substance to this man. Frankly, as we progress in the story, we find that Adam was a nitwit, a man without character or backbone. When offered what he knew was wrong, he took it without a word of protest. Then given the opportunity to accept responsibility, he passed the buck, blaming both the woman and God for his ineptitude. But that's getting ahead of God's story. And fortunately, now that the Tree of Knowledge has been restored in Yada Yahowah and that we have experienced the good and bad of personal interactions over the past six millennia, we are becoming more interesting conversationalists and enjoyable explorers, by having first been good listeners and willing workers.

Per God's direction, Satan went after the woman such that she would corrupt her man. Ha Satan began with a very modest embellishment of God's testimony, establishing credibility by commingling much that was true with a tiny lie. It was the same formula he would use to advance religious, political, and conspiratorial deceptions, with the lies simply growing bigger over time.

“Then, he said to (*wa *amar el – so he spoke, verbally addressing) the woman (ishah* – the female), ‘So what if it were true that (ap ky* – beyond all of this, even more than this, in contrast on the other hand, nevertheless upon the condition therefore that it was out of anger, furthermore demonstrating resentment and arrogance, with an inappropriate self-appraisal while emphasizing that it was indeed accurate that there was an exception) God (elohym* – the Almighty) said (amar* – stated), “You should not make a habit of eating (lo akal – you should not continually consume food, consistently being nourished by (qal imperfect – addressing actual ongoing, continuous, and habitual consumption)) from (min – part of) any tree (*kol ets) of ha Gan | the Sheltered Garden (ha gan – the cultivated and lush environment which is protected and conducive to life).”?’” (*Bare*syth* / In the Beginning / Genesis 3:1)

While it sounds audacious to suggest that it does not matter what God actually said, isn't that what is required for there to be a Talmud, New Testament, and Quran since they each go off on their own tangents irrespective of God's guidance? And if that were not bad enough, the religious, like Satan, have felt at liberty to alter God's instructions to fit their agenda. Apart from this tactic, there would be no religious texts.

It's worth noting here that in writing the first fourteen books of the Christian New Testament, Paul never once quoted anything from the Towrah or Prophets accurately. And in the Quran, nothing approaches reality, with ever Talmud story twisted almost beyond comprehension.

In this case, God had provided the appropriate guidance. Remember...“Yahowah (YaHoWaH), Almighty (*elohym), He provided direction (tsawah) concerning (*al) the man (ha *adam), saying (la *amar), ‘From (min) every (kol) tree (*esh) of the Garden (ha gan) you can continually and actually eat (*akal *akal).’” (Bare*syth 2:16)

There was only one tree that God said that Adam should not habitually consume due to the consequence. It was premature for man to know such things ~ especially the kind of things I’d later refute in Babel, Twistianity, and God Damn Religion. Nevertheless, Satan did what he inspired Paul and Muhammad to do when creating the New Testament and Quran – he offered a modification of God’s testimony such that it sounded plausible to the unthinking.

Keep in mind, there were no restrictions placed on Adam. He could eat whatever he desired and saw fit. There were no constraints, just beneficial results and negative consequences in the options before him. And this was not an “if you make one mistake, I’m going to kill you” scenario. “akal* – eating” was spoken in the imperfect which describes ongoing and habitual behaviors. This was parental advice, not a lord’s command.

Nevertheless, Chawah took the bait...

“The woman (wa *ishah – the female individual) said (*amar) to (*el) this tempting and toxic creature (wa ha nachash – the sorcerous snake, this venomous viper, the spellbinding serpent; from nachash – the one who enchants and captivates regarding the Divine), ‘From (min) the fruit (pery – the harvest, result, productivity, and offspring) of the tree (*ets) of the Garden (ha gan) we can eat (*akal). (Bare*syth 3:2) But (wa) from the fruit (min pery – out of the harvest, result, productivity, and offspring) of ha *Ets | the Tree (ha *Ets) which, for the benefit of the relationship, is in the center

(asher ba ha tawek* – to show the way to get the most out of life is within the midst and middle) of ha Gan | the Sheltered Garden (ha gan), God (elohym*) said (amar*), “You should not actually make a habit of eating from him (lo *akal min huw – you should not devour and destroy that which pertains to him).

In addition (wa), you should not make contact with it or strike him (lo naga* ba huw* – you (plural) should not habitually touch it, abuse him, or damage it (qal imperfect)) lest (pen – or otherwise) you will to die (muwth – you will cease to exist in time as a result of my choice (qal imperfect paragogic nun (which is akin to the cohortative))).”” (*Bare*syth* / Genesis 3:3)

As I have long suspected, there are many reasons that all of the fuss and focus has been on *ha *ets Da*ath* | the Tree of Knowledge rather than the Tree of Lives. Since they were in harmony with Yahowah’s instructions prior to Chawah’s decision to elevate her status in a manner inconsistent with God’s guidance, the Tree of Lives was of no interest to them because they were already living without concern of dying. It wouldn’t be until we were estranged from God that we would need access to the Knowledge of Right and Wrong to locate the Tree of Lives to resolve the consequence of our impending deaths.

Therefore, what has become essential, was then only a tempting curiosity. In their present state, they would gain nothing but aggravation to be acquainted with all of the ways to irritate God and disassociate from Him. But a time would come when it would be essential to recognize what was separating us from Yahowah so that we could identify and reject it and then pursue the knowledge needed to return.

Also worth reemphasizing, there is a direct and irrefutable correlation between Dowd and the Tree of Lives as a result of him opening the Door to Life on Passover. Similarly, Yada’s Yada Yahowah has become the Tree of Knowledge, directing a lost world back to Father and Son, to the Beryth and Miqra^{ey}. This is yet another affirmation of the roles of the Greater and Lesser Luminaries serving as signs of the Mow^{edym} | Restoring Witnesses to the Eternal Testimony. And in this case, Satan and Chawah wanted to preempt the process by prematurely possessing the power of knowledge.

As noted previously, there is no indication that Chawah had ever engaged in a conversation with God or received any instruction from Him, and yet, she is shown misrepresenting what the man had told her regarding Yahowah's guidance. This is the first indication of why Yahowah infused His 2nd Statement on avoiding the promotion of false gods and goddesses with lo^{} Chawah*. Chawah was about to make her preferences known – and they were not good.

Having observed Chawah, Satan knew that she wanted to be more than this man's helper. So, he enticed her, saying that she could do whatever she wanted without being subject to God's warning or the man's influence.

“So (wa – then), ha Nachash | the Venomous Serpent (ha nachash – this sorcerous snake and spellbinding creature, the one who enchants and captivates), he replied with ongoing implications (amar* – he said, proclaiming something that would play out over time (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) to (el*) the woman (*ha ishah), ‘You all as mankind, absolutely will not die (lo^{} muwth muwth* – you, representing humankind (masculine plural) will not actually come to embody death, you all will not be killed (qal infinitive – the negation of the graphic and genuine depiction of dying over time and qal imperfect paragogic nun second-person masculine plural – depicting the ongoing implications of death for))’” (Bare^{syth} / Genesis 3:4)

Satan was indeed clever. Neither the man nor the woman would die on this day, nor would all mankind die on any day. So, what he said, while actually true, was totally misleading.

Out understanding of the Serpent's ploy is advanced by the realization that, by using the imperfect conjugation, his declaration would play out over time, and was not, therefore, limited to any one day, much less this day. Ha Nachash was addressing the woman and yet he phrased muwth | death such that it was addressing mankind because it was conveyed in the second-person masculine plural ~ as in humankind.

Therefore, in this, the second of three statements from the Adversary, he deployed a strategy that he would use to make religions believable. He negated what God said, by offering a credible alternative, effectively counterfeiting Yahowah's instructions by making a minor alteration.

In like fashion, Paul, having been demon possessed, made Jesus appear believable because there is a God who inspired His prophets to speak of His Son, His Chosen One and Messiah, who would fulfill Passover by being crucified in 33 CE and then return as King. And while Satan and Paul knew that Yahowah was addressing Dowd, the counterfeit was sufficiently clever to fool billions of unsuspecting souls.

As for believing that they will never die, this is the mantra proclaimed by the religious. They believe and overtly protest that they can do and say whatever they want without consequence. Even with the Mother Goddesses, when I warn them that their perversions of Yahowah's name and testimony while impersonating and then insulting me will result in their demise, they scream, "No one has the right to tell us that we are going to die." And yet, according to Yahowah, estrangement and death is the most favorable option left to them. But no matter how jaundiced the agenda, no matter how self-aggrandizing or embittered the motives, the cultists believe their lies.

Knowing that she craved more, to write herself into the story, to be a star...to be a goddess...this is how Satan pushed Chawah's buttons. He would do the same, also at God's insistence, to the woman floundering in her own delusions today...

"Because surely by contrast (ky), God (elohym* – the Almighty (noun masculine, inclusive, and absolute)), He is fully cognizant and totally familiar with Yada, knowing (yada^o – He is aware of and recognizes Yada such that He understands (qal (genuinely) participle (a verbal adjective functioning as an active noun) absolute (unbound) masculine singular)) that instead, truthfully (ky), during (ba) the day (yowm – the time period) of akal* | active Consumption (akal* – of considerable and evident tasting, eating, and feeding upon, devouring and even destroying (qal infinitive (a dramatic and literal actionable noun with ongoing implications over time) construct (bound to you)) by you as mankind (atem* – you (masculine plural)) from it and as a result of him (*min huw – because of him and out of it (masculine singular)), then (wa) your eyes and perceptions, especially the vision of men (ayn atem – your sight and perspective (eyes is feminine plural while your is masculine plural)), they will be opened to perceive such that they will be able to comprehend and decide (paqach – they will understand the insights and be able to respond appropriately and decisively (nifal (causing and effecting this result) perfect (at this moment in time) third-person plural)).

Then, you will actually be at that time (wa hayah – so, you, in the sense of mankind, will exist then (qal perfect second-person masculine plural)) suitably similar and comparable to (ka – akin) God (elohym* – the Almighty and Mighty Ones, either God or gods), knowing and observing Yada and, therefore, familiar with and comprehending (yada^o – recognizing, acquainted with, and respecting Yada at that time, then actually aware of and understanding (qal (actually) participle (a verb functioning as an active and descriptive noun constrained in time) construct (bound to what follows) masculine plural)) good, that which is beneficial, productive, pleasing, and correct (towb – what is appropriate and useful, that which is enjoyable, right, prosperous, proper, beautiful, and desirable) and bad, that which is wrong, disappointing and detrimental, hurtful and malicious, especially distressing because it is deeply troubling (*wa ra – and evil, that which is ineffective and injurious, counterproductive and caustic, destructive and detrimental, indeed saddening because it is malignant).” (Bare^osyth / Genesis 3:5)

That was all it took and she bit. In her mind, she would be like God, and even more, state her case by devouring Yada and claim all the tree would offer for herself. She would chawah | determine and declare, openly revealing, what she believed was beneficial and pleasing. She would decide what was preposterous and distressing as well. And she would chawah | promote her position for all to hear.

Therefore, lo^{} Chawah*, with the name negated, means: don’t pretend that you speak for God or that you are at liberty to reinterpret His instructions. Lo^{} Chawah* foretells that there are no mother gods to claim as one’s own, and that those who pretend to speak for them will be judged and condemned.

Lo^{} Chawah* plainly states: do not pretend to yada^o | know or speak over Yada. And don’t contravene and convolute what Yada represents, either. Cunning may captivate those easily confused, but it’s a far cry from the chakmah | wisdom supplied by the ruwach of Yahowah.

Lo^{} Chawah* is a warning, not to preempt Yada or Yada Yahowah as the ets Da^oath. They represent the last and best hope to recognize that Dowd represents the Tree of Lives and to capitalize on all that he has achieved.

As an interesting insight, in Hebrew grammar there are actually four conjugations. The perfect and imperfect address time-constrained or ongoing action, while the participle and infinitive convey the same attributes relative to time, but they also create a hybrid between a verb and a noun. Therefore, in this case with the participle, yada^o becomes “to know Yada,” with the verb conveying an actionable and descriptive title.

The implications are significant because the Adversary’s strategy then and now is to babel | commingle truth and lies to confuse and confound, beginning with statements which are mostly accurate. This is the most effective way to mislead and it explains why religions have become so popular.

In this case, Yahowah knows Yada. He is also fully aware that there will come a time when many will be familiar with him and they will devour the fruit he is offering. Specifically in this case, not only was Yada | Know scribed as an actionable noun, so was akal* | Consume. These acknowledgements address our time, this very moment when the ets Daath is revealing the identity of the ets Chayym such that all mankind does not actually die.

At long last, the eyes of man are being opened such that some people are finally becoming perceptive. For the first time in six-thousand years, many of us comprehend what we need to know to properly respond to Yahowah, aware of what God is offering and expecting in return.

This is what is causing the select few to be more like God at this time. It is yada | knowledge which makes it possible – a familiarization that is just being recognized. This is the fruit of the Tree of Knowledge.

Packed within the volumes of Yada Yahowah is nourishing information and insights about Yahowah, His Towrah, and His Prophets. We are now aware that His Towrah | Guidance leads us to the His Beryth | Covenant through His Mow'edym | Restoring Witnesses to the Eternal Testimony. In this way, the Qatan Ma'owr reflects the brilliance of the Gadowl Ma'owr as an owth* for the Mow'edym, with the ets Daath familiarizing the world about the ets Chayym.

And while that is obviously towb | good, productive, and beneficial, now with the publication of Babel, Twistianity, and God Damn Religion, for the first time in a long time, humanity has the wherewithal to know what is deceitful, destructive, and deadly, even demonic and diabolical. The religions of Judaism, Christianity, and Islam have been objectively exposed and condemned. The path home has been cleared of the obstacles that have tripped so many for so long.

These thirteen volumes within the Yada Yahowah library are an exposé on *ra | that which is caustic to mankind, wrong, disappointing, and detrimental, malicious and troubling. Nothing comparable to these volumes has ever been written, and they are freely available now when they are needed most.

As we evaluate this discussion, it is apparent that that Yahowah scripted it ~ which is His prerogative since *mal*ak* are spiritual messengers and He created and programmed Satan for this purpose. And now it's obvious that God wanted Adam and Chawah out of the Garden. Scripting the narration like this was not only the best way to achieve that result, by doing so, Yahowah could infuse the narrative with prophecy ~ which is precisely what He has done.

To achieve this telescoping of time, yada was spoken in the participle, such that Yada would appear at a point in the distant future while akal | consume was stated in the infinitive because the fruit he would be providing would nourish those devouring it for a long time prior to, during, and even after mankind's return to the Garden.

The presentation departs from a simple historic discussion between the Serpent and Chawah with atem* | you because it was spoken in the masculine plural, rather than feminine singular. It is, therefore, depicting a much larger audience, including those who will be consuming the fruit of the Tree of Knowledge in the future. *Min huw can then be seen as “from it” or “as a result of him,” reminding us that the tree is symbolic of a person.

Likewise, the eyes being opened via paqach are also depicted in the masculine plural. Therefore, rather than Chawah's perceptions being enhanced, as a result of the perfect conjugation, we discover that it is mankind who will, one day, come to understand. And since paqach was shaded by the nifal stem, those who come to comprehend through their own initiative, will be able to determine their fate by processing the information and insights they have gleaned from the Tree of Knowledge. The nifal has them carrying out and receiving the intent of the verb.

The clever use of Hebrew grammar reveals that a time will come when “you,” again conveying mankind in the masculine plural, hayah | will actually be ka | suitably similar to God for these select individuals to earn Yahowah’s favor and trust. This is the purpose of the Ets Chayym* and ets Da’ath* because, as a result of the Mow’edym of Pesach, Matsah, and Bikuwrym, we will become immortal, perfected, enriched, and empowered children of God. The Mow’ed of Shabuw’ah brings the Covenant Family Home while Taruw’ah is restorative, purging the final remnant of guilt so they can celebrate Dowd’s arrival with Yahowah on Kipurym and enter *Gan eden on Sukah. And through it all, it is what Yada knows that makes it possible for mankind to benefit from the fulfillment of the Mow’edym.

Reaffirming this conclusion, the second iteration of *yada | to know was also scribed in the participle form, making Yada actionable at this time. Also interesting, Yada, conveyed in the construct form, is bound to all things towb | good, beneficial, pleasing, correct, and productive. And while that is a marvelous assessment, we are also aware that Yada will serve as the means to repudiate all that is *ra | wrong, disappointing, detrimental, and malicious.

By conveying this message this way, so accurately and with such prophetic precision, Yahowah has given us a glimpse into His intellectual prowess. He actually told Chawah the truth, knowing that she wouldn’t understand it and would respond inappropriately. And by doing so, God helped us understand what the future holds in store for us. All it would take to figure this out was the allocation of the very Ruwach | Spirit of Yahowah in addition to the Ruwach providing Chakmah | Intelligence, Bynah | Understanding, etsah* | Complete Comprehension and Counsel, Gibowrah | Character and Conviction, and Yarah | Respect and Admiration. But even then, it would take this man twenty-four years of diligent study before he would pass this test and perceive the clues as they were intended.

Beyond speaking to us and laying out the future in the past, Yahowah also had Satan press Chawah's buttons, playing into her delusions of grandeur. God presented all of this for us on this occasion, knowing that when prompted, we'd find it and learn from it. And for our comprehension to progress at this accelerated pace, it was time to support Yada with better, more mature, devoted, and rational individuals as we move from editing a library of books to coalescing comprehension and communication in real time with the Yahowah Vlog. The message is now being delivered in a manner most suitable for this moment in the immediate proximity of the fulfillment of the final Mow^{ed} Miqra^{ey}.

Unable to process what she had been told, Chawah gave a curious glance toward the Tree, just peeking at something coveted, and with no actual enticement, she jumped at the chance to take what did not belong to her...

“Then (wa), the woman (*ishah) looked and saw (ra*ah – she viewed and perceived (qal imperfect third-person feminine singular)) that indeed (ky – surely and truly, ready to make an exception) ha *ets | the Tree (ha *ets) was beautiful and pleasing (towb – pleasant and productive, even right and worthy) as a source of food to consume (la ma*akal – for nourishment, to approach, process, and eat), and that indeed (ky) it was visually appealing and desirable, even eliciting cravings (ta*awah huw* la ha *ayn – it was perceived as a lustful longing to be satisfied, and was seen as a jealous inclination for the eyes). So (wa), she coveted (chamad – she lusted for and intensely desired, treasuring) ha *ets | the tree (ha *ets – the productive upright life with firmly embedded roots and branches which reach up to absorb the light of the sun; from *atsah and *etsah – to provide counsel and advice through diligence and effort on the entirety of the plan for the purpose of developing a backbone while overcoming challenges to advocate the proper response, often painful, risking being shut out because it is in open defiance of the schemes of authority figures (masculine singular)) to impart insights, inspire success, and convey understanding (sakal – to provide the wisdom to be prudent so as to acquire additional skills and prosper).

Therefore (wa), she grasped hold and seized (laqach – she obtained and accepted, she received, collected, and took with genuine intent and ongoing implications (qal imperfect)) from (min) his fruit (*pary huw – its produce and harvest, its result) and ate (*wa akal – consumed it (qal imperfect – literally and genuinely forming an ongoing relationship by continually eating)). Then (wa), she also gave it (*nathan gama – in addition she offered it (qal imperfect)) to (la – while moving in the direction of) her man (iysh hy – her masculine individual) who was in a relationship with her (im hy – who was associated with her and similar to her), and then he ate (*wa akal – he imbibed and consumed on an ongoing basis (qal imperfect)).” (*Bare syth / Genesis 3:6)

It was as if Adam learned nothing. He showed no appreciation for what Yahowah had shared with him. He had more to eat than could be imagined and, yet, without hesitation or a second thought, he took the one thing God had advised against. As a companion, a friend, or even son, he was useless. He had the intelligence of that goldfish swimming in the bowl and depth of character to match.

And quite frankly, Chawah didn’t entice him. She simply handed him something off of the Tree of Knowledge and he devoured it as if he had never known God. He demonstrated that he could not be trusted.

By ascribing the imperfect conjugation to *ra*ah* | she perceived, we know that the woman’s craving commenced in advance of this meeting. And, clearly, what she coveted was *ha *ets Da*ath* | the Tree of Knowledge.

“So (wa), their two eyes (ayn shanaym hem* – sight of both of them as men (ayn* is dual and is feminine and hem is masculine plural)) were able to see (paqach – could process the sensory perceptions of sight by being opened (nifal imperfect third-person feminine plural)). Then they, as men, recognized (wa yada^o – so they (masculine plural) realized, acknowledged, and knew, becoming more aware (qal imperfect third-person masculine plural)) as a result (ky – by comparison), their nakedness and exposure as they became clever and shrewd (eyrowm hem* – their craftiness and cleverness had bared all, such that they were subtle and elusive were without adequate protection; from aram* – they had become cunning and devious (hem is masculine plural)).

Then (wa), they lay hold of (taphar – they seized and grasped hold possibly interwove or intertwined (qal imperfect third-person masculine plural)) an ascending shoot or twig (aleh* – a rising stem or uplifted sucker (singular); from alah* – to rise) of fig (ta^oenah – for the opportune occasion of copulation; from anah* – to meet), and they prepared, acting and engaging to form (*wa asah – they brought about and made (qal imperfect third-person masculine plural)) for themselves (la hem) a girdle (chagorah – a belt or sash; from chag – to celebrate and party and chagar – to gird).” (Bare^osyth / Genesis 3:7)

They had exposed themselves and had shown that they were millennia away from acquiring the knowledge needed to return to God. Clearly, they were nowhere near what Yada would eventually become. He was the Choter, but the best they could do by comparison was to grasp at sticks. And even that may be too favorable an interpretation.

While I recognize that taphar is typically rendered “sewed together,” they had neither thread nor needles. They had shown no previous ingenuity, and neither stems nor twigs can be stitched. Used only this once in an inspired text (it also appears in Job, Ecclesiastes, and Ezekiel), taphar is related to taphas, which is quite common and means “to take hold of and handle.”

So what were they grasping and handling, you ask? Well, as for aleh*, since it is scribed identically to alah* | to rise, it is likely addressing an “ascending shoot, elevated sucker, or rising stem.” And that would make this either a joke or an indication that they were more carnal than cerebral. This possibility exists because ta’edah also conveys “sexual drive and copulation,” giving new meaning to the sucker that was rising. It is from anah* which is “to meet and greet at an opportune moment.” So, once again, you can make of this what you will; I’m just the messenger. But if we were to be literal with this phrasing, it reads, “Then, they lay hold of the rising sucker and copulated at the opportunity.” Moreover, there is no indication that the conclusion helps because chagorah, as a small belt, sash, or girdle, is from chag, which is to celebrate and party.

“Then with ongoing implications over time, they actually heard (*wa shama – they (masculine plural as in mankind) would hear with the benefits of listening continuously playing out (qal imperfect third-person masculine plural)) that which pertains to the Qowl | Voice (eth qowl* – the sound) of Yahowah (YaHoWaH), Almighty (elohym*), as He independently, and on His own initiative, unaffected by any other influences, was traveling about (halak – He was moving without regard for the whims of others (hitpaël participle masculine singular absolute – depicting His movement as a verbal noun, completely independent, neither acted upon nor influenced by anyone else)) pursuant to (ba – with regard to and concerning) ha Gan | the enclosed and sheltered Garden (ha gan – the covered and protected enclosure for life) concerning (la – pertaining to the approach of) the Ruwach | Spirit (ruwach) of the day (ha yowm).

Therefore, the man, Adam* (*wa ha adam), and his woman (ishah huw) withdrew as he moved away by himself, no longer assisted, influenced, or helped by anyone (*chaba – he decided to retreat and leave by himself (hitpaël imperfect third-person masculine singular)) from (min) the presence (paneḥ – the approach, appearance, and face) of Yahowah (YaHoWaH – an accurate presentation of the name of elowah* – God as guided by His towrah – instructions regarding His *hayah

– existence), Almighty God (elohym*), in the midst of (ba tawek – in the middle of; from an unused root meaning to sever) ha Gan | the Sheltered Garden’s (ha gan) ets | Tree (ets* – the productive upright life with firmly embedded roots and branches which reach up to absorb the light of the sun; from atsah* and etsah* – to provide counsel and advice through diligence and effort on the entirety of the plan for the purpose of developing a backbone while overcoming challenges to advocate the proper response, often painful, risking being shut out because it is in open defiance of the schemes of authority figures (masculine singular)).” (*Bare*syth* / Genesis 3:8)

There is a lot to unpack here now that we are aware of what’s actually occurring and why everyone is behaving as God is depicting them in this story. After we have had the characters described and have watched them interact, we are introduced to yet another attribute of God’s solution to having been unimpressed by the man in the Garden ~ His Qowl | Voice. The descriptive title belongs to the adamah* | Man of the Earth, Yada | One who Knows as the ets Da*ath* | Tree of Knowledge and the Basar | Herald.

While it wasn’t the man and woman who were listening, something we can deduce by the realization that *shama was presented in the masculine plural and, therefore, addressing the men of another millennia. Nevertheless, by having devoured some of his fruit, Adam and Chawah should now have been at least somewhat familiar with him, such that they recognized him. His Qowl | Voice would have shattered their illusions, just as he would the delusions of the religious, political, and conspiratorialists to follow in time. This is the very same Qowl, Yahowah exclaimed through the Prophet Yasha*yah, who would call out in the wilderness to prepare the way for His return, clearing the obstacles that had been strewn in the path. Additionally, based upon the Towrah we know that God is committed to speaking through men and not directly to men.

As for the other interpretation, that “they heard the sound of the Lord, God, walking,” may I remind you that Yahowah expressly stated that He appeared al* | above the man, not beside him. Qowl is properly defined as “voice” four times more often than it is rendered “sound.” And since Yahowah is a seven-dimensional being, should He want to interact as a man with legs and feet conveying the sound of footsteps over broken branches, the most He could do would be to project His nepesh | soul into a physical form for the occasion. But had that been the case here, He would have depicted His presence using iysh* | individual, something we have not seen anywhere in this narrative. Instead, we are told that this day pertained to the ruwach | spirit of Yahowah (something men have corrupted to “cool of the day”). This is to say that it was correct to conclude that God was speaking to and observing this man as if he were a pet in a cage, swimming around akin to a goldfish in a bowl.

Affirming this, while halak can be rendered “walking,” it is correctly translated “coming and going, moving about and traveling” three times more often than it is presented as “walking.” Therefore, Yahowah is continuing to use this narrative to advance His solution to His lack of interest in the uneducated, inexperienced, unproductive, undisciplined, unmotivated, irresponsible, and self-entitled man. Yah’s Tree would have a Voice. Yada Yahowah would become the Yahowah Vlog.

Should you disagree, that’s your prerogative. But be aware, over the past 3000 years, no one has known Yahowah better nor has spoken more accurately of Him and for Him. Even here, I’m the first to identify Dowd with the Tree of Lives, which was predicated upon being the first to prove that he fulfilled Passover. And by properly reflecting the Son’s brilliance, I became the Tree of Knowledge, the first to lead the world back to the ets Chayym*. This is something Yasha*yah understood, but even the Prophet Zakaryah could not grasp as he pondered the implications of the two trees flanking the Manowrah ~ one next to the lights representing the first three Miqra*ey and the other rooted alongside the Fall Mow*edym. As a result, I am the first to demonstrate that the Choter Yahowah foretold through Yasha^oyah is the etsah Da^oath* as a result of the Ruwach | Spirit. That, in and of itself, is among the greatest discoveries of our age ~ destroying the messianic connotations.

And that's just the low-hanging fruit, because I'm the first to determine that Yahowah caused the fall of man. Climbing higher in that Tree, I shared how God arranged man's ouster from the Garden such that, with woman, after billions of iterations, this would eventually evolve toward the desired result.

Climbing to the top of the Tree, I explained that our time out of and back to the Garden has transpired for a singular purpose. This is an opportunity for some men and women to become sufficiently interesting and reliable that Yahowah can remove us from the Gan | Sheltered Enclosure, even from planet Earth, itself, and allow some of us free reign throughout the universe, as well as access to Shamaym.

Therefore, our journey isn't about seeking salvation but, instead, striving to be interesting and trustworthy. For this to occur, God would have to give us the time and space to learn and grow, to experience life and death, to accomplish something worthwhile, to fall and get up again, to show that we are worthy of His attention and that we can be trusted to follow instructions. So, indeed, there would eventually be those willing to listen and engage accordingly. They would consume this fruit and become Family.

The initial exemplar was Noah, which is why he was lifted above the fallen Naphylym, achieving this distinction by listening to Yahowah and then doing as God had asked, even caring for the animals Yahowah enjoyed in the process. And this would serve as a sign of the Covenant, made apparent by the seven colors of the rainbow as the sun broke through the stormy clouds.

Even the eight souls aboard the Ark were symbolic of the eight epochs of mankind's great adventure. It would take six millennia for enough of us to become interesting to justify reopening the Gan | Protective Enclosure. But the situation would be different this time, as the seventh millennium is our opportunity to get it right – for the Tree of Knowledge, and the eight harvesting and sharing the fruit around him – to properly equip the mortal remnant of humanity for the greatest opportunity of all. And that is when, beginning on the eighth day of Sukah | Shelters, those who have made a contribution, proven they can be trusted, and who have become interesting by learning, will be emancipated – free to explore the cosmos with our Creator in a fashion that is mutually beneficial because we can be trusted, and are interesting, at long last.

As a result, now you know why my collaboration with Yahowah would play out over 32 and 8 years, and why it would require so much effort ~ already one hundred thousand hours and continuing. I would have to demonstrate the level of devotion required to prove that men could be trusted to work as intended. And in the process, I would be tripped up on occasion and make some mistakes, to show that I could dust myself off, correct the record, and grow from there. God wanted someone to affirm that by listening to Him and engaging accordingly, we were capable of learning what would be required of us to be enriched and empowered, enabled and emancipated by Him.

Yes, the Choter would have roots then and now, branching out and bearing fruit. And he would compose a sign and have a voice thanks to the spirit of this day.

All the while, the partnership between the Trees, the love and respect shared between the ets Chayym* and *Da*ath*, will endure forever, their branches intertwined. While Noach would point the way, and *Abraham would be shown the way, while Moseh would record the way, and the Prophets would explain the way, it would be the fruit of Dowd and Yada that would nourish those along the way.

The fruit of these Trees is the Covenant Family. And Yahowah decides who has access to them and it. How do you like them apples?

Collectively, what I've just shared with you is the pinnacle of human understanding, the reason for life, and the essence of our existence. Do with this as you may.

For reasons only God knows, I've been tasked with the responsibility, the opportunity, of reintroducing the world to Yahowah while restoring His Son's place in our lives. And while that's good, it is also bad. The job entails warning the world against the mess men have made. By necessity, I must tell the world that Jesus isn't God, that Allah is Satan, that there is no Hashem, that Marxists and MAGAs are both wrong, and that the current POTUS is demonic. The Earth is spiraling out of control, such that the next eight years will be catastrophic. And standing up against it all, weathering the storm, is the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Bad.

I'm doing my job, producing fruit, and sharing it with all interested parties. Nevertheless, my retirement is still a millennium and 8 years away. So, while it seems anticlimactic, there is more to this story that God wants you to know. So, to rejoin His narrative where we left off, it is instructive to know that shama | listening, was cradled in the qal imperfect and third-person masculine plural. Therefore, the implications are that the ones who were listening were the two in the Garden, therefore, the ets | Trees, representing Dowd and Yada. This conclusion is derived because there were two of them and "ets*" and "they" are masculine. Or symbolically, they could represent Yisra*elites and Gowym in the last days. Either way, the result would play out over time because *shama was conveyed using the imperfect conjugation. Although, nothing seemed to matter at the moment.

Having addressed the Qowl of Yahowah, there is something more we can learn from halak. It was one of two successive verbs modified by the rare use of the hitpael stem. This means that both Yahowah and His Qowl | Voice, while regarded as one, are unaffected by the wiles of man. That was true then of Yahowah, having given up on Adam, and is true now with His Voice being incongruous with the religious and political. In the participle form, God's movement through space and time is being vividly depicted such that it leaves an indelible impression. This is particularly germane regarding the narrative which took place within the Enclosed Garden, which is why the Ruwach | Spirit is present at this time.

While it is subtle, there are a couple of reasons that Yahowah mentioned His Spirit in conjunction with listening. This pertains to His relative location in time and the nature of the Garden yesterday and tomorrow. Without the seven Ruwach of Yahowah, the Choter would not have been able to discern what billions have missed over the millennia. And without being slandered by those falsely claiming that the ruwach is Spirit Mom, I would not have returned to this narrative at this time. Therefore, I would not have noticed the great discoveries that have resulted from this investigation. This is why I have expressed, and have recognized that Yahowah has noted with some extraordinary prophecies adroitly depicting this fracture within the family, that it serves a purpose – as did Chawah's flight of fancy and rebellion on this day. We grow when we meet and rise above challenges.

Moving deeper into the preceding narrative, while the story depicts Adam and Chawah together, it's the man who is shown *chaba | withdrawing from God because it was scribed in the third-person masculine singular. Further, since *chaba was modified by the hitpael stem, Adam is acknowledging that he is no longer being assisted by Chawah or influenced by God. This also suggests that he *chaba | decided to leave on his own accord. The parting was mutual.

All of this brings us right back to the ets* | Tree ~ which remains masculine and singular. The text does not say that Adam was "hiding among the trees." He was ba tawek | in the midst of the one Tree in the Gan. It was the one he coveted, apparently trying to consume as much of it as he could prior to be escorted out of the Garden. Therefore, while Chawah was the first to bite, wanting to be a Mother Goddess and all, Adam was anything but an innocent bystander.

We are also reminded of what this ets* represents. The Tree's purpose was to etsah* | provide counsel and advice through diligence and effort on the entirety of the plan, ultimately framing the issues God wanted understood. In the process, man would develop a backbone while overcoming challenges, all to advocate the proper response. It would be painful at times, as he would trip and fall to demonstrate the resolve to rise again, risking being shut out because his message would be in open defiance of the schemes proposed by those deemed authorized.

Back in Eden*...

“Yahowah (Yahowah – God’s name transliterated as guided by His towrah – instructions on His hayah – existence and His role in our shalowm – reconciliation), who is God (elohym*), called out, issuing an invitation to read and recite (*qara – He invited and summoned (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) to the man (el adam – to humankind), and He said to him (*wa *amar la huw – He spoke to him (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)), ‘Where are you (ey atah – why, and for what purpose are you in this position)?” (*Bare*syth* / Genesis 3:9)

Even after introducing the ruwach | spirit at long last, with the very next opportunity, Yahowah reminds us that, when He speaks, His voice remains masculine and singular. The inclusion of the ruwach does not make God feminine. If it were not already, this is point, game, set, and match on the notion of a Spirit Mom speaking to anyone.

In this case, the verb is *qara, which, in the imperfect conjugation, is deployed to invite mankind to return to God no matter how long it takes. Also, by *qara | reading and reciting the words inscribed within the Tree of Knowledge ~ Yada Yahowah, we find God summoning us to meet with Him on common ground. *Qara serves at the verbal root of *Miqra ~ the title ascribed to the seven annual Occasions to be Called Out and Meet with God. The *Miqra*ey* and *Mow*edym* are synonymous.

It should now be obvious that the ets Chayym fulfilled the first three Miqra^{ey}, adding to our lives. The ets Da^{ath} will fulfill the next two Mow^{edym} ~ enabling the Shabu^{wah} and Taru^{wah} Ingatherings. Dowd will return on the sixth Miqra^{*} of Kipurym. And Yada will resume his role of providing instruction in the Garden during the seventh Mow^{ed} of Sukah. Should you want to be among the beneficiaries, follow Yahowah's advice and consider this as your opportunity to read and then recite His engraved invitations to return to Him.

Perhaps it's nothing, but I happened to notice that the interrogatory ey*, often transliterated as iy*, does more than ask "where, which one, or why" questions, seeking to find the reasons behind certain events. It also designates "an island, a relatively small piece of land surrounded by water." I live in the US Virgin Islands. And that is particularly relevant because, prophetically, iy* is used to describe the coastlines of America where I came from and where forty percent of Jews live today. These are places from which Yahowah proclaimed through Yasha^{yah} that He will be gathering His people.

So, I must ask: Where are you? Are you with Adam and Chawah and estranged from God, or are you with the ets Chayym and Da^{ath} who provide the means to return to Yah? Are you attuned to the Qara^{}* | Invitations to Read God's testimony and Meet with Him as they are proclaimed and fulfilled by the Basar | Herald who, as Yada, is the Qowl | Voice calling out to you?

There is, of course, Adam's* option, even if it assures banishment from the Garden on the cusp of man's return...

"He said (*wa amar – so then he answered with ongoing implications (qal imperfect)), 'So, Your Voice (eth qowl atah – that which pertains to Your (masculine singular) voice), I heard (shama^{}* – I listened to (qal perfect)) within (ba) ha Gan | the Enclosed, Sheltered, and Protected Garden (ha gan – the covered and surrounded enclosure) and I was concerned, even fearful (wa yare^{}* – I was frightened and distressed due to my recognition of your awesome stature, so I was intimidated (qal imperfect first-person singular)), because (ky – concerned that) I was naked and exposed for having sought to be crafty and shrewd (eyrm anoky – I was unprotected and improperly covered; from aram* – I was trying to be clever, subtle, devious), so I withdrew, having removed myself (*wa chaba – I moved away, retreating so as not to be discovered (nifal imperfect first-person singular)).” (*Bare*syth* / In the Beginning / Genesis 3:10)

Sometimes little things matter. “He said” was scribed in the imperfect, meaning that there would be ongoing implications of the statement. “I heard” was written in the perfect conjugation, revealing that he would not listen long. This is the opposite approach Yahowah was seeking from him and from us. Life is better when we continually listen to God and infrequently interrupt the lesson by speaking over Him.

Prior to this defiant episode, Adam was comfortable being fully exposed to God, but now that he had decided that his preferences were more important than Yahowah’s instructions, he was concerned, and with a lot more than being naked. Ultimately, there are only three ways for us to perceive God – respect, fear, or indifference. Those who listen and respond to His instructions will grow to respect Yahowah. Those who reject Him, should be concerned that they will be judged by Him. And those who remain clueless regarding Yahowah will never be bothered by Him.

Speaking of eyrm*, it is kissing cousin to iyr* | jackass, iyr* | anxiety and anguish, and iyr* | concentration of people. The verbal root is likely aram*, meaning to be crafty and shrewd. But if that was the plan, the jackass was now anxious and anguished for having been insufficiently clever to spar with God. Just for fun, and sometimes even out of exasperation, I tried to match wits with God in some clever fashion from time to time, always in good fun and on an otherwise meaningless issue, but, no surprise, He’s won every round.

Reinforcing my earlier assessment of the garden parting being mutual, in the nifal imperfect, Adam was aware of the ongoing consequence of his actions, and proceeded anyway. With the nifal stem, the subject carries out and receives the action of the verb.

Someone as wise as Yahowah, asks questions because He wants us to ponder the implications of the answer. It can be a marvelous way to encourage us to think and be accountable...

“He said (*wa amar – so He questioned (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)), ‘Who (my – asking a what, where, why, when, or how question) informed you, reporting to you (*nagad la atah – informed you, coming before you to convey to you (hifil perfect)) that (ky) you were naked and exposed, even crafty and shrewd (eyrm atah – you were shamefully clever)?

Might it have come from the Tree (*ha min ha ets) which, for the benefit of the relationship (asher* – to show the proper way to get the greatest benefit and the most enjoyment out of life), I instructed you (*tsawah la atah – I directed, concerning you at that time (piel perfect first-person singular) not to be defined by consuming (*bilthy akal – not be negated by what you eat (qal infinitive – a verbal noun which establishes an ongoing identity through ingestion)) from and devouring it (min huw akal)?’” (*Bare syth / In the Beginning / Genesis 3:11)

It was not Chawah who told Adam that he was naked. It was the fruit of the Tree that revealed this to him. With inadequate knowledge, insufficient life experiences, and exposed to the elements for the first time once the protective covering of the Garden had been removed, the man and woman in the Garden did what the religious have done throughout the ages – they tried to conceal themselves. Previously comfortable without clothing, and appreciating the attractiveness of their bodies, open sensuality became the first casualty of only knowing enough to be dangerous. Every religion would establish dress codes, with some forcing women to walk around in tents and another requiring them to shave their heads.

The last thing Adam wanted to hear, especially still perched in the Tree, was to be reminded that he had been asked to refrain from habitually eating from it. It was the first, “I told you so.” And even then, with God being none too subtle with His line of questioning, man’s retort was to shift blame. We humans have never been very good at accepting responsibility...

“Then the man (wa ha *adam) said (*amar – muttered), ‘The woman (ha *ishah) who, to enjoy the relationship (*asher), You gave (nathan – You offered and presented (qal perfect second-person masculine singular)) to be with me (*imad any – to associate in a relationship with me), she (hy), she gave it to me, offering it to me (hy* nathan la *any – she brought it to me (qal perfect third-person feminine singular)) from ha *ets | the Tree (min ha *ets). So I started eating and did not stop (wa *akal – then I began to continually consume (qal imperfect first-person singular)).’ (Bare*syth / Genesis 3:12)

To Adam’s credit, it was true, every word of it. To his shame, it was wrong because he failed to be accountable or responsible. Yes, Yahowah gave man the gift of woman, but He gave us so much more. He gave us a nepesh | soul to observe and then respond to the world around us. He offered a neshamah | conscience and freewill so that we could make responsible choices. And then He gave us His towrah | guidance so that we could make the most of our opportunity.

In his reply, *Adam was trying to shift blame to God as well as to Chawah, suggesting that it’s Yahowah’s fault for having provided the woman, and the woman’s fault for having handed him the fruit. But, keeping it real, it was Adam’s fault for not only ignoring God’s instructions, but for doing expressly what he’d been warned against. He didn’t just have a nibble, he was sitting in the Tree, gobbling down everything in sight. That is the full implication of the qal imperfect when applied to *akal.

As people, we were 0 for 1, so now turning His attention to the woman...

“Then (wa), Yahowah (YaHoWaH – an accurate presentation of the name as guided by His towrah – instructions regarding His hayah – existence), who is God (elohym* – Almighty), He said (amar* – He expressed in words with unfolding consequences over time (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) to the woman (la ha ishah – concerning the female individual), ‘Why (mah – as an interrogative implying what, when, where, or how) did you do this (zoth asah – did you act this way at this moment in time (qal perfect second-person feminine singular))?’

And the woman said (wa amar ha ishah – the female individual responded with ongoing implications (qal imperfect third-person feminine singular)), ‘The tempting and toxic serpent (wa ha nachash – the sorcerous snake, this venomous viper, the spellbinding creature; from nachash – the one who enchants and captivates regarding the divine, the one who practices divination, magic, and sorcery, who indulges in prophecy to capitalize by fortune-telling, invoking supernatural knowledge and power), he deceived and deluded me (nasha^{*} any – he caused me to depart from the correct path by craftiness and trickery, giving me false hope, placing me in his debt by beguiling me (hifil perfect third-person masculine singular – the serpent influenced the woman making the woman his errant and misleading understudy at this moment)) and (wa – when) I began eating (wa akal – so then I started consuming and devouring (qal imperfect first-person singular)).’” (Bare^{syth} / Genesis 3:13)

She did not accept responsibility either. And clearly, she was complicit. She not only misquoted God, she wanted to become like God. She surveyed the situation, thought about it, and made a conscious decision to be a goddess by devouring all that pertained to Yada and the Tree of Knowledge. Then, rather than helping Adam and demonstrating that she could be trusted to be of benefit to him, she convinced him to support her.

It was role reversal three times over. Satan, by speaking well above Chawah's capacity to comprehend, made himself appear as if he spoke for God. Adam, rather than listening to Yahowah and engaging accordingly, was motivated by the woman. And Chawah upended her design parameters, and rather than supporting her man, she undermined him.

Too much information as well as too little in the minds of those ill-equipped to process it often proves disastrous ~ just as God had foreseen. These two were not deserving of Yahowah's attention and clearly could not be trusted.

The kind of person whom God could depend upon, assured that he would not muck things up, wouldn't be ready to be released from the sheltered enclosure we call Earth for six to seven thousand years, depending upon the individual. In fact, the human experiment, that of an upright animal with a neshamah | conscious, with hands to make things of value and vocal cords to discuss them, left to use them apart from God's constant supervision, fell on his own accord within the day designated as the first millennium. Outside of the Garden, every man and woman with a neshamah would Naphylm | Fall.

After giving up on these two, and expressing some serious regret over their continual degradation, God would begin anew with eight ~ setting the schedule for our enlightenment and emancipation, along with our empowerment and enablement, resulting in survivors' enrichment. And therein is the purpose of the Choter | Branch, the ets Da'ath | Tree of Knowledge, the Nes | Sign, and the Zarowa | One Cultivating the Seeds for the Harvest. Shabuwah would deliver what Yahowah needed to bring the Fall Mow'edym to fruition.

We would get to where we needed to be, even if it would take some time. We would fall, but we will rise.

The restoration of man as a worthy companion will occur, even as the process plays out in stages with hallmark moments denoted along the way. The stage was set with the Garden narrative. A defining episode occurred when Noah listened and then did as God had asked, showing that progress was possible. With Abraham, Yahowah laid out the path we would follow. With Moseh, God fleshed it out and etched the process in stone, detailing how we would get from here to there.

Then, right in the middle of our journey out of and back into the Garden, three millennia into the timeline and with three-thousand years remaining, Dowd, as the Tree of Lives was repositioned in the center of God's story. He became the exemplar of the man Yahowah sought. He wasn't perfect, but as it turns out, that wasn't what God was seeking. He was exceptionally smart for a man and uncommonly articulate, but made mistakes and, yet, God could work with that because Dowd was willing to learn and always remained loyal, continually getting back up after having fallen.

Dowd became the first to surmise Yahowah's plan for the rise of man, and he properly discerned that God had already penciled him into His story. And foreseeing the result, and understanding what Yahowah was trying to achieve, Dowd manned up. He would fulfill the Spring Miqra^{ey}, realizing that by doing so, he would enable the launch pad from which men and women would ultimately be blasted into the cosmos.

Dowd listened to Yahowah and responded accordingly. Dowd studied Yahowah's testimony, came to understand it, and then shared it prolifically. And that was the formula ~ listen, think, and respond.

With Dowd, it wasn't just a cerebral exercise. He, more than anyone in God's story, built and led a nation, established its capital city, wrote its anthem, defended his people, and then became their principal enabler. Dowd was the kind of man Yahowah found interesting and trustworthy for reasons we are just beginning to understand.

Remarkably, the fact that the Son of God wasn't perfect is what made him interesting. In fact, the fact he didn't know it all but valued learning, made him teachable. In fact, the fact he stumbled and fell on occasion, demonstrated that he had the fortitude to prevail, no matter the circumstance. Dowd earned the right to be the first to travel with Yahowah through space and time by succeeding where Adam failed. Dowd is the anti-Adam.

Through Dowd | the Beloved, by getting to know him and learning from him, by being healed by him, we can be next. And therein explains the purpose of the Tree of Knowledge. I am here to prepare you, equipping you to be released from this planet such that you, too, can explore the universe and live forever as God's constant and beloved companion ~ just like Dowd.

But back then, and even now, the issue at hand was the fragility of human relationships, misplaced trust, a sense of entitlement, a failure to appreciate the value of work, and a preference for lies over truth. The path back would be long and challenging. And it would begin with some new parameters...

“Yahowah (Yahowah – the proper pronunciation of YaHoWaH as directed in His ToWRaH | teaching regarding His HaYaH | existence and our ShaLoWM | restoration), as God (elohym*), He said with ongoing consequences (amar* – responded (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular) to (el*) the Nachash | Spellbinding Serpent (wa ha nachash – the sorcerous snake, this venomous viper, and poisonous cold-blooded reptile, this tempting and toxic creature; from nachash – the one who enchants and captivates regarding the divine, the one who practices divination, magic, and sorcery, who indulges in prophecy to capitalize by fortune-telling, invoking supernatural knowledge and power), As a consequence of (ky – as a result of) you having acted in this way (asah zo*th* – of you having done this, having engaged in this manner (qal perfect second-person masculine singular – doing this even one time)), accursed are you, such that you will invoke and become the embodiment of embitterment, debasement, and injury (arar atah – harmful are you, as you are the personification of misfortune, affliction, and retribution (qal passive participle masculine singular)), more than any other (min kol) beast (bahemah), more than any form of life (min ha chayah – beyond all other conscious existence) of the open environs (hasadeh – outside the walled enclosure).

On (al*) your belly (*gachown atah – the part of a reptile which makes contact with that which bursts forth) you shall move about (halak – travel, behave, and proceed (qal imperfect)), and ash and dirt (apar* – the minute elements or particles which comprise matter) you shall eat (akal* – consume and devour (qal imperfect)) all (kol) the days (yowmym) of your lives (*chayym atah – of your existence).” (*Bare syth / In the Beginning / Genesis 3:14)

For there to be justice, there must be consequence and recompense. For a judge to be moral, he must hold those who deceive and destroy accountable. While he was programmed to do so, Satan nevertheless used misrepresentations, an errant citation, a straw man argument, and the guise of intellectual superiority to push Chawah’s buttons, giving her the justification she sought to write herself into the story as a goddess by co-opting the knowledge of the Tree she coveted. It destroyed her relationship with Adam, robbed them of their home, and garnered a rebuke from God.

Satan’s sentence, however, was not death. Spirits, unlike souls, are immortal. Even God cannot kill them. That is why the misfortune the Adversary brought upon himself, his retribution, will be eternal anguish. Satan will be incarcerated during the fulfillment of Chag Sukah in year 6000 Yah and he will remain in She*owl forever. He is a tool that will have outlived its usefulness and will be tossed away to make room for more refined implements and improve the workshop.

Made especially for Satan and his colleagues, the penitentiary of She*owl is indistinguishable from a black hole. It is a lightless place of emotional anguish separated from God. It is essentially a single dimension, existing throughout time, where the pressures are so intense, the minute particles which comprise matter are consumed. Ultimately, nothing escapes and only time survives.

There are three ways to interpret God's message to the Adversary. The simplest would have been understood by the first people to hear the story. Satan's approach inflicted pain and suffering and he was held accountable. Groveling on one's belly and eating ash and dirt has never been good.

Spiritually, Satan was cast down, and as a result, his days are spent in the material realm feeding off of mankind's filth. Moreover, since Adam was created from the very substance Satan was predicted to consume, we knew the Adversary's intended prey. It's little wonder religions are deadly or that Allah is genocidal.

Scientifically, the leading astrophysicist of our day, Stephen Hawking, invested the last decade of his life advancing the theory which is suggested here – that matter can be consumed. He has postulated that this condition exists within the confines of black holes. While most scientists remain skeptical of his conclusion, knowing that physics is based upon the conservation of matter, Hawking, who died in 2018, was inadvertently confirming what Yahowah has revealed.

Before we move on to what Yahowah said next regarding the Serpent, as stated previously, there is every reason to conclude that Satan was conceived and programed expressly for this purpose. And as such, the reason for sending the Adversary to She*owl is to put him out of commission. On Taruw*ah in 2033, after slaughtering the Adamah Parah, he will have fulfilled his mission and will no longer have any value. He will choke on the ash of the resulting sacrifice, vividly demonstrating that he was not God.

The prophetic portrayal which follows applies to the relationship between Satan and mankind, especially as it is manifest in the role religion and politics have played in beguiling and suppressing the people. But it is especially poignant when seen from the perspective of the Chosen People. As we consider these words, think about how Satan's religions, Christianity, Islam, and especially Judaism, have crippled the Chosen People. No population on earth has been treated with more rancor longer than Jews ~ even as this is a curse they have brought upon themselves.

As we move into this next statement, we are left to ponder the intent of shuwph. It is commonly rendered “crush” when being perpetrated against the Serpent and then “strike” when rendered against man. Since it is infrequently used, the only trustworthy source regarding the intended meaning is Dowd, because he used shuwph in the 139th Mizmowr, one I intend to present forthwith due to its implications. And in it, Dowd, speaking to Yahowah, writes, “So I say, surely darkness and obscurity will _____ (shuwph) me, but the night will be illuminating after me.” In this case, “cover” or “envelop” seem to be the most appropriate renderings. And with this in mind, Yahowah told His Son’s Adversary...

“Hostility and animosity, an adversarial hatred (*wa ebah – enmity, an adversarial approach, a deep-seated dislike and rancor, bitterness and ill-will), I will constitute and establish (shyth – I will place and impose, set forth and appoint (qal imperfect first-person singular)) between (bayn – making the connections which lead to understanding by teaching those who closely examine and consider) you (atah*) and between (bayn – over an interval of time, making a distinction through disassociation to apprehend this information and instruct) the woman (*ha ishah – the female) and between (wa bayn – to convey information which leads to understanding by making the proper connections and the comprehension of) that which you sow (zera atah – your seed, that which propagates those like you, your offspring, that which you produce) and her offspring (wa zera hy – her seed, that which she propagates and proliferates (masculine singular)).

He, himself, will repeatedly cover and conceal (huw shuwph* – he, himself, will press downward upon and bruise, battering and crushing (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) you, first and foremost (atah ro*sh* – you at the source, you at the beginning, you, the head, and leaders) and you, yourself, will emphatically strike, and continually bite and pierce, enveloping (*wa atah shuwph – then you, yourself, will batter and bruise (qal imperfect energetic nun second-person masculine singular)) him as a treacherous foe and deceiver by the heel, impeding the footsteps and stance (huw aqeb – him as an adversary, seeking to circumvent by insidiously supplanting).” (*Bare syth / In the Beginning / Genesis 3:15)

Having done something no one has attempted previously by systematically repudiating the un-gods and false prophets of the New Testament, Talmud, and Quran, I can attest that Satan hates women. They are belittled and degraded in the scriptures of Christianity, Judaism, and Islam. Therefore, based upon Yahowah’s prophetic pronouncement, the fastest and perhaps surest way to ascertain Satan’s influence on a religious text is to consider how women are treated and perceived. This would lead us to the realization that Jesus, Hashem, and Allah are incarnations of Satan.

It is also true that, as a result of these religions, mankind has been embittered against God, preferring to worship Satan as Lord. This is the single worst thing that has ever befallen man.

As for the approach they would take toward one another, we can now project the implications we have witnessed on the verb shuwph. God forewarned that humankind would shuwph | cover and conceal Satan’s presence in their religions. In fact, it is how Satan has concealed his Adversarial nature and then managed to elevate himself to the foremost object of worship. That is to say ~ the Devil is the Lord of religion.

And as for Satan attacking man, I think that the answer lies in the unusual juxtaposition of huw before aqeb as opposed to following it as would be customary in Hebrew. So rather than saying “his heel or foe,” the object of the verb is “him” with the treachery and deceit following. The same was true with atah ro*sh* – with “you” as the Serpent, being the object of the verb, followed by the implications of *ro*sh* | first and foremost from the beginning. Therefore, the prophetic message reveals that Satan would strike and continually pierce, surrounding and battering mankind as a treacherous foe and deceiver, impeding man's footsteps and stance."

Therefore, the zera^o | seed of woman, a.k.a., humankind, would, more than anything else, conceal their ongoing reliance on Satan's corruptions of God's testimony, resulting in Christianity, Judaism, and Islam. Apparently, it's the oldest trick in the book, first played 6,000 years ago, and nothing much has changed. And as a result, Satan remains mankind's most treacherous impediment to knowing Yahowah.

Satan's reputation as the Adversary would be imposed on this occasion by Yahowah. But, based upon the religious evidence, it is the one thing Satan hates most of all. He does not want to be known as ha Satan | the Adversary, but instead as the Lord. It is why you find attacks on "Satan" in the religions which feature the Lord as God. This is actually Satan attempting to conceal and rebuke the "Adversary" title he disdains.

Turning his attention to Satan's little helpers, life would be more challenging – and it would be different. She and he would do as they were originally designed, no matter how challenging and undesirable that would be for them. The Garden's deadbeats were being served a giant slice of reality. It is something today's youth, the religious, political, and conspiratorial would benefit from as well.

As you read the following assessment, it is instructive to know that it was directed toward this man and woman. So, while it is natural to want to extrapolate beyond them, we can be certain that Yahowah was specifically addressing what had gone array in the Garden.

"To (el* – toward and in the direction of) the woman (*ha ishah – the female individual), He said (amar* – He spoke and declared (qal perfect third-person masculine singular – speaking literally but only once in this regard)), 'I will substantially and demonstrably increase (rabah rabah – I will in magnitude, quantity, and time multiply (hifil stems reveal that the subject, God, is causing the significant increase, with the first rabah in the infinitive absolute serving as an adverb modifying the second rabah which was scribed in the imperfect revealing a continuance of)) the intensity of your labor, your expenditure of energy, and your work which will be challenging (itsabown atah – your physical effort and strenuous toil for a period of time along with some resulting discomfort and pain) and also, in association to (*wa eth) your childbearing (*wa herown atah – your pregnancy, the period of gestation, and giving birth, addressing the intensification of the pains and pleasures of sex and rearing children).

With (ba – in) considerable physical effort and hard work (etseb* – difficulty with many challenges (a masculine noun)), you will bear (yalad – you will give birth to and bring forth (qal imperfect second-person feminine singular – actually and for a prolonged period bear)) sons (benym – children).

And (wa) toward (el*) your man (tysh atah – your male individual), your overwhelming emotions and feelings, along with your irresistible desire to dominate, mixed in with your strong sexual urges and abundant longings (*tashuwqah atah – your overriding impulses, lustful cravings, and unrestrained urges, especially your predisposition to many things) will make him responsible for educating you, influencing you through dialogue and by painting word pictures which explain the situation, thereby governing with you by supervising you (wa huw mashal ba atah – he, himself, will share narratives with symbolic meaning with you such that he will be more in charge than you as he uses vivid examples and pithy quotes to rule with you (qal stem indicated this will actually occur in the relationship while the imperfect conjugation reveals that the condition will be ongoing between them third-person masculine singular)).” (*Bare syth / Genesis 3:16)

When we consider God’s pronouncement within the context we have just witnessed, we find affirmations of the prior conclusions. Adam and Chawah were too passive. There is no indication that they valued work or that they made any contribution to the Garden. And so, out of the Garden, they would have to struggle to survive. They would go from lounging around all day to an ordeal that would be enormously challenging.

It's been a common mistake over the ages to narrow the implications of itsabown atah | your physical labor with *herown atah | your pregnancy and bearing children. With the wa | and between them, one is in addition to the other. That is to say, all forms of work will be physically challenging, including bearing and raising children. Yahowah not only reinforced the realization that conceiving and rearing children would be one of life's greatest challenges, that was overwhelmingly so for Chawah. While she had three sons, she flunked motherhood.

On a broader note, it would require an enormous expenditure of energy to regenerate the Tree of Knowledge and distribute its fruit, the result of which would be to bring children into the Covenant Family. None of it would be easy as I can surely attest.

In the Garden, there was no indication that Adam showed any initiative to teach or guide Chawah. Likewise, there is no mention of anything the woman did which might be seen as beneficial for the man. Not wanting their ineptitude to continue, God redirected the woman's attention and reaffirmed the man's role in their relationship.

In so doing, we find the first indication of a fairly obvious dichotomy ~ women generally are more emotional than men and men are prone to organize their thoughts rationally. Chawah would be driven by tashuwqah | emotional feelings and strong desires. This would then require man to do a better job of establishing the paradigm under which they would govern their lives. For humankind to prevail, man would have to lead and educate.

Therefore, through this narrative, Yahowah was telling us what went wrong in the Garden and how to fix it. This wasn't a punishment. It was, instead, guidance. We were instructed to build our families through hard work and sound teaching. And we are more complete when reason and emotion coalesce.

Yahowah explained the reasons behind and resulting consequence of the fall of man. Now separated from God, this advice was for our benefit...

“Then to the man (*wa la adam – so approaching Adam), He said (amar – He explained at the moment (qal perfect third-person masculine singular)), ‘Because (ky – as a consequence of it being true and for the reason) you have listened (*shama – you heard and paid attention (qal perfect second-person masculine singular – at this moment in time)) to the voice (la qowl – audible sound, noise, and verbal expressions) of your woman (ishah atah – of your female) and you have continually consumed (akal* – on an ongoing basis, you have eaten, being fed (qal imperfect)) from (min) ha *ets | the Tree (*ha ets) which, for the benefit of the relationship and to show the proper way to get the most enjoyment out of life (asher* – which relationally leads along the most desirable and productive path), I directed (tsawah – I instructed, communicating clearly and audibly to (piel perfect first-person singular – recognizing that My directions would, for a limited time, influence)) you (atah*), saying (*la amar – approaching to convey), “You should not make a habit of devouring or destroying (lo akal – do not consistently or continually consume (qal imperfect second-person masculine singular)) from him or it (*min huw – because of him),” ha *adamah | the earth and man (*ha adamah – the ground and the bloody red nature of a particular man) have been hindered in an annoying manner based upon the actions of others for a while, inflicting a harm (arar* – it, of no fault of his own, has been injured and restrained, cursed in a vexing and infuriating manner for a time such that what he offers is abhorred while his explanations are perceived as unsuitable, thereby resulting in unfavorable circumstances (qal passive participle singular absolute – presented as a verbal adjective, the earth as a result has become perturbing and worrisome)) in this way because of you (*ba *abuwr atah – with regard to what you have done, thereby as a result of you).

With hard work, strenuous labor, and challenging physical effort (*ba itsabown – with the application of considerable energy, stretched physically, suffering aches and pains while toiling with vexing implications, even grief), you will continually consume from it (akal hy – you will devour it and be fed by it with ongoing and emphatic implications (qal imperfect energetic nun second-person masculine singular)) all the days (kol yowmym) of your lives (*chayyk atah – in the manner of your lives).” (*Bare syth / In the Beginning / Genesis 3:17)

Lesson One: Listen to Yahowah.

Lesson Two: For a Positive Outcome, Follow His Advice.

Lesson Three: Do Not Value Human Words Over God.

Lesson Four: Do Not Make a Habit of Annoying God.

Lesson Five: Yahowah’s Promises Are Reliable.

Lesson Six: Engage and Contribute to Impress God.

Lesson Seven: If you want to understand Yahowah, be especially observant and contemplative.

In this case, the fall of man became inevitable because Adam did not listen and showed no initiative. The man paid no attention to anything God said and he contributed nothing, essentially killing the relationship.

Mankind has consistently valued its own rhetoric over Yahowah’s instructions. Religion is the consequence. Moreover, religion has backfired on women because it is used by men to control them. The difference between teaching and tyranny is not only enormous, the value of one and the cost of the other is a lesson humanity has not yet grasped.

Yahowah’s issue with mankind is habitual behavior rather than the chance mistake. The instruction regarding the Tree was consistently conveyed in the imperfect, which is to say don't continually devour it. But, both Chawah and Adam admitted that their consumption was ongoing. The reason that this is important is that we are no longer guilty of poor judgment once we learn from our mistakes and choose a better course of action. This is why Yahowah asks us to walk away from the confounding nature of Babel rather than insist that we never venture in that direction.

This known, it is one thing to have been misled and then to have come upon the truth, giving up the religious lie for the joys of the relationship. It is another to have been shown what Yahowah expects of us, to have embraced it, and then to turn against what you had learned to satiate a personal need. There is no revolving door. You can enter the Covenant on Yahowah's terms, and you can leave it on yours, but if you do, there is no coming back. You will have proven that you cannot be trusted.

We are reminded that this whole story played out around the Tree of Knowledge. Its fruit was for another time and other men. But even then, to covet it and then reject it is a crime with a serious consequence and cost.

By prematurely releasing evil on a world ill equipped to suppress it with sound instruction, *ha admah | the Earth was cursed for a long while, as the growth of man was stymied. We became annoying to God. The most debilitating of these plagues would be man's propensity to conceive gods in his image. And, of course, through no fault of his own, it would make the job of *ha adamah | the Bloody Red Man of the Earth all the more difficult ~ even at times exasperating and infuriating.

The surest way to prove one's worth with God is to engage, offering something of value. As was the case with the Ark, Yahowah has provided a full set of instructions, so now the burden is on us. We either act, or God will pass us by and find someone who will listen and engage. Lazy and listless dependents are not good partners. Therefore, for one life to become two lives, we must contribute during the first of them.

Such are the lessons of the Garden. Such has been the case with the reestablishment and growth of the Tree. It is why this story has been told this way. Are you wiser for it?

It is seldom discussed, mostly as a result of misleading translations, but Adam and Chawah were assessed and treated similarly. Itsabown* was applied to both. Life would be challenging by design and necessity. This is God's intent since we were told at the outset that Adam was placed in the Garden to pay attention to it and to work in it. Contributory labor and productive industry are not a punishment because work has its rewards. Life's greatest achievements are produced when we collaborate with Yahowah.

Adam was coddled in the Garden. That would not be the case once dismissed from it. And yet, even amidst the briars, a choter would emerge from *ha adamah and eventually restore the relationship...at least for some. This, like so much of the Towrah, is written such that what begins harshly can lead in one or two directions ~ to degeneration and death or to restoration and life. Your choice...

“Disgusting thornbushes that do not bear fruit (wa gowts – detestable and loathsome unproductive vegetation and abhorrent and irritating plants, twisted and splinter-like as an awakening during the summer) and thistles used to goad and control (wa dardar – prickly plants which are of no value and are used to restrict access and which choke out productive plants) it will produce (tsamach – it will sprout and grow, bringing forth) for you (*la atah –concerning you).

So, you will consume (*wa akal – you will devour for a while (qal perfect second-person masculine singular)) these plants (eth eseb – the vegetation and herbage; akin to asah* – the product of work) of the open environs (sadeh – of the expansive cultivated fields outside the walled enclosure). (*Bare*syth* / Genesis 3:18)

By the sweat (*ba ze*ah*) of your brow (ap atah – nostrils), you will eat bread and devour war (akal lechem* –

you will consume baked grains as food while fighting and struggling) until the Restoring Witness returns to transform you (ad shuwb atah – up to the point the everlasting testimony changes and restores you, bringing you back (qal infinitive construct)) by way of ha *adamah | the Bloody Red Man of the Earth or unto the ground (el ha adamah – to the ground), because (ky – for this reason) from it and by it (*min hy – as a result of it) you were obtained and will be received at a moment in time (laqach – you were grasped and will be collected, you were brought forth and will be received at the proper period (qal perfect second person masculine singular)).

This is because (ky) you are a collection of particles comprising matter, even grayish dust and ash (apar atah – you are dirty), and among dust or by the ash (*wa *el apar – so within and unto dirt or fine particulate) you will return, either be brought back or restored forevermore (shuwb – you will be turned back again or changed and transformed with ongoing implications throughout time (qal imperfect second person masculine singular)).” (*Bare syth / In the Beginning / Genesis 3:19)

In the Garden, they had been given everything they needed for a joyous and fulfilling, even meaningful and productive life, but they offered nothing back in return. They were parasites, not partners. And that situation was not conducive to a meaningful relationship or sustained growth.

Therefore, now that they were out on their own, there would be more thorns than fruit. The vegetation would be seeking to protect itself from being eaten, such that to find food, man would have to work and adapt his environment to his needs. He would learn to work, be useful, and become valuable or he would die sooner rather than later.

The contrast remains palpable. Rather than labor harmoniously in the *Gan eden with Yahowah, making it better, thereby perfecting it, as God had intended, they contributed nothing. Instead of a combined effort to make us all better, the first time they are shown lifting a finger was to do precisely what they had been asked to reject. As a result, from now on, their focus would be on the more immediate and mundane issue of survival. The Earth was good, the most conducive planet to life in the universe, but nonetheless, bad outcomes lurked behind every prickly bush.

With the sparse knowledge they now possessed, they would either make good better or it would be bad. This is what they had chosen for themselves, so it was only fair. Having disregarded Yahowah's guidance, there would be a less appealing menu and effort would be required to prepare it for consumption.

It would be rough out there, even in an environment designed and finely tuned for life. Out in the wild, even lazy lions die. And if ever the two sides of lechem ~ bread and war ~ were relevant, it is now. The divergent definitions of lechem would become the story of man, the hallmark of civilization ~ bread or war!

It would remain this way, with our history demonstrating that bread would bring humans together and war would tear mankind apart. In the end, of course, we know from the prophets that war will become global, even as many starve. And if not for the arrival of the ad* | Restoring Witness, the human experience would be for naught. Without the transformation the ad* | Eternal Testimony provides, humans would remain estranged from God, ill-equipped to be trusted off of this planet.

Integrating His metaphors as is Yahowah's custom, *ha adamah that gave rise to adam*, the gan, and the ets*, as the ad*, will serve to determine whether man returns to the Garden or the dust of the Earth. Is man nothing more than a collection of earthen particles or is he to be restored into fellowship with God? Who among us will be purged by the ash of *ha adamah Parah rather than remain dirty, retaining their filth? Will you be among *ha adam allowed to return to the *Gan eden, restored forevermore by the ad*, ets Da*ath*, Choter, adamah Parah*, and Basar, who is Obed edowm and Yada?

While the statements chronicled in the 18th and 19th verses of *Bare*syth* / Genesis 3 complete the Garden narrative, if we were to simply move on at this point, many would miss the prophetic message that underlies the entire discussion. So, let's turn back the clock to the beginning of God's story. We were introduced to *ha adam and *ha adamah in *Bare*syth* 2:5 pursuant to the value of abad* | work. Remember...

“And then (wa) man (*adam) did not exist (*ayin) to work (*abad *eth) the earth (ha *adamah).” (*Bare*syth* 2:5) At the time, I pointed out that we would come back to where we began. And so we have.

Immediately thereafter, we were told that water rose from the depths in the presence of *ha adamah. This was shared to foretell how the final determination offered in *Bare*syth* / Genesis 3:19 would be fulfilled. God said...

“A subterranean supply of fresh water (*ed) rose up (*alah) out of (min) the Land (ha *erets). By this, He supplied water (wa shaqah *eth) to the whole (kol) face, presence, and appearance (pane) of ha *adamah | the Bloody Red Man of the Earth (ha *adamah – the soil).” (*Bare*syth* 2:6) As I pointed out then, Obed* is from abad* | work and Edowm* is adam* | man with the addition of a Wah | Y before the Mem | ~, which is the means to puncture the adamah* so that the subterranean waters are released.

Next, God reinforced the connection between *ha adam and *ha adamah via apar*. This is something that will loom large momentarily...

“Then (wa), Yahowah (YaHoWaH), Almighty (*elohym), formed (yasar) for association and accompaniment (*eth) the man (ha *adam) out of (min) the material substance, dust, and ash (*apar), of (min) the earth (ha *adamah). He blew (wa naphach) into his nostrils (ba aph huw) a neshamah | conscience, the capacity for rational thinking and good judgment, of recognizing the difference between right and wrong, discernment and discrimination (neshamah), for lives, restoring and sustaining lives (chayym). And the man (*wa ha adam) came to exist as (hayah) a soul, with consciousness, the ability to observe and respond (la nepesh), for life (chay).” (*Bare*syth* 2:7) In a moment, I’ll explain why the apar* | dirt and ash is relevant to the restoration of adam*, but for now, appreciate the contribution of our neshamah | conscience, the capacity for rational thinking and good judgment, of recognizing the difference between right and wrong, discernment and discrimination. Without it, there would only be one chay | life ending in death.

It is only when our neshamah | conscience augments our nepesh | consciousness, which is our ability to observe and respond during our chay | lifetime that we are trusted by God to leave this planet. And in this regard, eden* | עֵדֶן is our opportunity to Witness the Doorway to Life.

Moving from one statement to the next, Yahowah revealed that He was responsible for life and its growth, and that these things occurred in conjunction with *ha adamah | the Bloody Red Man of the Earth, who is related to the two Ets* | Trees ~ Chayym and *Da*ath*...

“Yahowah (יהוה), who is God Almighty (elohym*), He enabled life to sprout up and grow (tsamach) from (min) *ha Adamah (*ha adamah). Every aspect of (kol) the tree to provide counsel and advice through diligence and effort on the entirety of the plan for the purpose of overcoming challenges to advocate the proper response (ets*) is delightful, desirable, and pleasing, as he is fruitful in delivering a productive and treasured harvest (chamad) to visually portray that which is clear and comprehensible, conveying a supernatural revelation (*la mar*eh*) and as a beneficial and good, productive and pleasing thing (wa towb) to consume for nourishment (*la ma*akal*). *Ha ets | the Tree (*ha ets) of ha Chayym | the Lives (ha chayym) was in the center (ba tawek) of ha Gan | the Sheltered Garden (ha gan)

along with (wa) Ha °ets | the Tree (ha °ets) of Ha Da°ath | the Knowledge (ha da°ath) of Good and Productive, Valuable and Beneficial (towb) and (wa) Bad, Wrong and Corrupt, Inappropriate and Ignorant (ra°).” (Bare°syth 2:9)

Included within these associations we found ha °adam, ha °adamah, and Obed Edowm*, a neshamah, nepesh, and chayym, even apar* and abad*. Then we discovered the °ets serving as a mar°eh providing Chayym and the other offering Da°ath. They were firmly rooted in the soil even as the Garden was initially populated. Then, depiction of the °ets Da°ath brought us forward in time to the Choter, where the depictions and purpose overlapped using the same terminology.

Thereafter, once Yahowah realized that man would have to grow up and toughen up to be an interesting, productive, and reliable partner, we were introduced to the Fall of Man along with the rise of the Basar | Human Herald to encourage man’s recovery.

“So (wa), Yahowah (Yahowah), Almighty (elohym*), He caused the fall (naphal) of man (al ha °adam*) for being inactive due to a lack of initiative and diligence (tardemah). He slept, unmotivated and sedentary (yashen), and so He grasped hold of (wa laqach) one (echad*) of his ribs, symbolic of that which was limp and lame, from his side (min tsela° huw°). He sutured up and isolated (sagar) the place beneath it, replacing it over time (thachath hy°) with a Basar | Human Herald (basar).” (Bare°syth / Genesis 2:21) That’s an eyeopener to be sure.

The role of the Herald was officially announced by Adam. And what’s surprising about this is that his declaration is found within his lone recorded response to God...

“Then, the man (wa ha °adam), said (amar*), ‘This (zo°th) is the way to conduct one’s life, the pattern to be followed, and the motivation to push forward (la pa°am), its essential nature, the very substance of existence (etsem*) out of (min) my essence (etsem °any*), a Basar | Human Herald as a living being able to communicate intelligently (basar) conveying my desire to share positive thoughts as a herald for humanity (*min basar any).” (Bare^esyth 2:23) The Basar | Human Herald would speak the words to help man rise from the place he had fallen. While speaking in the flesh, his message would assure that a select few would transcend the constraints of the physical realm and soar through spacetime with God.

It was then that we were offered a harbinger of the Covenant with Abraham and Sarah, foreshadowing the initial condition of the Beryth. This reflects the condition Yahowah imposed, that we not only walk away from the Babel of integrating politics and religion, but also from our father’s house ~ the family of man to be in the Family of God...

“Accordingly, therefore, it is also right that (al ken*) a man (iysh*) shall leave (azab*) his father (*eth *ab huw) and his mother (*wa *eth *em huw) and engage, becoming close (wa dabaq) with his woman (*ba *ishah huw). And they shall exist as (wa hayah) a single unified (echad*) basar | human proclamation regarding heralding the pronouncements of life while in the flesh (la basar).” (Bare^esyth 2:24)

Having established the purpose of the Basar | Herald, Yahowah introduced Yada | One who Knows. This is because they would not only be one and the same, his mission would require defanging the serpent of religious deception...

“So (wa), the venomous serpent (nachash) replied (amar*) to (el*) the woman (*ha ishah), ‘You absolutely will not die (lo^{} muwth muwth*). (Bare^esyth 3:4) Because surely by contrast (ky), God (elohym*), He is fully cognizant of and totally familiar with Yada, knowing (yada^e – He is aware of and recognizes Yada such that He understands (qal (genuinely) participle (a verbal adjective functioning as an active noun) absolute (unbound) masculine singular)) that instead, truthfully (ky), during (ba) the day (yowm) of akal* | active Consumption (akal*) by you as mankind (atem*) from it and as a result of him (*min huw), then (wa) your eyes and perceptions, especially the vision of men (ayn atem), will be opened to be perceptive such that they will be able to comprehend and decide (paqach).

Then, you will actually be at that time (wa hayah) suitably similar and more comparable (ka) to God (elohym*), coming to know Yada by being discerning and discriminating, thereby comprehending (*yada – they will at the proper time recognize and respect Yada and become familiar (qal (actually) participle (a verbal adjective functioning as an active noun) construct (bound to towb | good) masculine plural)) good, that which is beneficial, productive, pleasing, and correct (towb) and bad, that which is wrong, disappointing and detrimental, malicious, and distressing (*ra).” (*Bare*syth* 3:5) Familiarity with God’s plan, the ability to discern Yahowah’s name, the recognition of the Garden’s Trees, and an appreciation that we were being afforded the opportunity to return to where we began would serve as Yada’s legacy and define his purpose.

The Adversary was scripted to tell the truth, fully aware that everyone, including Chawah, would misconstrue his message. And in response, Yahowah would engage Yada | One who Knows to convey His Qowl | Voice through His Ruwach | Spirit on the proper day expecting mankind to eventually listen and learn. So, even before the fall, there was a plan put in place to ascend.

And if you recall, this is how it played out. The woman would covet the Tree of Knowledge long before his time. And believing that they had been shrewd, their scheme was exposed, beginning a long and difficult path back home...

“Then (wa), the woman (ishah*) looked and saw (*ra*ah*) that indeed (ky) *ha ets | the Tree (*ha ets) was beautiful and pleasing (towb) as a source of food to consume (*la ma*akal*), and that (ky) it was visually appealing and desirable, even eliciting cravings (*ta*awah huw* la ha ayn). So (wa), she coveted (chamad) *ha ets | the tree (*ha ets) to impart insights, inspire success, and convey understanding (sakal). She grasped hold and seized, taking (laqach) from (min) its fruit and his harvest (*pary huw) and ate (*wa akal). Then (wa), she also gave it (*nathan gama) to (la) her man (iysh hy) who was in a relationship with her (im hy), and then he ate (*wa akal). (*Bare*syth 3:6*)

When (wa) their two eyes (ayn shanaym hem*) were able to see (paqach), they recognized (*wa yada) as a result (ky), their nakedness and exposure as they had become became clever and shrewd (eyrowm hem*). So (wa), they lay hold of and seized (taphar) an ascending shoot or twig (aleh*) of fig (*ta*enah*), preparing (*wa asah) for themselves (la hem) a girdle (chagorah). (*Bare*syth 3:7*)

Then with ongoing implications over time, they actually heard (*wa shama) that which pertains to the Qowl | Voice (eth qowl*) of Yahowah (YaHoWaH), Almighty (elohym*), as He independently, and on His own initiative, unaffected by any other influences, was traveling about (halak) pursuant to (ba) ha Gan | the enclosed and sheltered Garden (ha gan) concerning (la) the Ruwach | Spirit (ruwach) of the day (ha yowm).

Therefore, the man, Adam* (*wa ha adam), and his woman (ishah huw) withdrew as he moved away by himself, no longer assisted, influenced, or helped by anyone (*chaba) from (min) the presence (pane) of Yahowah (YaHoWaH), Almighty God (elohym*), in the midst of (ba tawek) ha Gan | the Sheltered Garden's (ha gan) ets* | Tree (ets*).” (*Bare*syth 3:8*)

Coveting the Tree of Knowledge, craving its insights, the woman sought to claim his fruit and resulting harvest for herself and her man. But all it did was expose them, such that, believing they were clever, they were actually laid bare. But eventually, the stick they sought to control would become the Choter ~ the foretold Stem off of the ets Da*ath*. Then, over time, the Qowl | Voice of God would emerge from of the Tree of Knowledge to lead mankind back to the Gan, filled as he would be with the Ruwach | Spirit of Yahowah.

And so now you know the actual story God was trying to convey. Six-thousand years after expelling us, He would facilitate our return. The story wasn't about the estrangement of man from God but, instead, the resumption of our relationship. The Garden will be reopened on Sukah | Shelters, October 7th, 2033 / year 6000 Yah after the fulfillment of Taruw^{ah} and Kipurym by Dowd and Yada.

With the players properly positioned, I have an additional connection which must be understood to complete God's redemptive narrative. Yahowah wants us to appreciate the value of the apar* in man's restoration. By doing so, we come to understand why God concluded His Garden narrative with...

“Disgusting thornbushes that do not bear fruit, detestable and loathsome unproductive vegetation and abhorrent irritating plants, twisted and splinter-like as an awakening during the summer (wa qowts), and thistles used to goad and control, prickly plants which are of no value and are used to restrict access and which choke out productive life (wa dardar) it will produce, bringing forth (tsamach) for you (*la atah). So, you will consume (*wa akal) these plants (eth eseb) of the open environs (sadeh). (*Bare*syth* 3:18)

By the sweat (*ba ze*ah*) of your brow (ap atah), you will eat bread and devour war (akal lechem*) until the Restoring Witness returns to transform you, up to the point the everlasting testimony changes and restores you, bringing you back (ad shuwb atah) by way of *ha adamah | the Bloody Red Man of the Earth or unto the ground (el ha adamah), because (ky) from it and by it (*min hy) you were obtained and will be received at a moment in time (laqach).

This is because (ky) you are a collection of particles comprising matter, even grayish dust and ash (apar atah), and among dust or by the ash (*wa *el apar) you will return, either be brought back or restored forevermore (shuwb)."
(*Bare*syth* / In the Beginning / Genesis 3:19)

Therefore, in the end, after a particularly irritating time of war when life becomes particularly challenging, as God's people are being goaded, even denied access to their land, God has promised to provide a Restoring Witness to bring His people back home. As the adamah Parah*, he will offer to transform them to restore the relationship ~ presenting those who survive with the opportunity to grasp God's hand and reenter the Gan. At this moment, the remaining mortal remnant will either be restored by the ash of the adamah Parah*, or those who deny his sacrifice, will return to dust.

But there is more to the story because, not only does this play out just ten days prior to our King's return, Dowd is the groom, this woman is his bride, and Yada is making the sacrifice to bring them back together. And even more revealing, Dowd is proof that men can meet and exceed God's expectations. He listened to Yahowah and did as God asked. He loved learning and became an effective teacher. He was industrious, building the nation and defending Yisra^{*el}. And when he stumbled, he learned from his mistakes and proved himself reliable by reengaging, always wiser for the experience.

The explanation for how Yada, ElYah, and Dowd engage collaboratively to prepare the final remnant to return to Eden is presented in the fourth book of the Towrah. For it, we turn to Bamidbar / Numbers 5 where we are enlightened by the story of the restoration of the Adulterous Woman. She represents the passively religious among Jews today. This narrative begins with God explaining that His people have been contaminated with a religious plague necessitating their isolation...

"Yahowah (YaHoWaH) spoke (dabar) to Moseh (Mosheh) to say (*la amar), (Bamidbar 5:1) 'Provide instruction and direction (tsawah) regarding (eth*) the Children of Yisra*el (*beny Yisra*el*) that they voluntarily send out (wa shalach) from the encampment (min ha machaneh) everyone who is infectious, whether mentally disoriented with chronic anxiety, hopelessly confused, plagued by a pandemic disease, or leprous (*kol tsira), in addition to everyone (wa kol) with oozing sores discharging copious amounts of puss, including those with venereal disease (zuwb), as well as everyone whose soul is contaminated, polluted, or defiled with religious idolatry (wa kol tame nepesh*). (Bamidbar / Numbers 5:2)

Both male and female, men and women, boys and girls as a memorable and restoring witness (*min zakar ad nagebah), you should consistently send them away to outside the encampment, putting them apart from where the community is living (*shalach el min chuwts la ha machaneh shalach hem) so that they do not contaminate, corrupt, or infect (wa lo tame) their community (eth machaneh hem*) in which, for the benefit of the relationship and to show the correct path to get the most out of life (asher*), I dwell (any shakan*) in their midst (ba tawek hem).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 5:3)

In the preamble to the cleansing of the “Adulterous Woman,” Yahowah is, by using contagious pathogens as a metaphor, telling us how we should deal with those whose toxic political and religious ideas are contagious. Isolation is His recommendation. As a result, we should expect the religiously corrupt to be expressly excluded from the return to the Garden. And for those who are allowed in, this is something which must be resolved. And for that, God has a plan.

“And, therefore (wa ken), the Children of Yisra*el (*beny Yisra*el*) did so (asah*) and sent them out (*wa shalach eth hem) such that they were apart in a public place outside the encampment of the community (el min chuwts la ha machaneh*), consistent with the beneficial manner (*ka asher) Yahowah (Yahowah) had spoken (dabar) to Moseh (el Mosheh). The Family Engaging and Enduring with God (beny Yisra*el) did (*asah) what was right (ken).” (Bamidbar / In the Wilderness / Numbers 5:4)

Yahowah, having designed us, knows how to keep us safe. And in this regard, God realizes that misleading political and religious platitudes are as infectious and deadly as any disease. In our world, this would make social media, and particularly X, toxic.

It should have been obvious to everyone long ago that when Yahowah speaks of “adultery,” He is addressing those who are disloyal to Him and His Son, cheating with false gods and fake messiahs. He is unconcerned over girlfriends or even the number of wives.

“Yahowah (YaHoWaH) spoke (dabar) to Moseh (Mosheh) to say (la *amar), (Bamidbar 5:5) ‘Declare this to (dabar *el) the Children of Yisra*el (beny Yisra*el), Branded with a stigma as a sign of being possessed and controlled by another (ky), is a man or a woman (*iysh *ow *ishah) who chooses to continually act upon or habitually engage in (*asah) any part of (min kol) that which is offensive and wrong with ensuing guilt for those missing the way and leading others astray (chata*ah). By acting in an adulterous and unfaithful manner, being defiant and treacherous in an attempt to be superior to (la ma'al ma'al ba) Yahowah (Yahowah), the soul (wa ha nepesh) of this person (ha *adam) will be deemed guilty and will suffer the consequence (asham) of this (ha hy).’” (Bamidbar / Numbers 5:6)

Yahowah was speaking through Moseh for our benefit because the Children of Yisra*el made the single worst decision in human history. Not long ago, and in His presence, after He had freed them from being enslaved under conditions which had become tantamount to genocide, they told God to shut up and go away. They said that they never wanted to see Him or hear from Him again. This is why Yahowah spoke indirectly through His Prophets for the next one thousand years. This is why they were wandering around in the wilderness ~ still outside the Promised Land.

The Yisra^{*}elite problem progressed. They strayed so far from Yahowah that they forgot His name. And so, He did not intervene on their behalf and allowed ten of the twelve tribes to be hauled off into oblivion. But even then, even with the best of the twelve, Yahuwdah, after a while there were none with whom to communicate.

This is why He asked and then equipped the Nakar | Observant Foreigner as the Man from ^{*}Edowm, to serve as His Qowl | Voice to awaken Yisra^{*}el as a Basar | Herald. Otherwise, they would have isolated themselves to such an extent that they would have stepped so far away from the Shabuw^oah and Taruw^oah ingatherings, and the sacrifice of the ^{*}adamah Parah, that they would have missed the Kipurym Homecoming, forfeiting their opportunity to reenter the Garden.

Being wrong and missing the way, especially leading others astray, has become the Yisra^{*}elite stigma – a brand they have seared upon themselves. From God's perspective, it is adulterous and offensive. It has become a sign of defiance, even of revolt as so many have falsely claimed to speak for the God they silenced – talking over Him in the Talmud and New Testament. The consequence is lingering guilt. And it is this rotten residue that must be expunged even after the enlightened have stopped adding to it.

For those desirous of being included in the Shabuw^oah Qatsyr and Taruw^oah Laqat, their souls must be purged by Dowd, with them having allowed him to take their guilt with him into She^{}owl during Matsah. However, for the remnant left behind during the final ingathering, and with no intervening Chag Matsah to remove this fungus prior to Yahowah's return, it will have to be tossed upon the mutilated carcass of the ^{}Adamah Parah for incineration.

This known, it bears repeating, the primary use of adultery in the Towrah has nothing to do with sexuality or with a failed marriage. The men and women portrayed in the Towrah were not monogamous. They were never criticized for having more than one lover and they were not encouraged to forego polygamous relationships. Therefore, what Yahowah is addressing here and throughout His Towrah and Naby* makes it obvious that His concern is people cheating on the Covenant relationship by being religious.

For the past twenty-four years, I have filled the pages of Yada Yahowah with this message. We must come to appreciate what God considers right and wrong, good and bad, and take the initiative to acknowledge where we have erred in comparison. Then after doing so, we should cast that which was wrong aside, separating ourselves from all that separates us from God. It is then that we are subject to being restored. And it is only then that we can return Home.

Recognizing that most everyone has been led astray by religious affiliations and political parties is the first step in the right direction. Disassociating from both is the second. And in this case, Yahowah's instruction was presented in the hitpa'el stem which states that this admission and resolve must be of our own initiative. This means, the barrier to entry for most is the filth they continue to carry with them, religious rubbish God will not allow in His Home unless and until it is acknowledged and purged.

“On their own initiative, unaffected by others, they should understand, acknowledge, and then cast aside (wa yadah) their guilt from having been wrong and misleading (eth chata*ah hem*) that they had engaged in up to this point in time (asher asah). Then, he will be able to return, transformed and restored (wa shuwb) with the first and foremost making a reconciling guilt offering for him (eth asham huw ba ro*sh huw), adding something over and beyond the fifth to it (wa chamyshy huw yasaph *al huw). And so, for the benefit of the relationship (*wa la asher) he will offer this as a gift at that point in time to (nathan) the one who was guilty and liable for wrongdoing (asham la

huw).*” (Bamidbar / Numbers 5:7)

It is a simple, straightforward process. Come to know and acknowledge that religion and politics are misleading and that God wants us to disassociate from both. Cast these villains aside. Recognize that Yahowah has a plan to resolve the guilt incurred prior to accepting the truth about Him and His way.

Almost anyone can be restored and come to Yahowah by acting upon this message once restitution is made to resolve prior guilt. Some will capitalize upon what Dowd has done for us on Matsah when he removed our shame and carried it with him into She*owl, where he deposited it, never to be seen again. However, eight years from now, the final Passover, UnYeasted Bread, and Firstborn Children prior to the King’s return will have come and gone. Those who were among the last to observe Chag Matsah and capitalize upon the Messiah’s gift will be among the souls gleaned during the fifth Mow*ed – Taruw*ah. Those who do not, who will be left behind, will need to have their guilt removed by Yada serving as the *Adamah Parah. It is his sacrifice as the Productive Bull that will provide the final opportunity to come clean and come home prior to Dowd’s arrival.

Therefore, in the preamble to the story of the Adulterous Woman, Yahowah is revealing that there will be a time when those who were deliberately passed over and excluded from participating in the fifth Mow*ed due to their lingering guilt, and who have failed to avail themselves of Dowd’s sacrifice, will need immediate restitution. And for this, Yahowah’s final reconciler will offer to remove the stigma and stain of religion and have it obliterated, doing so with his basar | mortal body.

As foretold, the *Adamah Parah’s gift of reconciliation will be presented during and beyond the fifth Mow*ed. He will offer his life to restore the remnant of Yisra*el on the cusp of the Messiah’s return. Consistent with the prophecy of the *Adamah Parah, the Bull’s sacrifice will cleanse the remnant’s souls by accepting and then incinerating their religious and political malfeasance.

A remnant of Yisra*elites will be in this predicament with only days remaining to Yahowah's return because, heretofore, they have discredited and denied their Ga'al | Kinsman Redeemer. And so, while he will be returning to his city, the survivors will have to experience transformation and restoration another way. And that is the function of the final Zarowa* who, after devoting himself to cultivating the Qatsyr and Laqat, will offer restitution by honoring the promise foretold of Taruw*ah's Bull. And as the hofal stem suggests, he will be as compelling and forceful as words and deeds allow. There will be no better option or a day after tomorrow for those who look elsewhere.

What follows reveals that even after the Time of Yisra*el's Troubles, the conclusion of a horrific war, the testimony of two compelling Witnesses, the completion of two magnificent Harvests, and the spectacle of the *Adamah Parah, Yisra*elites will remain hesitant. They will not be running to ElYah to capitalize on this gift from God. Many will be as they have always been, stubborn and recalcitrant. But at this late moment, Yahowah will not allow His Zarowa's sacrifice to be annulled. With this being the final solution to His Jewish problem, He will assure its success. And as we read these words, it is evident that the Bull and Ram, the Prince and his King, will work together to transform and restore this remnant of Yisra*el so that they are allowed back into the Garden.

“So if there are some to approach this individual (*wa *im *ayin la ha iysh) to be redeemed (ga'al), to be transformed and restored (shuwb), the guilt offering providing restitution (*ha asham) will be for those who the removal of guilt for reconciliation (el huw* ha asham) will change and restore (ha shuwb) to approach (la) Yahowah (Yahowah). Accordingly, the one acting in the role of priest (la ha kohen) in addition to (min la bad) the Ram (ayil*) of Reconciliations (ha Kipurym), for the benefit of the relationship (asher*), will make amends through the removal and purging of guilt (kaphar) with him and for him (ba huw *al huw).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 5:8)

The purpose of all of this last-minute maneuvering will be to prepare the reluctant remnant of the Children of Yisra*el to survive Yahowah's return and reenter the Garden on Sukah – something they have not done in six millennia. It is why we have collaborated on the composition of Yada Yahowah. It is why the Ram, Bull, and Goat will do as Yahowah requests. Will you?

This is brilliantly scribed. The two animals sacrificed to provide reconciliation on Kipurym are a Bull and a Goat – Yada and *Elyah. The *ayil | Ram, whose sacrifice was offered during Pesach, will be officiating throughout the Day of Reconciliations. Therefore, by speaking of the “one acting in the role of the priest in addition to the Ram of Reconciliation who amends the relationship by offering to remove guilt,” Dowd will be joining *Elyah. This would place *Elyah before the Mercy Seat of the Ark of the Covenant beside Dowd with the Bull's blood.

*Elyah and Dowd are capitalizing upon what Yahowah arranged during and beyond Taruw*ah with the sacrifice of the adamah Parah | Bloody Red Man and Productive Bull. According to the first Zarowa, and now in the presence of the second Zarowa*, God is saying that the third Zarowa* will have made a special contribution to Yisra*el, lifting them up to be with Him. His gift of life will apply to all who are set apart unto God among the Children of Yisra*el.

The idea of God going over and beyond the fifth Miqra* is not only reinforced in this next pronouncement, the very presence of the *Adamah Parah sacrifice after the Taruw*ah Gleaning demonstrates that Yahowah has gone over and beyond the annual intent of the fifth Mow*ed to save His people from themselves. This will be their last chance for romance.

“And the entire offer on Taruw*ah makes a special contribution to being lifted up and raised as a gift (wa kol taruwmah) for everyone who is set apart (la kol qodesh) among the Children of Yisra*el (*ben Yisra*el*). For those who, to enjoy the benefits of the relationship (asher), approach and are present (qarab) with regard to the one acting in the role of priest (la ha kohen) regarding this (la huw), he will continue to exist (hayah)." (Bamidbar / Numbers 5:9)

I am delighted to see the second reference to Taruw*ah, with the first being "over and beyond the fifth." This is because the Adulterous Woman, representing Yisra*el, is being brought back into a relationship with her King as a result of what occurs over and beyond Taruw*ah with the sacrifice of the *Adamah Parah on the 24th of September, 2033.

When Yahowah revealed that there would be a special dispensation for the reluctant remnant of Yisra*el on the eve of His return with His Son on Kipurym, I had been curious to know their ultimate fate – and here we have it. They aren't necessarily reconciled, much less saved, but simply afforded an extension of life. They are being given a second chance, the opportunity to respond differently to Yahowah now that they are in His presence once again. They are being allowed back into the Garden so that they can demonstrate that they are worthy to graduate from it and spend an eternity in God's company. Clarifying this conclusion, God said...

"Each person (wa iysh) set apart to Him (qodesh huw) to approach Him (la huw*) will have chosen to continue to exist (hayah). By approaching the one acting in the role of priest (la ha kohen) who is offering this gift (nathan), a person benefits from the relationship (*iysh asher), continuing to exist (la huw hayah)." (Bamidbar 5:10)

The entire procedure is designed to purify souls and extend lives. It is the prelude to reentering Eden.

This fabulous introduction brings us to the misunderstood and never previously applied test to remove the aforementioned religious infidelity of Yisra*el. Therefore, this isn't about one woman, but many people. And the suitor is the most extraordinary man who ever lived.

“Yahowah (YaHoWaH) spoke (dabar) to Moseh (Mosheh) to say (la *amar), (Bamidbar 5:11) ‘Declare this to (dabar *el) the Children of Yisra*el (beny Yisra*el), and express in words to them (wa *amar la hem), “When branded and stigmatized (ky), the most important person’s (*iysh *iysh) wife (ishah huw) will be untrustworthy and unreliable regarding the relationship (wa ma*al) with him (ha huw*) uppity, dishonest, and grievously disloyal (ma*al).”” (Bamidbar / Numbers 5:12)

I listened to a rabbi insist today that the only reason that the Messiah would arrive was because of their ongoing religious diligence mandating his arrival. That would certainly qualify as uppity, dishonest, and unreliable, and therefore even prophetic in an odd sort of way. And that is why God’s treatise on how to return to the Messiah and King’s good graces is being told using the metaphor of an unfaithful and unreliable woman. She is plagued with the pandemic God condemned in the preamble to this process when He declared that His people had been cheating on Him. And even worse than the cold shoulder Jews have given Yahowah, their treatment of Dowd has been more grievous. He is not the Messiah they seek.

“Then a person (wa *iysh) crawls into bed to sleep with her (shakab *iysh eth hy). He lies down to procreate offspring (shikabah zera*) but it is concealed (wa *alam) from the eyes of her man (min *ayin iysh hy) such that she is undetected for a while (wa satar). And yet, she is dirty and defiled, even idolatrous (wa hy* tame*). But a witness does not exist (wa *ed ayn) against her (ba hy), so she was not caught (wa hy* lo* taphas).” (Bamidbar 5:13)

Such has been the case with Yisra*el. God’s chosen people have chosen to breed defiant children who continue to be drenched in the filth of their religious and political schemes. She remains dirty and defiled, largely because no one has dared expose and condemn Judaism for fear of being slandered as an anti-Semite. But let it be known, rabbis are largely responsible for the proliferation of Christianity and Islam in addition to Judaism and antisemitic Marxist politics. And these are the four greatest foes of the Jewish people. As they currently exist, Dowd cannot lead them or save them, and Yahowah cannot be anywhere near them.

“Then he will have passed over him (*wa *abar *al huw) a zealous spirit, seeking exclusivity in the relationship (*ruwach qina*ah*) and he will become passionately jealous, desiring the undivided attention (*wa qana) of his female companion (eth *ishah huw). But she has defiled and sullied herself (wa hy tame).” (Bamidbar 5:14)

The Messiah and King wants Yisra*el back – or what’s the purpose of returning? But since that cannot occur if she remains slathered with the infidelity of religion, or remains stained by political posturing, Yahowah is encouraging Yisra*el to come clean after 3,500 years of rebellion. So, something, or someone, is going to have to relent.

“And this individual should come with this female of his (*wa bow*ha *iysh *eth ishah huw) to the priest (el ha kohen) and he should bring (wa bow) a contribution to approach (eth qarban) regarding her (al hy), a tenth measure of barley flour (asyry ha *eyphah qemah sa*orah*) without pouring out oil on it (lo yatsaq al huw shemen*), and no offering on it of frankincense (wa lo nathan al huw labownah*) because (ky) a gift (minchah) of desire and passion (*qina*ah*) for him (*huw) is a gift (minchah) of remembrance (zikarown) to be mindful of (zakar) guilt from the liability of religious corruption (awon*).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 5:15)

And he should approach with her (*wa qarab *eth hy) pursuant to the role of the priest (kohen) and present her standing (*wa amad) to approach the presence (la paneh) of Yahowah (Yahowah).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 5:16)

The inclusion of barley speaks of Bikuwrym, suggesting that the best option for Yisra*el would be to capitalize on Dowd’s gift of Pesach and Matsah such that they are readmitted to the Family on Bikuwrym. The oil, representing the Spirit, normally added to the wave offering on Bikuwrym, is to be excluded, because the mortal remnant of Israel will have forfeited the benefits of Chag Matsah, such that the returnees are to remain mortal for a time, which is why the oil is excluded.

As for frankincense, it is a fragrant resin used to mask unpleasant odors. And so, there will be no covering up her stench. It must be removed. Further, frankincense was imported into Judea from Arabia and elsewhere, making it a foreign substance. And while it was prescribed for incense during the Mow^eedym, by excluding it, Yisra^el wasn't going to come clean in this way. There would be no smokescreen and no covering up her religious corruption. It will be purged.

Yahowah is going to serve as the officiant as the nuptials progress. For this to occur at this late date, *Elyah will oversee the remedy offered by the *Adamah Parah as the Master of Ceremonies – referred to as a priest on this occasion. He has already rehearsed the role, excoriating the religious and political in Yisra^el while sacrificing a bull, surrounded by water, with God igniting the flames. And that is why the solution is presented as water and ash...

“The one acting as priest (wa ha kohen) should obtain (laqach) the set-apart water (maym qodesh) in a clay, earthenware, vessel (ba kaly cheres). And the priest (wa ha kohen) will obtain (laqach) from the pulverized ash and dust (*wa min ha apar), which, for the benefit of the relationship (asher*), have come to exist (hayah) within the flooring (ba qarqa^e) of the Tabernacle (miskan). He will place it as a gift (wa nathan) into the water (el ha maym*).” (Bamidbar / In the Wilderness / Numbers 5:17)

The apar* | ash and dust mixed with the waters released under the Temple Mount, will be used to test the moral remnant of Yahuwdym and Gowym to determine whether they can be trusted to return to Gan Eden. And that is why the narrative presented in the opening book of the Towrah concluded by acknowledging the role apar will play in the fate of people as we approach mankind's return to the Garden. It is to test a person's preparedness.

This is further evidence that a replica of the Tabernacle of the Witness will be erected on the Temple Mount and that the Bull will be burned in proximity to it. This is the same recipe that is prescribed in Bamidbar / Numbers 19. In fact, it was at this point in the proceedings that I returned to augment the prophetic portrayal of the *Adamah Parah due to the inclusion of *para...

“The one acting as the priest (wa kohen) will present the woman standing (amad *eth ha ishah) before the appearance (la paneh) of Yahowah (YaHoWaH). Then he will release (*wa para) the woman's head along with her toxicity, her gall, venom, and bitterness (eth ro*sh ha ishah).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 5:18 in part)

It is apparent that the one acting in the role of the priest is going to be drawing attention to the woman's head and, therefore, her inclinations and thinking, by cupping it in his hands. Symbolically then, he will *para | release it, along with her toxicity. And in this regard, it is interesting that *ro*sh* can be rendered three different ways, as “head,” as “leader,” or as “gall, venom, and bitterness.” All of this must be purged for Yisra*el's attitude, thinking, and judgment to be restored. But that is where it gets interesting because *para is a direct cognate of Par and Parah, the Bull who serves Yisra*el as the *Adamah Parah.

*Para, which means “to release, let loose, and emancipate” reveals, especially in this context, that the Par | Bull who becomes Parah | Productive contributes to the removal of Yisra*el's bitterness and toxicity. It is the result of a final *Yatsa | Exodus – this one from the continued propensity to be overtly political and religious which has kept Jews estranged from Messiah and God. As such, par can be seen “exposing and dismissing” or as “uncovering then absolving,” both of which result from the *Adamah Parah's sacrifice on Taruw*ah and the Par's | Bull's blood sprinkled upon the Mercy Seat of the Ark of the Covenant by Dowd on Kipurym.

Addressing the Parah's other traits, *para is used to describe a “shoot or stem which bears fruit” and of a “leader who offers freedom.” This is designed to call our attention to the Choter, as the *Ets Da°ath serving as the Zarowa° cultivating the harvests before becoming the *Adamah Parah. Note that the definition of parah is modified by adding the ah suffix to par | bull, rendering the result “productive and fruitful,” thereby “cultivating offspring through an abundant harvest.” This is a lovely way to integrate the benefits of the Zarowa° and Parah, the Choter and *Ets Da°ath.

In the original alphabet of the Towrah, Par | Bull was written Peh Rosh | רֹשׁ. These letters, as a mouth and head, indicate that this will be a man known for his thoughts and speech. It is also insightful to reveal that Parah, scribed Peh Rosh Hey is presented as רֹשׁהי. This affirms that the *Adamah Parah is human – with all three characters depicting key aspects of a thoughtful, observant, and talkative man. Therefore, the Productive and Fruitful Bull Pursuing the Harvest is an exceptionally vocal and reasonably intelligent individual pointing the way to God.

Continuing to explore this amazing pronouncement...

“Place as a gift (wa nathan) on the palms of her hands (al kaph hy) the sacrificial offering (minchah) of the memorable man (zikarown) apportioned as the sacrificial gift (minchah) for exclusivity in her relationship (*qina°ah hy). And in the hand of the one acting in the role of the priest (wa ba yad ha kohen), they will choose to have (hayah) the waters (maym) of vexing and provoking bitterness (ha mar) of the curse of harmful consequences (*ha arar).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 5:18)

The cure for Yisra°el, and the means to come clean and embrace both Messiah and God, are to accept the gift the *Adamah Parah is offering. He is being apportioned to Yisra°el to reattain exclusivity in the relationship, providing reconciliation.

The water mixed with ash is a gift from the sacrificial offering which is to be poured over the palms of her hands. And while Yisra^{el} has brought the pungent and bitter Waters of Marybah with her, this will wash it all away. And by combining the ashen residue of the sacrificial offering with water, our attention is directed back 2,888 years to when ^{*}EIYah performed the prophetic dress rehearsal for the main event.

The gift will be provided by a Zikarown | Memorable Man. And while Moseh and Dowd are both far more important and, indeed, memorable, Dowd is the bridegroom and Moseh is retired. So, this fellow is Yada, the third Zarowa^o, the final Witness, Herald of the King, and ^{*}Adamah Parah. Through the sacrifice of the Productive Bull, the curse of harmful consequences will be lifted from Yisra^{el}.

“The one acting in the role of priest (wa ha kohen) will have her swear an oath and make a solemn promise to earnestly affirm the truth regarding herself at this moment in time (shaba ^{}eth hy^{}). He will say to the woman (wa ^{}amar ^{}el ha ^{}ishah*), ‘If a person has not lounged with you (^{}im lo^{} shakab ^{}iysh ^{}eth ^{}atah*), and if you have not gone astray, turning away to (wa ^{}im lo^{*} satah) that which is filthy and defiled (tuma^oah) under your individual person (tachath ^{}iysh ^{}atah), you are released, pardoned, innocent, and free (naqah) from the waters (min maym) of vexing and provoking bitterness (ha mar) of the curse of harmful consequences (ha ^{}arar ha ^{}eleh).”* (Bamidbar / Numbers 5:19)

While shakab can denote aimlessly laying around and lounging about, it can also speak of climbing into bed with others, such that the analogies of listlessness and infidelity in a fractured relationship can both depict the state of affairs between Adam and Chawah and now Dowd and Yisra^{el}. This is similar to the presentation in Howsha^o / Hosea, where Yisra^{el} is equated to a religious prostitute, prompting God to announce a divorce. And just as is the case in Howsha^o, this is something which must be resolved prior to Yahowah returning with Dowd for the Family Reunion to occur on Kipurym.

Therefore, in this prophetic statement, Yisra*el is being asked to renew her wedding vows, become trustworthy, and actively engage. But since she is not far removed from the horrid examples of Chawah, Miryam, and Mykel, a cleanup is required. This being the case, Yahowah is proposing a solution...

“By contrast, branded and stigmatized as a sign of ownership by another (*wa at ky), you, having gone astray (satah) beneath and oppressed by your man (*tachath *iysh atah), so indeed (wa ky), you are polluted and unclean (tame). A person is being offered to you as a gift (*nathan *iysh ba atah – he is bestowed to you as a gift with you), with him having laid down his life (eth shakobeth huw), separate and apart to disassociate from your choice of men (*min bala*dey *iysh atah).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 5:20)

Religion is stigmatizing. It is a sign that one's soul is owned and controlled by another, particularly rabbis. And in this case, since most women are controlled by the wrong men, a man will lay down his life to disassociate from them.

It's funny in a way. The very gowy the Yisra*elites will want to dismiss for being a filthy Gentile will be the most effective means of cleansing them. The adamah Parah* | Fruitful Man on the Ground will be horizontal at this time, having laid down his life so that Israel might live.

“The one acting in the role of priest (wa ha kohen) will have the woman swear an oath and make a solemn promise to earnestly affirm her trustworthiness at this time (*shaba *eth ha ishah) by way of (ba) *Shabuw*ah* | the Promise of Seven (*Shabuw*ah*) for the curse, even the hindrance of Allah (*ha alah).

The one acting in the role of priest (wa ha kohen) should say (amar*) to the woman (*la ha ishah), ‘Yahowah (Yahowah) wants to offer the gift (nathan) for you (eth atah) regarding the curse (la *alah) and regarding (wa la) Shabuw*ah | the Promise of Seven (Shabuw*ah – the Oath of Seven Shabats) in the midst of your people (ba tawek *am *atah).

Yahowah (Yahowah) is offering to give with ongoing implications (nathan) your procreative power (*eth yary*owth *atah) such that you will give birth (naphal) and your womb (wa *eth beten *atah) will swell (tsabeh).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 5:21)

By mentioning Shabuw*ah, Yahowah is drawing His people’s attention to the Zarowa* and Parah – the Fruitful One Cultivating the Harvests. He is also reminding them that, because they missed it, they were left to endure the curse of Allah – seven years of terror and torment at the hands of sadistic and demonic Muslims. The Time of Israel’s Troubles is Islam’s final opportunity to slander, abuse, plunder, abduct, and kill Jews.

Satan’s musings on the matter can be found in Ezekiel, where he brags about raping Jewish girls and of his twenty-five hideous ways to kill Jewish men. Should you seek evidence of this, I encourage you to read the Babel series. And should you want to understand the murderous nature of Islam, please consider God Damn Religion.

Yahowah’s parting statement is typically mistranslated. I say this because it opens with God wanting to offer Yisra*el a gift, something to salve the wounds inflicted by raging antisemitism and aggravated Allah’s jihadists. So, in this case, as a result of the *Adamah Parah’s sacrifice, the barren woman that has been Yisra*el, the nation of stillborn children too corrupted by religion to survive, will give birth to healthy offspring once again.

And since they will repopulate the Garden, the gift of swelling wombs means a return to childbearing during the one-thousand-year celebration of Sukah | Camping Out in the restored Eden. After all, what’s the point in bringing Dowd back as King of forevermore if only to hassle with a single generation of recently cleansed religious and political malcontents? A few will become many, and if we begin with many, they will become many more.

At this point, the narrative of the *Adamah Parah serving as the Taruw^{ah} sacrifice for the mortal remnant of Yisra*el prior to King Dowd's Homecoming is becoming ever more obvious. This is why the water mixed with the ash of the sacrifice ash will occur as a result of the subterranean spring Yahowah will release and the fire He will ignite under the basar | body of the Par | Bull. They will work together to restore the remnant prior to Dowd's return so that our King can accept his bride...

“And the waters (wa ha maym) of the curse (*ha *arar ha eleh) will enter and exit (*bow) through your bowels (*ba me*ah atah) to enlarge (la tsabah) the womb (beten) and the procreative power of the woman will give birth (wa la naphal yarek). And the woman (wa ha ishah), she will say (amar*), ‘amen, amen | I accept this affirmation as reliable and true as I become trustworthy and acceptable (amen amen).’ (Bamidbar / Numbers 5:22)

The one acting in the role of priest (wa ha kohen) will write (kathab) that which pertains to the curse (eth ha *alah ha eleh) in the record, documenting it (ba ha sepher), and then he will blot it out, wiping it away, and destroying it (wa machah) along with the waters of the disagreeable bitterness and poisonous toxicity (el maym ha mar*). (Bamidbar 5:23)

And he should have what pertains to this woman drink (*wa shaqah *eth ha ishah) the waters of the disagreeable bitterness and poisonous toxicity (eth maym ha mar*) of the curse (*ha arar). And it will come and go (*wa bow) with her (*ba hy) these waters that bring the consequence of the curse (*ha maym ha arar) of pungent and disagreeable bitterness (la mar). (Bamidbar 5:24)

So (wa), the one acting in the role of priest (ha kohen) will obtain and accept (laqach) from the woman's hand (min *yad ha ishah) that which is apportioned as the sacrificial gift (minchah) for exclusivity in the relationship (*ha qina*ah*). Then he will wave (wa nuwph) the voluntary sacrificial offering apportioned as a gift (minchah) before the appearance (la paneh) of Yahowah (Yahowah) and approach (wa qarab) with it and her (eth hy) to the place of the sacrifice (el ha mizbeach*).” (Bamidbar 5:25)

This cascade of flowing waters will emerge from under the Temple Mount and beneath the altar with the burnt sacrifice of the *Adamah Parah. His body will be placed at the opening of the Tent of the Restoring Witness and thus toward the east facing the Mount of Olives. The waters will flow off of the Mount as the flames light the skies and smoke billows toward the heavens. And the result will be to purge the religiosity of Israel, causing the nation to be productive and useful again – a people destined for the Covenant. It will serve as a glorious affirmation that God’s People have been restored and that they can be faithful to the relationship at long last.

At this moment, the religious guilt of all those gathered in Yaruwshalaim will be purged, the toxicity of the past washed away, the bitterness removed. Taruw*ah’s beneficiaries will be prepared to witness Dowd’s return with Yahowah on Kipurym, attend the wedding, and then enter Gan *Eden on Sukah. The final sacrificial gift will have been offered and redeemed. The relationship will be restored. The Mow*edym will be fulfilled just as the Towrah prescribes.

It is the Bull being sacrificed, his body burned. The Goat is officiating as the priest. And the Ram is the awaiting groom ~ the most memorable of men. They are Yada, ElYah, and Dowd. And this will be a glorious moment in time.

“The one acting in the role of priest (wa ha kohen) should grasp a handful (qamats) from that which is apportioned as the sacrificial gift (min minchah) of the burnt offering of the memorable man for her (eth *azkarah hy) and send the sacrifice up in smoke (qatar) at the place of the sacrifice (*ha mizbeach). Thereafter, in the end (*wa achar), he should have the woman drink (*shaqah *eth ha ishah) the water (eth ha maym*). (Bamidbar 5:26)

When he has had her drink the water (wa shaqah hy eth ha maym), it will be (wa hayah) on the condition (im*) she had caused herself to be sullied (*tame), and had acted unfaithfully in an unreliable manner (wa ma'al ma'al) against her man (*ba *iysh hy), and had entered into her the waters (wa bow ba hy* ha maym*) pursuant to the consequence of the curse (*ha arar) of toxic bitterness (la mar).

Then she will have swelling in her womb (*wa tsabah beten hy) from her procreative power to give birth (*wa naphal yarek hy). The woman's time will end (*wa hayah ha ishah) among those who are cursed (*la alah) in the midst of her people (*ba qereb *am hy).” (Bamidbar 5:27)

There will be fire and water, smoke and ash. This is to say that as a result of the voluntary sacrifice of the Bull, the expert officiating of the Goat, and the return of the Ram, all is well between Yisra*el and Yahowah. We will have delivered the result God has sought. The resulting Family Reunion will be exceedingly satisfying.

The infidelity of religiosity will be washed away, souls purified by the fire, water, and ash. The curse of toxic bitterness that had reached their zenith at Marybah during the Exodus will be abated. Long barren in the since of being unable to bring a child into the Covenant, the curse will finally be lifted. Israel will no longer be barren. She will be given access to the Tree of Lives as her Messiah returns and they are betrothed.

“And if the woman is no longer sullied, defiled, or polluted (*wa im lo tame ha ishah), then she is cleansed and restored, purified and renewed (*wa taker hy). She will be pardoned and seen as innocent (wa naqah) and she will conceive, cultivating the harvest by producing offspring (wa zera zera).” (Bamidbar 5:28)

There is an “if” here because success is not assured. Some of those who will be collected during Taruw^oah in the White and Dappled Chariots based upon their lack of religious or political opposition to Yahowah, Dowd, and Yisrael, will lack the character traits needed to pass this test and return to the Garden. Those who pass muster, will be purged of prior guilt and be given a fresh start on life. This speaks of the role the ^{}Adamah Parah will play in pardoning the mortal remnant of Yisra^{}el prior to the fulfillment of Kipurym and Sukah. Restored, God’s people will be given the opportunity to be productive again.

In this regard, zera^o speaks of conceiving, cultivating, and collecting the children who will enter and complete the Covenant. It is the fruit of the Zarowa^o ~ Moseh, Dowd, and Yada. It is the fruition of the Towrah...

“This is the Towrah | Guidance and Teaching (zoth Towrah) of jealousy for exclusivity in the relationship (ha qina^oah) when a woman (asher ishah) has gone astray and has turned away (satah) beneath and oppressed by (tachath) her man (iysh hy^{}) as she trashes herself, making herself filthy and polluted (wa tame^o).” (Bamidbar 5:29)

Isreal became very good at aggravating Yahowah, writing over His Towrah, and cheating on the relationship with replacement gods. This is the solution, God’s Guidance on returning home after having wandered away. It’s time to come clean. The ^{*}Adamah Parah awaits.

King Dowd is the man who is zealous for his bride. He is, therefore, not going to share her with a rival. He either gains her undivided attention, by her putting religion and politics aside, or she will be deemed irrecoverable.

“And for the man (ow iysh) when, for the benefit of the relationship (asher*), he crosses over to the other side for this (abar al huw^{}*) with a jealous spirit, seeking exclusivity in the relationship (ruwach qina^oah) and he becomes passionately jealous, desiring the undivided attention (wa qana^o) of his wife (eth ishah huw^{}*), then, he should be present with the woman standing (wa ʿamad ʾeth ha ʾishah) before the appearance (la paneh) of Yahowah (Yahowah) along with the one acting in the role of the priest (wa kohen). He should engage at that time and carrying out for her (ʾasah la hyʾ) everything in accordance with the Towrah | Directions and Guidance on this (ʾeth kol ha Towrah ha zo ʾth). (Bamidbar 5:30)

And so, the individual (wa ha ʾiysh) will be without the guilt (naqah) of religious and political corruption (ʾaown). And the woman (wa ha ʾishah), her propensity to bend and twist the message (ʾaown hyʾ), will have been forgiven, her guilt removed (nasaʾ).” (Bamidbar / In the Wilderness / Numbers 5:31)

Dowd will cross over from the Spiritual Realm of the Heavens to the Material Realm of the Earth on Yowm Kipurym, expecting to meet his bride, beautifully blushing in the warmth of his light, exuberant and excited over his anticipated arrival. He has pined passionately for her return for millennia. And finally, even Yahowah will have her undivided and unwavering attention.

But you’ll notice that she will be standing, now bowed, even before her God and King. And that is as they have long desired, with the fallen having arisen again.

I expect and hope to serve as best man to my friend and king and anticipate that ʾElYah will officiate the ceremony with Yahowah walking the bride down the aisle. It will all be in accord with the Towrah. Immediately thereafter, the gates of ʾEden will swing open and we will all proceed into the Garden, celebrating our God’s patience and persistence with us.

In this reading we learn that when Yahowah caused the fall of man and our expulsion from the Garden, He had a plan in place that would allow us to grow up, come clean, and demonstrate that we could be trusted at long last. A few people have even taken advantage of our second chance. More will follow.

While that is the opportunity and ultimate result, we have to thumb forward in Bamidbar / Numbers to the 15th and 19th chapters to appreciate the context in which this solution transpires. But even before we return to the Towrah, we are best served to ponder the prophetic implications of Yasha'yah / Isaiah 17 such that we know the identity and timing of the profoundly positive purge.

And while this will transpire on Taruw^{ah} during the Shabat of the 23rd and 24th of September in year 6000 Yah / 2033, less than eight years from now, be advised that Shabu^{ah} will be the last opportunity to leave this planet before it spins out of control in Anti-Semitic rage. A great deal will occur following the Shabu^{ah}s of May 22nd, 2026 and June 11th, 2027 and the 14th of ^{*}Abyb | April 18th in 2030 when the Witnesses arrive to confront the Towrahless One and encourage Yahuwdym to participate in the final Laqat | Gleaning during the final celebration of Taruw^{ah} before our King's return. The planet will falter and billions will die.

As we contemplate what Yasha'yah reveals you will find our place in time. We have witnessed much of what is presented in verses one through three transpire over the past several years with jihadi-Muslims and faux-Palestinians ransacking Israel. As a result, the conception of a terrorist state carved out of the heart of Israel is imminent. The Harvest of Standing Grain is Shabu^{ah} and the Zarowa^{ah} is the one responsible for cultivating it.

“A prophetic pronouncement and timely declaration regarding the tremendous burden (*masa) of Damascus | Weeping (Drameseq). Behold (hineh), Damascus | Weeping (Drameseq) is revolting, diseased and degenerate, and it will come and go by force as it is changed without consent, then abandoned as the residents depart from the forsaken city (*suwr min 'iy*r). Then there will be (wa hayah) a twisted and tangled heap (maʿiy) of destruction and fallen rubble (mapalah).” (Yashaʿyah / Isaiah 17:1)

Masaʿ is equally at home describing a “burden” and “declaring a prophetic pronouncement” which is why I included both thoughts into the translation. Drameseq, as it is spelled in the Great Isaiah Scroll, is the name of the Syrian capital, but it also speaks of “weeping.” This is relevant because both will come to an end over the next few years.

As a verb, suwr means “to come and to go, to turn away from and leave, thereby, departing.” As an adjective, suwr conveys “degenerate and unrestrained.” In this statement, it was shaped by the very rare hofal participle, making it a verb and a noun which is subjected to internal forces it cannot resist, suggesting an armed and violent insurrection by Syrians against Syrians.

The result will be twisted and tangled heaps of destruction and collapsed rubble. And in this regard, mapalah is from naphal, which reminds us not only of the fall of man but also of the elimination of the Naphylm during the flood because they became hamas | cruel and violent terrorists.

Now that the US has created the Islamic State and given it control of Damascus and much of Syria, this prophecy is not only well underway, the conclusion is inevitable. Within the next two years, Islamic jihadists will rally in Damascus as Israel bombs the remainder of the city into rubble, causing the remaining Muslims to leave and march on Jerusalem.

The same succession of events is underway and will continue in Jordan where the ʿarowʿer | repudiated outcasts and repugnant refugees currently infest the Arnon Valley...

“The inhabited and terrorized populations and anguished inhabitants of cities filled with disgusting religious temples and shrines as well as wrathful donkeys (iyrym*) will be abandoned and deserted, rejected and damned (azab*) of ʿarowʿer | the Repudiated Outcasts and repugnant refugees of the Arnon Valley in Ammon, Jordan (ʿarowʿer). For there will be (la hayah) roaming animals fighting in militant militias along with their Helpers (*adar). But (wa) they will cease and prostrate themselves (rabats), because there will be no one left to terrorize (wa *ayn charad).” (Yashaʿyah / Isaiah 17:2)

ʿiyir was rendered in the plural form encouraging us to consider its many possibilities. Often translated as “cities” it speaks of “inhabitants of populated places.” But more than this, ʿiyir addresses “anguishing anxiety and terrorism emanating from religious shrines.” It can also depict the disposition of a “donkey.”

ʿarowʿer is the Arnon Valley in Jordan. It means “stripped and destitute” as a “repudiated outcast,” and thus “refugee.” Its verbal root is *arar, meaning “to strip, lay bare, and break.” It is an apt depiction of the Muslims claiming to be refugees in the shadow of Aman.

The verb *azab carries a host of negative connotations from “abandoned and deserted” to “rejected and forsaken,” even “left behind.” This is interesting because it means that the malcontent Muslim Fakestinians living here will either abandon their refugee camps to join the great jihad against Israel or they will be rejected and deserted by other Muslims, noting that the so-called “Palestinians” are despised among Muslims. I suspect, some of both.

As for *adar, it reveals that these rejects and malcontents will be found “lacking” and that they will “fail.” The verbal root also affirms that they will perceive themselves as “militants” and “helpers,” which is especially relevant to those of us who know the history of Islam. During the religion’s inception, the “Helpers” were second-class Muslim militants from Yathrib, today’s Medina, who were often shortchanged in the distribution of plunder when terrorizing Muhammad’s rivals.

Affirming the intent of this association, the Islamic terrorists will rabats | prostrate themselves in service to Satan.

And even more telling, following Allah's Quranic orders, they will terrorize everyone, including Muslims, fighting until there is no one left to kill.

“Then, the fortifications and defensive structure (wa mibtsa ♀) will cease on the Shabat, concluding (shabath) as a result of (min) ephraym* | Israel (ephraym*), along with the government (wa mamlakah) out of (min) Damascus (Drameseq), including (wa) the residue left (*sa*ar*) of aram* | Syria (aram*) consistent with (ka) the manifestation of power and overall significance (kabowd) of the children (beny) of *Yisra*el* | Individuals who Engage and Endure with God (*Yisra*el*). He, by desire and choice, will actually continue to exist (hayah), prophetically declares (*na*um*) Yahowah (Yahowah) of the vast array of spiritual messengers and envoys (tsaba ♀).” (Yasha ♀ / Isaiah 17:3)

This appears to say that Israel will see trouble in offing and will seek to nip it in the bud, consistent with the preemptive strikes prior to the Six Day War in 1967 and the recent bombings of Hezbollah and Iran. The most decisive expression of Israeli might may even occur on a Shabat, such that the governing structures of Syria fall yet again.

The Syrian civil war, as managed by the CIA, began in the Spring of 2011. Eventually it led to Islamic State terrorists sponsored by the US and Turkey overthrowing the Russian- and Iranian-sponsored Ba'athist regime of Bashar al-Assad. It fell, as the prophecy portends, in December of 2024. And as we have seen, it's only gotten worse from there.

Based upon this narrative, I'm expecting that the populated areas in and around Damascus will continue to be destroyed as Muslims vie with rival gangs for power. And while we have witnessed a horrific invasion of so-called "Palestinians" from Gaza into Israel, in the next assault malcontent Muslims will come through Syria from Turkey and also flood in from Jordan and Egypt, dwarfing the scale of Al Aqsa Flood on October 7th, 2023. And in the midst of this great desolation, the world will compel Israel to sacrifice land for unfulfilled promises of peace, making the tiny nation surrounded by religious adversaries indefensible. And this is the event that begins the Time of Troubles ~ a seven-year ordeal that culminates in year 6000 Yah / 2033.

Since it is likely that Syrian jihadists will join Muslim militants from other nations in pursuit of Al Aqsa Flood 2.o, it is unlikely that Israel will decapitate the snake at this time. So, this could well be Yasha^oyah reporting on the triggering event for the imposition of an Islamic State carved out of the heartland of Israel. While the obliteration of Gaza in response to Al Aqsa Flood 1.o pushed the world toward the recognition of the Two-State Dissolution of Israel, a preemptive strike against the Islamic State in Syria, which has become the pet of President Trump, may be the catalyst for the final betrayal of God's people.

Another way to view this harbinger of tomorrow is to see it as a telescoping of time, with the events transpiring during the seven years of the Time of Israel's Troubles brought together. If so, the prophet is explaining that on Taruw^oah in year 6000 Yah / 2033, all of Israel's foes will be eliminated while the sacrifice of the ^{}Adamah Parah restores the final remnant of Yisra^{}el. Or perhaps both implications were intended, with Yahowah layering insights upon observations.

In this regard, it would be natural for Yasha^oyah to want us to know that even in Israel's darkest hour, even as the nation is being attacked and torn apart, there will be modest victories and, more importantly, the story concludes with Yisra^{*}el's survival. And when that occurs, it will not be the result of the might of the nation but, instead, through the sacrifice of a Parar | Productive Bull whose ^{*}epher | ashes will ^{*}apher | cover and protect God's people.

Should you think that this may be a reach, consider the fact that ^{*}ephraim is the plural of ^{*}apher / ^{*}epher in conjunction with parar. ^{*}apher is a "covering akin to a bandage." ^{*}epher reveals that the wound is protected and allowed to heal because the malady has been concealed in “ashes.” Parar explains that this treatment will be “provided by a productive bull.” Then in the plural, this would signify a double dose, such that the bull and his ashes are doubly protective and productive in promoting Yisra*el’s healing.

So, while ephraym* is typically considered the Northern Kingdom of Israel, representing the ten tribes which were hauled into oblivion by the Assyrians 2700 years ago, this prophecy foretells that God’s people will be reconstituted and healed. And with hayah scribed in the qal imperfect jussive, Yisra*el’s continued existence will be predicated on the decisions Yahuwd and ephraym* make regarding the sacrifice of the adamah Parah*. Particularly telling in this regard is that this statement was delivered in Yahowah’s voice, with God *na*um* | prophetically declaring this pronouncement for our benefit.

With this preamble that reads like a blend of future history and yesterday’s headlines, we are confronted with a prophecy most have failed to consider. Yahowah foretold 2,700 years ago that Israel would be diminished in size as a result of events transpiring in Syria at this time.

“And it will actually transpire at this moment (wa hayah) in that day (ba ha yowm) that the size and significance, the power and prestige (ha huw kabowd*) of *Ya*aqob* | Israel (*Ya*aqob*) will be decreased to the point of no longer being sustainable or viable (dalal).

The fattest, best protected, and most important place at the midsection (wa mashman) of his physical existence (*basar huw) will be leaned and shrink, weakened and wastefully impoverished, even participating in his own destruction (razah).” (*Yasha*yah* / Isaiah 17:4)

As a result of what we have read leading up to this pronouncement with the undoing of Syria, unrest in Jordan, and the preemptive strike against the rising tide of Islamic jihadists, Israel will suffer a devastating blow. The resulting formation of a legitimized terrorist entity will significantly diminish the nation's size and standing. With the assignment of an Islamic State carved out of Israel's heart, the Jewish nation will no longer be viable.

This surrender of Israeli land is addressing the so-called "Two-State Solution," a capitulation that rewards the Muslims seeking the extermination of Jews with an Islamic entity carved out of land God gave His people. The result will thin Israel at the waist where seventy percent of Israelis currently reside. The nation will become indefensible ~ opening the floodgates for Al Aqsa Flood 2.0, a one-thousand times more horrendous repetition of Muhammad's raid on the Jewish farming community of Khabar 1400 years ago as well as Sinwar's assault against the Israeli kibbutzim on October 7th, 2023.

The most troubling aspect of the foregoing is the nifal stem and imperfect conjugation modifying razah because it means that the basar | embodiment of Israel will not only contribute to its own demise but also that it has been and will continue to act suicidally. This is because with the nifal stem, the subject, which is the basar representing Ya^oaqob, will both carry out and receive the consequence of being reduced in size and destroyed. And in this regard, Israel's demolition of Gaza in recompense for the Islamic savagery has proven counterproductive, with the entire world turning against the Jewish people and state.

There is another potential layer to this pronouncement because it is the basar | physical body of the human herald that will be bludgeoned on Taruw^oah to spare the remnant of Israel to resolve this crisis. And while his sacrifice will not be wasted, he will choose his fate, knowing that he, as the ^{*}Adamah Parah, will be bludgeoned.

As we move into this next statement, hayah | will occur, was scribed in the third-person masculine singular, qal stem, and perfect conjugation, not once, but twice. This can convey "it will be," with "it" representing the forementioned thinned basar | body of Ya^oaqob or the upcoming qatsyr | reaper as a thing rather than a person, both of which are masculine and singular. The other option is to render hayah as “he will be” with “he” being Ya^oaqob / Israel, the Basar as the Herald, or the Qatsar as an individual serving as the Reaper who is enabling this result.

Before we consider the profoundly important implications of this prophecy, recognize that Yahowah has scheduled three harvests. The first of these, Bikuwrym | FirstFruits, as a barley harvest on the 16th of ^{*}Abyb in the Spring, Dowd fulfilled 2000 years ago in 33 CE following Pesach and Matsah. The second is Shabuw^oah | the Promise of Seven. It celebrates an ingathering of standing and mature grain, and in particular, varieties of wheat. In that it is observed 50 days after UnYeasted Bread, the timing is in late May or early June. The final ingathering associated with the annual Mow^oedym occurs on the first day of the seventh month, which is typically in late September. Yowm Taruw^oah | the Day of the Herald begins with a gleaning of olives and then concludes with what will be the Greatest Show on Earth when it is fulfilled less than eight years from now. It will feature ^{*}ElYah serving as the master of ceremonies, Satan killing the Basar | Herald being portrayed as the adamah Parah* | Bloody Red Man of the Earth as the Productive Bull, and Yahowah releasing a torrent of waters while igniting the flames around the sacrifice to prepare the final remnant of Yisra^oel for the King’s return in year 6000 Yah / September 24th, 2033.

There are two potential dates for the Shabuw^oah Qatsyr being portrayed here in Isaiah 17:5. The first occurrence just five months from this assessment on the 22nd of May, 2026. It would allow seven years and four months for the Time of Ya^oaqob’s Troubles to ensue prior to their conclusion on Taruw^oah in 2033. The only other possibility is the 11th of June, 2027, with six years and three months between the inception and conclusion of the Time of Troubles. And as for Taruw^oah, that date is etched in stone with the Laqat occurring on Friday evening September 23rd and the sacrifice transpiring the following morning.

Also relevant, there are three Zarowa^o in God’s story. Moseh served as the strong arm Yahowah deployed to free His people from slavery in Mitsraym and bring them to the Promised Land. Once there, Dowd would sow the seeds we are currently tending through his Mizmowr and Mashal. Our King became the greatest of the Zarowa* by fulfilling Passover as the Sacrificial Lamb. And today, Yada is serving as the final Zarowa* cultivating these harvests so that they are as productive as possible.

Lastly, this is all foretold to occur as an Israeli preemptive bombardment devastates the defenses of Syria and buildings crumble in Damascus, leading to the imposition of an Islamic State upon Israel to appease those seeking to exterminate Jews. So in the immediate aftermath of the Israeli action, the Two-State Solution will make the Jewish nation smaller and indefensible.

*Shabuw*ah* is a Qatsyr | Harvest of standing grain. It is followed by *Taruw*ah* which is a Laqat | Gleaning seven years later of olives. The Promise of Sevens will materialize at the outset of the Time of Israel's Troubles, with a shimmering stream of souls leaving an anguished planet for a joyous experience in Shamaym on the Shabats of either May 22nd, 2026 or June 11th, 2027 Then as the eth Tsar Ya*aqob* comes to a frantic and horrific close as a consequence of the Adversary's manipulations, a final few will be withdrawn on *Taruw*ah*, a Friday evening at sunset, September 23rd, 2033, with yet another stream of light headed out of harm's way.

“Then (wa) he will actually be and it will come to exist (hayah – it or he is (qal perfect third-person masculine singular)) that someone who can be compared to (ka) the Qatsyr | Reaper of the Harvest (qatsyr) will be collecting and assembling the ingathering and withdrawing while escorting (asaph* – gathering, receiving, removing, and accompanying the harvest (qal infinitive)) the Qamah | Standing Grain (qamah – grain which is established, upright, on the stalk, and in the field, fully grown and mature; from quwm – to rise and be empowered, to persist and be established, to fulfill and confirm).

And (wa) this Zarowa* | One Cultivating the Seeds Sown for his Harvest to be Fruitful and Productive (Zarowa* huw* – this strong arm and influence planting his seeds), he will reap the harvest from the field with unfolding implications even as time is cut short during an anguishing period (qatsar – with insufficient time and in short order during a vexing occasion, he will produce the yield and bring in the crop (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) for the first fruits flowing as a stream of grain (shibolym – stems off of the main branch appearing as a torrent of floodwaters moving from one place to another in linear fashion).

In addition, then (wa), he will actually be such that it will come to exist (hayah – it or he is (qal perfect third-person masculine singular)) that someone comparable to (ka – consistent with) a Laqat | One who Gleans the final, smaller, and more challenging ingathering will rapidly remove what remains (laqat – a man who takes what's left after the initial harvest, even as the yield diminishes and is more laborious to pick up and collect (piel participle masculine singular)) of the fruit on the stems off of the main branch appearing out of a torrent of floodwaters moving as a stream from one place to another in linear fashion (shibolym – of first fruits as a flowing stream of growing grain) in (ba) the profound depths of Rapha*ym where the sick will be healed and the defective will be restored while the feeble falter and the souls of the dead remain (*emeq Rapha*ym).” (Yasha*yah / Isaiah 17:5)

It bears repeating: there will be two ingatherings during the Time of Trouble, one at the beginning and the other at the end, with the first more prolific and of wheat and the other of olives and much leaner. The Qatsyr | Harvester will be *asaph | collecting and assembling this ingathering, receiving, removing, and escorting the Qamah | Standing Grain which has become established, upright on the stalk, and in the field, thus engaged, fully mature. The beneficiaries of this Harvest will be quwm | ready to rise and to be empowered. They will persist to fulfill their calling, which is to work alongside the Qatsyr, Laqat, and Zarowa^o and on behalf of Yahowah, Gowym, and Yisra^uel.

Seven years thereafter, this same individual will serve as a Laqat | Reaper over a smaller, more challenging, and final gleanings. But this time, he will not be asaph* | escorting those he has gleaned. He is remaining behind to serve the remaining remnant of Yisra^uel.

Once the so-called “Palestinian” State is established, the Shabuw^oah Harvest will be imminent, whether that be on 06.22.26 or 07.11.27. The final Zarowa^o | One Cultivating the Seeds Sown for his Harvest to be Fruitful and Productive will Qatsar | Reap this Harvest from the field. The asaph* | ingathering will be conducted with unfolding implications even as the opportunity is cut short due to the anguishing nature of this time. Those enjoying the voyage of a lifetime will witness shibolym | first fruits flowing as a stream of grain.

Six to seven years thereafter, and with considerable additional effort, the olives representing Yisra^uel will be ready to glean. This will transpire on Taruw^oah, a Friday evening, September 23rd in year 6000 Yah. The Qatsyr, still contributing as a Zarowa^o, will serve as the embodiment of the Laqat | One who Gleans the final, smaller, and more challenging ingathering which is rapidly removed. And since this is an olive harvest, rather than grain, the shibolym will consist of the fruit on the stems off of the main branch. These souls leaving Earth for Heaven will appear out of a torrent of floodwaters moving as a stream from one place to another. This is an ode to what will transpire the following morning with an upwelling of subterranean waters released from beneath the Temple Mount.

It is particularly relevant to note that while Zarowa^o is a feminine title, the three individuals who bear it are men. This is why the verb following the title was presented in the third-person masculine singular. This realization will become relevant again as we move into the next verse where the same phenomenon applies. Also interesting, in the 53rd chapter of Yasha^oyah which is pursuant to Dowd serving as the sacrificial lamb, the prophetic witness is introduced by asking readers if they know the person who is able to deduce the identity of these Zarowa° – making it a particularly relevant designation.

The Valley of Rephaim is in Jerusalem, immediately adjacent to the southern ridgeline of Mount Moriah. And this places it just below the City of Dowd. However, I suspect that it's the meaning behind the name that caused the prophet to mention it during this sequence of events. As a result of what follows, many will be rapha°ym | healed and restored, even as the religious and political die.

When we conclude our review of Yasha°yah / Isaiah 17, we will turn to the 56th and 57th chapters so that we might be assured that Yahowah is speaking of harvesting souls and only using grain and olives as metaphors. But for now, let's stay focused on what is among the most revealing prophetic portrayals of our day. Yasha°yah's insights are bringing us to a place few could have imagined, even though his treatise on tomorrow has been here, albeit largely unnoticed, for twenty-seven centuries.

Still speaking of the Basar, Qatsyr, and Zarowa°...

“And he will remain, enduring being left behind with the remainder as flesh and blood for having caused people with physical bodies to be spared as a remnant (wa sha°ar – then in a close relationship, he (speaking of the Zarowa°) will stay behind, his body serving as a reminder for the remainder of the extended family who are still leavened, a remnant of blood relations left over and remaining as physical beings; sha°ar – remain and left behind, is written identically to sha°or – leavened, sha°ar – remnant, remainder, and residue, and sha°er – physical body comprised of flesh and blood, corporeal mass of meat, and blood relative (nifal perfect third-person masculine singular – the subject, who is the Zarowa° who has been cultivating the fruitful harvest and productive gleaning, will carry out and endure the action, which is to be left behind while causing others to remain in physical bodies based upon the choices he has made)), during it (ba huw° – with him (therefore, in conjunction with the Taruw^{ah} Laqat)).” (Yasha^{yah} / Isaiah 17:6 in part)

This is only two words in Hebrew, wa-sha^{}ar* and ba-huw^{}*, and yet they rocked my world. Rendering them correctly brought me back to a conversation I had with Yahowah right after meeting my wife, Leah. We were concerned over our puppy, Asher, and I asked Yahowah if our beloved pet would be coming with us on Taruw^{ah}. God’s answer was shocking at the time, “So, where do you think you’re going?”

And now I know the reason for His answer, “No where.” I will not be joining the Covenant members gleaned on Friday evening, September 23rd, 2033. Instead, I will sha^{}ar* | remain behind as flesh and blood.

As the sun rises on the Shabat of Taruw^{ah}, the 24th of September 2033 / year 6000 Yah, I will continue to serve those left behind, the very people I’ve had the honor to spare and protect during the Gleaning so that they are available for the great purge late this morning. On the Day of the Herald, the basar | body of the Basar will be sacrificed as the Adamah* Parah, thereby preparing the mortal remnant of Yisra^{}el* for Dowd’s return on Kipurym and for reentry into the Garden during Sukah.

The Qatsyr and Zarowa^o will not accompany the ingathering – nor will Elyah*, the other Witness along with Yada. This will be the Greatest Show on Earth and we both have roles to perform. As the final Gleaning is underway, our job this night will be to gain the attention of and then protect every remaining Yisra^{}elite* in Yaruwshalaim with the potential to be purged of religious residue. All the while, Yahowah will be releasing four chariots from Heaven. We know this because of what God revealed through Zakaryah.

Elyah* and I will be aboard the red spiritual vehicle, gathering everyone who might benefit from the cure we will providing within the city to keep God’s People out of harm’s way until morning. The black chariot will then depart to locate and incarcerate Jews who remain overtly religious, hauling them away forevermore. The white spiritual conveyance comes next and will search the world for Yisra*elites who are not overtly religious. They, along with the Yahuwdym now protected in Yaruwshalaim, will soon be purged and prepared by the Bull's sacrifice later this morning. And finally, the dappled chariot will search the planet to gather Gowym, bringing those with the proper attitudes and attributes to serve in the Garden come Sukah.

Once these spiritual vehicles have concluded their mission, Yahowah will scorch the Earth, incinerating all traces of religion and the religious, militants, militaries, the overtly political and conspiratorial. Once that is complete, He will terraform the Earth such that it resembles the conditions experienced in *Eden.

These transformational events will be ongoing during the Shabat of Taruwa*ah as *ElYah summons the corporeal manifestation of Satan and his minions to slay the *Adamah Parah | Bloody Red Man of the Earth as the Productive Bull, doing so for all to see on the Temple Mount. The beating will be gory, which is why *sha*ar* was selected to tell us that the sacrifice is being left behind with the remainder as flesh and blood. And it is on behalf of the *sha*ar* | the mortal remnant with physical bodies.

In that this sacrifice is of the Basar, Qatsyr, and Zarowa*, as that man, I was stunned, knowing that I was going to be beaten to death by Satan, and for all to see. And then when I saw the prophet use parah | productive bull in the next sentence in association with the Yahuwdym and Yisra*elites being left behind and protected by the Zarowa*, the magnitude of the moment became apparent. Yasha*yah was explaining how, when, where, and why the *Adamah Parah of Bamidbar 19 would resolve the guilt of Dowd's bride in Numbers 5.

In *sha*ar* it's all there ~ he (speaking of the Zarowa*) will stay behind and remain, enduring being left behind with the remainder as flesh and blood for having caused people with physical bodies to be spared as a remnant. He is engaged in a close relationship, serving as a reminder for the remainder of the extended family who are still leavened as physical beings. Then in the nifal perfect third-person masculine singular, this means that the Zarowa^o who has been cultivating the fruitful harvest and productive gleaning, will carry out and endure being left behind while causing others to remain in physical bodies based upon the choices he has made. And by concluding the prophetic pronouncement with *ba huw, the final Zarowa^o and Qatsyr will serve the mortal remnant of Yisra^oel throughout the whole of Taruw^oah.

As we consider what comes next, it is helpful to know that olelah* | immature fruit describes those who don't yet know Yahowah or realize all Dowd has achieved, but who still possess the potential, given the opportunity, to mature and grow. Those who are left represent the mortal remnant who have survived the Time of Israel's Troubles and who are now gathered around the Temple Mount to listen to ElYah* and Yada. And since they were olelah* | unharvested, this means that they missed the Taruw^oah Laqat because they had not yet accepted the terms and conditions of the Beryth | Covenant or availed themselves of the Mow^oedym | Restoring Witnesses. Being olelah* | infantile and capricious, they were set aside, giving them time to grow up.

Yasha^oyah chose ka noqeph zayit to reveal an important association between the beating of the olive tree and the Choter | Stem and Branch who will be lashing away in order to dissuade Jews from clinging to Judaism. It's particularly clever because branches were actually used to strike the trees to dislodge the last of the fruit. It was the prescribed method of harvesting olives. And in this case, since Yasha^oyah revealed that the Choter is etsah* and Da^oath | Providing the Counsel of the Tree of Knowledge, he is trying to garner the attention of the remaining Yisra^oelites so that they might learn enough to let go and let God take it from here.

Shanaym is a dual noun and a numeral which is most commonly rendered as "two," but it can also convey "a pair, both, a double portion, twice, or a second time.” There was no wa | and used to connect shanaym with shalosh | three or third. Therefore, while I’ve rendered the phrase “two or three,” the other options are “pairs of three,” an “additional time for three” or a “double portion for a third.” And either way, this is likely addressing some multiple of these numerals and possibilities.

Gargar is a bit of a challenge since it only appears this once in the Towrah, Naby*ym, wa Mizmowr, making it subject to interpretation. Based upon this context pertaining to the olive tree, it is typically rendered “olive berry.” However, on four occasions, garar becomes gargarowth to speak symbolically of one’s “neck.” Solomon uses gargarowth in this regard in his 1st Mashal / Proverb, stating that instruction and teaching are wreaths for one’s head and ornamentation for one’s neck (gargarowth). In Proverb 3, which I assume would be from Dowd, he encourages us to persist with kindness and truth such that they are bound around our gargarowth | neck. And then he states that intelligence and discernment should adorn our gargarowth.

There is also the possibility that gargar is an emphatic duplication of garar | to be caught and taken away. Lastly, with two letters in common, it may also be influenced by the verbal root *gara | to restrain, abate, keep back, diminish, and withdraw.

The *ro*sh* | top, most crucial, foremost, and uppermost would be Yahuwdym in this context. They are the beloved of Yah. It is to distinguish the tribe of Dowd from the part of the family that was fractured and cut away long ago by the Assyrians.

amy*r is from amar* | to speak, so it’s a “talkative branch.” This is to suggest that the Choter is somewhat verbose because he has a lot to say.

With these concepts thoughtfully introduced, let’s proceed with the translation and consider the potential implications of the concluding phrase once rendered...

“olelah* | Immature Fruit thrust aside and left on the stems and branches (olelah* – the unharvested forcefully pushed away because it’s too young and purposely remaining on the vine or branches by the reaper; from alal* – to be diverted and set aside as a result of being juvenile and capricious) as would be the case when an olive tree is beaten from all around to shake off some of the fruit (ka noqeph zayit – similar to going completely around and striking the olives off of a tree with a branch as a method of harvesting): two or three (shanaym shalosh – a pair, both, a double portion, twice, or a second time and a third) removed olive berries held back by the neck and taken away (gargar – removed and crushed fruit ; from garar – to be caught and taken away, *gara – to have been abated and diminished, held back and restrained, and gargarowth – neck) in the top, most crucial, and foremost (*ba ro*sh* – on the uppermost and choicest, directly from the source who initiated all things, from the One who leads, from the summit of the first and finest mountain, even the most crucial) vocal branch who speaks, promises, and relates (amyr* – highest stem or summit; from amar* – to speak and relate (symbolic of Dowd and the Choter as well as what they have and will do and say on the summit of Mowryah)), four or five (arba* chamesh*) in the clefts of his crag from his branches which have been broken off (*ba sa’yph huw – in crevices, fissures, and cracks in a crag from the secondary branches which were lopped off and separated from the trunk of the tree), of the Parah | Fruitful and Productive Bull, the one cultivating a flourishing and abundant harvest on behalf of future generations (parah – of the one reaping what has been sown, producing offspring for future generations), prophetically declares (na’um – pronounces before it occurs) Yahowah (𐤏𐤓𐤕𐤁), God (elohym* – Mighty One) of Yisra*el | Individuals who Engage and Endure with God (*Yisra*el*).” (Yasha’yah / Yahowah’s Deliverance / Isaiah 17:6)

During the evening of September 23rd, 2033 after Taruw*ah’s Gleaning, there will be an olelah*, whereby the Yahuwdym and Yisra*elites still clinging to the tree will be taken aside and protected. And while I initially perceived that these olives represented those Heaven-bound in the sunset Laqat, I now see them as the mortal remnant left behind. Either way, there will likely be a multiple of seven Yahuwdym and Yisra*elite souls preserved, whether that is 70, 700, or 7000, even 70,000.

Therefore, in addition to whatever number of olives gleaned, there will be others set aside and left on the branches. They will not be part of the Laqat but will be available to be purged of their residual guilt. And since this was prefaced by *sha*ar*, we know that they will remain in physical bodies while the Zarowa* will be reduced to flesh and blood as the sun rises and the full light of Taruw*ah becomes manifest. Sound the Showphar. But more on this in a moment.

Continuing to probe the full implications of every word, arba is “four,” “fourfold,” “fourth,” “square,” or “twenty-five percent.” And chamesh is “five,” “fivefold,” “fifth,” “twenty percent,” and in some cases, “stomach.” Therefore, this could be a multiple of four or five, 20% to 25%, or an indication that this represents the fourth and fifth iteration of this process.

My initial inclination is to affirm that $2+5=7$ and $3+4=7$, suggesting that there will be a multiple of 7/70/700/7000 purged on Taruw*ah, with Yahuwdym being outnumbered by Yisra*elites by approximately two to one. Yet another possibility with these numbers is that Yahuwdym will benefit most from Mow*edym two and three – Matsah and Bikuwrym – while Yisra*elites will capitalize upon Miqra*ey four and five – Shabuwo*ah and Taruw*ah as they are found after having been lost.

*Ba sa*yp̄h huw denotes Yisra*elites as opposed to Yahuwdym. They were *sa*yp̄h* | lopped off and cut away 2700 years ago but are now found in the *sa*yp̄h* | clefts of the rock by the *sa*yp̄h* | crag who is now the secondary branch of the tree. Therefore, *ba sa*yp̄h* suggests that the Yisra*elites are being given a second chance to be grafted back into the tree via a secondary stem ~ i.e., the Choter.

In this light, and as previously noted, amyr* is a play on words. Yahowah, through Yasha^oyah, is affirming the obvious – Yada is amyr* | loquacious. He is also a Crag with the cracks and crevices to show his age and battle scars earned along the way. And while we have known that the Zarowa^o is fruitful as a result of the actionable root of this title being zera^o | sowing seeds, this is the first time that the One Cultivating the Mow^oedym Qatsyr has been identified as a Parah | Productive Bull. And of that, there are some extraordinary implications ~ which is why we are here in route to Numbers 19 and the sacrifice of the adamah Parah*.

Since Yahowah called His final Zarowa^o an amyr* | Talkative Stick, it is germane to this conversation to reveal that Par | Bull was written Peh Rosh | פֶּה רֹשׁ. These letters are found among the final six in the Hebrew alphabet. They mean that this come-lately will be a man known for his head and mouth. Yahowah's Par listens, observes, thinks, and then speaks. That is why he is the Qowl | Voice of God.

It is also insightful to reveal that Parah | the Productive One is scribed Peh Rosh Hey, which is presented as פֶּה רֹשׁ הֵי in the original script of the Towrah. This affirms that the Bull with the big head and mouth is human. The Productive One Pursuing the Harvest is an exceptionally vocal, observant, and thoughtful man who takes a stand to point the way to God. In his final act in this role, he is dubbed the adamah Parah* | Bloody Red Man of the Earth and Productive Bull, a.k.a., Red Heifer, in Bamidbar 19.

As is the case with many words sharing the par root of Bull, para^{}* is defined as “to expose and dismiss, uncover then absolve.” This is relevant because the Adamah Parah*'s ensuing sacrifice on Taruw^oah on behalf of those left behind, is to “unbind and discharge with payment remitted to overlook a penalty.”

Foreshadowing what the Bull will endure as we consider his ordeal in the fourth book of the Towrah, *para speaks of “bearing the skin and smashing away at it to provide compensation.” Describing the nature of those bludgeoning the man in the guise of a bull to death, *para reveals that “an unrestrained mob will be out of control.” The related paryts and perek speak of the Choter’s adversary – Ha Satan: “a savage and cruel creature who is a violent and ravenous thief devoted to death and destruction in the most ruthless, barbaric, and brutal manner.” He is “a rapacious and ferocious robber.” Of Satan’s minions, pirhah says that they are a “brood of brats and swarming rabble, chaotic and violent youths.”

Then addressing the Parah’s positive traits, *para is used to describe a “shoot or stem which bears fruit” and of a “leader who provides freedom.” In this regard, the related pary depicts a “fruitful harvest producing young offspring.” This may be why perah is defined as “a bud which blossoms.” Addressing what will happen to the Zarowa’s nepesh | soul in the waning hours of Taruw^{ah}, it will “parah | fly away, making a linear motion through the air” to Shamaym as his body is incinerated along with Yisra^{el}’s guilt. So in all of this, we are witnessing why Par | Bull becomes so much more as Parah, just as is the case with ets* and etsah*, adam* and adamah*.

*Para, which means “to release, to let loose, and let go, to cast off, totally emancipated,” in this context, would be reminiscent of, “Let My People Go.” It reveals an initiation to another *Yatsa | Exodus ~ this one from Babylon courtesy of Yahowah’s Parah.

In this context, it is interesting to note that a paraz is a “prince who governs” and he is a “fighter who defends.” When spelled with an Aleph rather than an Ayin, *para means “to thrive in fruitfulness.” This is germane because the Parah is King Dowd’s Herald and Prince.

While the tertiary definition of parah is deduced from the feminine ah suffix added to par | bull, the actual meaning of the word is “to be very productive and fruitful, cultivating offspring through an abundant harvest.” To parah is “to cause others to sprout, blossom, flourish, and thrive while promoting their growth and maturity.”

Should anyone think that Parah | Productive and Fruitful Bull was inadequate by itself to equate the events of Yowm Taruw^{ah} | Day of the Herald with the prophetic portrayal of the adamah Parah* | Bloody-Red Man and Productive Bull in Bamidbar / Numbers 19, perhaps Yasha^{ah}’s next pronouncement will be sufficient, especially when considered as part of this aspect of the prophecy. In context, it reads...

“Then (wa) he will actually be and it will come to exist (hayah) that someone who can be compared to (ka) the Qatsyr | Harvester (qatsyr) will be collecting and assembling the ingathering and withdrawing while escorting (asaph*) the Qamah | Standing Grain which is established and ready to rise (qamah). And (wa) this Zarowa^{ah} | One Cultivating the Seeds Sown for his Harvest to be Fruitful and Productive (Zarowa^{ah} huw^{ah}), he will reap the ingathering from the field with unfolding implications even as time runs short during an anguishing period (qatsar) for the first fruits flowing as a stream of grain (shibolym).

In addition, then (wa), he will actually be (hayah) someone consistent with (ka) a Laqat | One who Gleans the final, smaller, and more challenging ingathering, rapidly removing what remains (laqat) of the fruit on the stems off of the main branch appearing out of a torrent of floodwaters moving as a stream from one place to another in linear fashion (shibolym) in (ba) the profound depths of Rapha^{ym} where the sick will be healed and the defective will be restored while the feeble falter and the souls of the dead remain (emeq Rapha^{ym}*). (Yasha^{ah} 17:5)

And he will remain, enduring being left behind with the remainder as flesh and blood for having caused people with physical bodies to be spared as a remnant (wa sha^{ar}), during it (ba huw^{ah}). olelah* | Immature Fruit thrust aside and

left on the stems and branches (olelah*) as would be the case when an olive tree is beaten from all around to shake off some of the fruit (ka noqeph zayit): two or three or a second and third time (shanaym shalosh) removed olive berries held back by the neck and taken away (gargar) in the top, most crucial, and foremost (*ba ro*sh*) vocal branch who speaks, promises, and relates (amyr*), four or five or the fourth and fifth (arba° chamesh*) in the clefts of his crag from his branches which have been broken off (*ba sa°yph huw), of the Parah | Fruitful and Productive Bull, the one cultivating a flourishing and abundant harvest on behalf of future generations (parah), prophetically declares (na°um) Yahowah (Yahowah), God (elohym*) of Yisra°el | Individuals who Engage and Endure with God (Yisra°el).” (Yasha°yah 17:6)

Therefore, according to Yahowah, a man will arrive who is comparable to a Qatsyr | Harvester, collecting, withdrawing, and escorting the Qamah | Standing Grain which has been established and matured. This Zarowa° | One Cultivating the Productive Harvest will gather it from the field as time runs short during a vexing period as a flowing stream of grain. Then, in addition, he will serve as a Laqat | One who Gleans a final, more challenging ingathering, rapidly removing the fruit as a torrent of floodwaters appears, thereby curing and restoring the infirmed. He will remain behind as flesh and blood, while enabling the mortal remnant – now considered immature fruit which has been set aside as they are whacked off of the olive tree a second and third time by the most crucial stem and vocal branch. A fourth or fifth attempt will leave them in the crags and branches of the Parah | Productive Bull. Then we learn that the Qatsyr, Laqat, Zarowa°, and Parah is a particularly observant man focused upon Yahowah, who is the One producing this result....

“In that specific day (*ba ha yowm ha huw), this man (ha °adam – this singular male descended from Adam*, the masculine of adamah* – bloody red man of the earth), he will be particularly observant, actually and consistently paying attention to, highly regarding, and accepting (sha^oah – he will look favorably toward and respond appropriately to (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular active)) the Almighty (al*), asah Huw | His Maker, the One who will engage and act with him to get this done, (asah huw – the One who will accomplish this for him and work to make this happen with him, causing it to occur (qal participle masculine singular)).

And (wa) his eyes (ayn huw – his perspective, focus, and observations, his capacity to see), they will choose to continuously look (ra^aah – they will continually elect under the auspices of freewill to behold and gaze upon, seeing, perceiving, considering, finding delight in, while developing an understanding (qal imperfect jussive third-person feminine plural (pertaining to eyes which are feminine plural))) to (el* – upon and toward) the Qadowsh | Set-Apart One (qadowsh – the separated, cleansing, and purifying, the one and only, the constituted and dedicated; from qadash – to set apart, to be established separate, to be singularly dedicated and devoted) of Yisra^ael (Yisra^ael – of Individuals who Engage and Endure with God).” (Yasha^oyah / Salvation is from Yah / Isaiah 17:7)

Through His Prophet, Yasha^oyah, Yahowah foretold that He will work with a man whom He has referred to as a Qatan Ma^aowr | Lesser Luminary, Nakry | Observant Foreigner, Choter | Stem, ets Da^oath* | Tree of Knowledge, Qatsyr | Harvester, Laqat | Reaper, Zarowa^o | Productive Cultivator, and Parah | Fruitful Bull to bring this all to fruition. God even revealed when, where, and why this would all transpire. Importantly, Yahowah wants us to know that this will occur on His pronounced schedule and that the man of His choosing was chosen because he was particularly observant. Further, their contribution to the wellbeing of this final remnant will be collaborative, with Yahowah enabling the desired result.

Beyond all of this, we find these two Zarowa^o reunited because the sacrificial victim of the Fall Mow^oedym is shown focusing upon and honoring the Set-Apart One of Yisra^{*}el – the man who fulfilled the Spring Miqra^oey. In this way, the prophecy of the Gadowl and Qatan Ma^oowr will be fulfilled. The Tree of Knowledge will point the way to the Tree of Lives.

Ha ^{}adam* is a singular male, a depiction which is relevant in this context because God is affirming that the Zarowa^o cultivating the Shabuwa^h Qatsyr and Taruwa^h Laqat while ultimately serving as the Parah | Productive Bull is going to be exceedingly active at this time. I suspect it was also Yahowah's intent to introduce the other half of this man's ^{}adamah Parah* title with ha ^{}adam* | the Bloody-Red Man of the Earth now fulfilling his role as the Productive Bull.

It is on this day – Yowm Taruwa^h in year 6000 Yah / 09.24.33 – that the ^{}Adamah Parah's* regard for Yahowah and Dowd, and his commitment to fulfilling the Mow^oedym, will provide more than sufficient motivation. And that is a tall order since it will require letting his guard down and allowing ha Satan to bludgeon him to death as a sacrificial offering to cleanse and prepare the mortal remnant of Yisra^{*}el for the Messiah's return.

As a result, Yada^os focus will remain on the Set-Apart One of Yisra^{*}el – which is descriptive of his God and of his King. So, with the last ounce of his devotion, Yahowah will miraculously cleanse His People of religion, politics, and militancy. It will be an extraordinary day's work with exemplary results.

And speaking of results, we are reminded that what ^{}ElYah* achieved two millennia 888 years ago served as a harbinger of what he will soon help orchestrate...

“So, then (wa) he shall never accept, care about, or gaze (lo^{}sha^oah* – he will not regard or trust, he will never favorably consider and so he will forsake, he will no longer turn to or respond other than to negate, and he will not pay attention to or look (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) upon (^{}al* (rendered from the DSS)) the altars (ha mizbeach – the religious sites of offering a sacrifice; from zabach – place where animals are slaughtered), his works (ma^oaseh huw^{}* – his actions and deeds, pursuits and achievements, the labor and expenditure of energy, even the patterns of behavior and practices; from asah* – that which he has acted upon and engaged in [rendered from the DSS 1QIsa]).

They will not focus upon (lo^{}ra^{}ah – they will not look to, pay attention, or consider, they will not find pleasure in (rendered from the DSS)) what their hands have made (yad huw^{} wa ^{}asher ^{}asah ^{}etsba^o – of their grasp as they have engaged (qal perfect third-person plural) [from 1QIsa]), nor either (ow* (rendered from the DSS)) that which is associated with the Asherahs* / Mothers of the Gods / the Queens of Heaven / or the Madonnas with Child (ha ^{}asherahym* – the Blessed, the Goddesses of Grace and Good Fortune in pagan mythology, the Blessed Mother, the goddess from Babylonian, Assyrian, Phoenician, Aramaean, and Canaanite mythology, the mother goddess upon which the Roman Catholic religious festival of Easter Sunday was conceived, the idol upon which the Madonna and Child statues were built, the pole upon which the Christian cross was derived, and the basis of the Christmas tree; the Second Person of the Trinity, also known as Astarte and Ishtar; from ashar* – to pronounce blessed and make happy) or the (wa ha) worship of sun-god images (chaman – sun pillars used in idolatrous pagan worship where incense is commonly burned; from chamah – to be aroused by the sun and chamets – to be leavened, embittered, oppressive, cruel, and ruthless).” (Yasha ^yah / Freedom is from Yah / Isaiah 17:8)

Free at last, thank God Almighty, free at last. After having the grossly religious exterminated by Yahowah, once the mortal remnant is purged by the sacrifice of the Adamah Parah*, there will be no trace of religion. There will be no black suits in Israel, no rabbis, no Talmuds, and no Jewish Law.

It will be as it was 2,888 years ago after ElYah*’s repudiation of all things pertaining to politics and religion, but this time, enduring forever with the people, themselves, cleansed. The Asherahs* and sun-god vestiges incorporated into Christianity, Judaism, and Islam will be expunged from the planet. As we turn the page back in time to our future, and explore what the Towrah reveals about tomorrow, all of this is relevant to where God would like to take His people.

That said, the reason the Asherahs exist is because Satan is trying to steal and then corrupt something exceedingly good ~ asher* | the way to the benefits of the relationship and ashar* | the Blessed and Beneficial Woman. I'm sure that everyone reading to this point is aware of my love affair with all things asher*, but what no one expected is how Yahowah will deploy the title ashar* in the Final Mashal ~ a Word Picture we will celebrate much later in this volume.

Pulling back to see the bigger picture into which this prophecy will play out, we find that the consensus of world leaders will be that the Muslims, moronically called "Palestinians," who stand in a long line of Islamic terrorists who have been killing, raping, enslaving, and persecuting Jews since 622 CE, somehow deserve an autonomous state. Even more incredulously, Fakestan will have the same borders Muslims violently rejected in the 1948 War of Independence, 1967 Six-Day War, 1973 Yom Kippur War, 1987 First Intifada, 1993 Oslo Accords, 2005 Gaza Disengagement, 2000 Second Intifada, and 2023 Hamas Massacre. Despite the grotesque and appalling immorality of rewarding mass murdering terrorists with a nation carved out of the heartland of the people they have sought to annihilate, Yahowah affirmed 2,700 years ago that this insanity would occur – with many Progressive Jews promoting their own demise.

Once this occurs, especially in the most anti-Semitic climate in world history, and with two billion Muslims surrounding Israel calling for the nation's demise, the nation will begin fighting a losing and deadly battle for its right to exist. Not wanting His Covenant Family to witness or endure the sadistic carnage, nor fall victim to it, Yahowah will be orchestrating the Shabuw^oah Harvest of Standing Grain possibly as early as the Shabat of May 22, 2026 but no later than the Shabat of June 11, 2027, all in concert with His Zarowa[®] as the Qatsyr.

Three and a half years later, on Passover, the 14th of *Abyb, April 18th in 2030, Yada will return with *ElYah as one of the two Witnesses. Their mission will be to expose and condemn the Adversary, now stirring the pot in corporeal form, while denouncing religion and politics. At the same time, the Bull and Goat will be encouraging Jews to avail themselves of the Taruw[®]ah Olive Laqat | Gleaning.

However, by design, not everyone is going to be withdrawn. The Choter, after beating the Olive tree to glean its fruit, will leave olives, either two or three on the top branch or for a second and third time. As a fourth and fifth attempt at this gleaning, or some iteration of four or five more in protected fissures of the crag, those left behind will be protected. Thereafter, this remnant will witness the sacrifice of the *Adamah Parah, just as Yahowah specifies in Bamidbar / Numbers 19. What begins gruesomely, as this bullish man is torturously and publicly sacrificed, his heart devoured and some of his blood guzzled, by the corporeal manifestation of Satan, the Parah's body will serve as a burnt offering for the remission of religious guilt upon the Temple Mount.

Now that we are assured of the prophetic implications and timing of the Shabuw[®]ah and Taruw[®]ah Harvests, let's affirm that these are ingatherings of Covenant members and not grain or olives. For these insights we turn to the 56th and 57th chapters of Yasha Yyah / Isaiah. The discussion begins...

“For this is what (ky koh) Yahowah (Yahowah) says (amar*): ‘You should choose to be observant, carefully considering and closely examining (shamar) the means to exercise good judgment and justly resolve disputes, making good decisions (mishpat).’

Then (wa), chose to engage, so that you act upon (*asah) that which is correct and vindicating (tsadaqah) because (ky) My deliverance and resulting salvation (yashuw^{ah} *any) are approaching, they are close, imminent, and personal (qarowb la *any).

Therefore (la), the Tsadaqah *any | One who is Correct about Me and Vindicates with Me (tsadaqah any) will come to pursue the harvest, be included and return, then remain (la bow^{}) so as to be revealed and made known (galah).”
(Yasha^{yah} / Isaiah 56:1)

This is reminiscent of what Solomon advised the Yisra^{*}elites as he spoke to the people upon the completion of Yahowah’s Covenant Home when announcing the future arrival of the Nakry | Observant Foreigner who would address God’s wayward children during the last days. He was, thereby, encouraging Yisra^{*}el to be observant and responsive, acting upon what the Witness would be sharing on their behalf.

Having studied the Towrah, the Prophets, and the Writings, especially the Psalms and Proverbs of Dowd, the Nakry | Observant and Responsive Foreigner will come to know the Tsadaq | Right Way via the Beryth | Covenant and Miqra^{ey} | Invitations which Dowd exemplified and fulfilled. He would be correct regarding the means of deliverance, vindication, and even salvation – which occur as a result of what Father and Son have achieved. Listen, and you, too, can be part of Yahowah’s Family.

Also revealing, both shamar | choose to be observant regarding exercising good judgment and then asah* | want to act and engage, were both scribed in imperative mood. This means that Yahowah is soliciting our cooperation, offering guidance which is subject to our own freewill.

With tsadaqah scribed twice, God is encouraging us to be right about Him so that we can be acquitted of our guilt and vindicated. This is the only tsadaqah | correct approach to God. In the second occurrence, tsadaqah is addressing someone who is demonstrably right about God and who, as a result, will be working with Yahowah to vindicate His people.

Then, contemplating the full implications of *bow, he will come to pursue the harvest, be included and return, then remain, all of which echo what we learned moments ago about the Zarowa^o and Parah of Isaiah 17. The Qatsyr will arrive to pursue the Shabuw^oah Harvest, leaving with those who are withdrawn, only to return. But come Taruw^oah, he will remain. Therefore, God is putting His people on notice that they should be looking for him, such that when he arrives, they benefit from his contribution to their salvation.

I have repeatedly announced that the realization Dowd is the Messiah, Son of God, and returning King who fulfilled Pesach, Matsah, and Bikuwrym is the greatest discovery in human history. But there is so much more to this than determining how he came to know that he could and should do this, that he convinced Yahowah to allow him to endure it and trust him to do so, or why it was in Dowd's, Yahowah's, and our best interest for this to play out this way.

There is more to it than calculating the exact day Chag Matsah was fulfilled using Gabry^oel's prophecy, affirming that 33 CE was year 4000 Yah, thereby being able to precisely date Dowd's return. And that is because I was able to ascertain how the Spring Miqra^oey were fulfilled, using Dowd's disposable basar | body to open the Door to Life on Passover and his eternal nepeš | soul to carry our guilt into She^oowl on Matsah to assure our acquittal, such that the Bakowr | Firstborn of Yahowah enabled the benefits of Bikuwrym | Firstborn Children the following day. I was even able to show how Dowd's Mizmowr / Psalm 22 served as a first-person narrative of his crucifixion, thereby completely destroying the myth of Jesus while excoriating Judaism.

And in this way, I became the living embodiment of Isaiah 56:1...“For this is what (ky koh) Yahowah (Yahowah) says (amar*): ‘You should choose to be observant, carefully considering and closely examining (shamar) the means to exercise good judgment and justly resolve disputes, making good decisions (mishpat). Then (wa), chose to engage, so that you act upon (asah*) that which is correct and vindicating (tsadaqah) because (ky) My deliverance and resulting salvation (*yashuw^{ah} any) are approaching, they are close, imminent, and personal (*qarowb la any).

Therefore (la), the *Tsadaqah any | One who is Correct about Me and Vindicates with Me (*tsadaqah any) will come to pursue the harvest, be included and return, then remain (la bow^h) so as to be revealed and made known (galah). (Yasha Y^{ah} 56:1)

Since there isn't another Gowy, or even Yahuwd, whose written and spoken testimony are even remotely comparable to Yada Yahowah and the Yahowah Vlog, you are witnessing the fulfillment of this prophecy and so many others. Yahowah inspired Yasha Y^{ah} | Isaiah to convey this promise so that you would know how to proceed – especially in a world filled with deceitful and deadly influencers.

Additionally insightful, the first word Dowd wrote and the first I translated is asher*, presented here as ashry*...

“Blessed by the benefits of the relationship, joyous and productive by showing the proper way (ashry*), is this person, a mortal man (enowsh*), who acts upon as he engages in this with unfolding implications over time (asah zoth*).

Because (wa) this son (ben) of Adam* is a lone man (adam*), he will be exceptionally firm and resolute in this, empowered and strengthened to prevail, restoring through his conviction and resolve with regard to this (chazaq ba hy^h).

By closely examining and carefully considering (shamar) the Shabat as the promise of seven (Shabat), thereby avoiding defiling and profaning it, or making it common (min chahal huw^h), he is being observant, careful, attentive, and aware (wa shamar).

So, his hands, and especially that which he influences (yad huw*), will be kept from acting upon or engaging in (min asah) anything unjust, immoral, or irrational, troubling or distressful (kol ra)." (Yasha *yah / Isaiah 56:2)

*asher reveals not only that this man will be blessed by God, but also that he will be acclaimed for revealing the proper path to receive the benefits of the relationship. Then with *enowsh, we know that Yahowah is working with and through a mortal man.

This individual's notoriety is a function of his willingness to *asah | engage and act upon what God wants accomplished and his capacity to shamar | closely examine and carefully consider everything Yahowah has revealed. God and man will be collaborating in this way at this time and for this purpose – which is to deliver salvation to those who are right.

We are reminded of God's preference, which is to work with and through *adam | men – this individual presented yet again as masculine and singular. And regarding him, Yahowah reveals that he is chazaq | resolute and uncompromising, firm to the point of being harsh at times. He is unyielding and tough, a man of conviction and resolve. And as a result, working with Yahowah, this mortal man will prevail in the mission of restoring God's people.

Yahowah has designated Yada as a Par | Bull, largely because he must be chazaq | bullish to succeed. There is no backup plan. Yahowah is all in with this man.

As is the case with ha Nakry | Observant Foreigner, this Son of Man will shamar | survey and contemplate all Yahowah has to offer. And his approach to the Shabat and God's Promise of Seven, will be to remain particularly attentive and aware so that it is never defiled by becoming ordinary and common, and thus religious. For him, the Shabat will be the ultimate opportunity to shamar | explore and examine God's testimony.

By being observant and resolute, right and engaged, this enowsh ben adam will deliver towb | good rather than *ra | bad fruit. Yahowah, based upon his commitment to all of the above, says he will be unique among men because his every influence will be appropriate, moral, and rational, completely avoiding anything unproductive or errant, troubling or distressful.

I speak of fruit here, not only because the ets Da*ath* in the Garden offered Knowledge of Towb | Good and *Ra | Bad, and that the Choter of Yasha'yah 11 represents this Tree, but because Yahowah will soon designate this man as an ets* | tree, tying Genesis 2 together with Isaiah 11 and 56.

Up to this point, it has been obvious that Yahowah has been addressing His Nakar | Observant Foreigner. He is the one through whom God restores His Shem | Name, Bakowr | Firstborn Son, Towrah | Guidance and Teaching, and Beryth | Covenant Family, through His Mow'edym | Restoring Witnesses to the Eternal Testimony once His Yashuw'ah Deliverance and Salvation are near.

“Do not say regarding (*wa *al amar) ha Nakar | the Observant Son of a Foreign Land, the one who knows and understands through thoughtful examination, then acknowledges by being discerning and respectful (wa ben ha nakar), who has formed a relationship and joined with (*lawah el) Yahowah (Yahowah), something which would infer (*la amar), ‘Yahowah (𐤏𐤓𐤕𐤓𐤕) will surely abandon me, preventing me from being included (*badal badal any) as part of His family (*min *al *am huw).’

And let not the Sarys | Esteemed and Authorized Official Designee say (*wa *al amar ha sarys), ‘What then, if (hen) I become a withered and unproductive ets* | Tree, an incapacitated counselor or paralyzed messenger (any ets yabesh)?’” (Yasha'yah / Isaiah 56:3)

Yahowah has delivered His Nakar | Observant Foreigner to correct His people’s propensity to be religious and wrong and, thereby, reconcile their relationship. This title is first presented in the Towrah when his purpose is proclaimed in Dabarym 29.

He is also acknowledged in 2nd Chronicles 6, prophecies we have and will again consider.

In this case, ha Nakar | the Observant Foreigner is distinguished by his lawah | relationship with Yahowah. Their association is close, personal, and irrevocable. They are united in purpose and in spirit, so much so that God has given ha Nakar His seven ruwach | spirits, including the Spirit of Yahowah. In addition, the Choter benefits from the Ruwach of Chakmah | Intelligence, Bynah | Understanding, etsah* | Comprehensive Counsel on the Entire Story, Gibowrah | Courage and Conviction, and *Yir*ah* | Respect for Yahowah.

Ha Nakar, as the son of a foreign land, was chosen for this mission because, when God witnessed the ongoing defiance of His people throughout the Exodus, including the final meltdown at Marybah, He surmised the inevitable ~ the rebellion would continue such that there wouldn't be a Yahuwd who would listen and respond to Him. And, therefore, the prophecies regarding ha Nakar and ha Nakry are prolific pursuant to the concluding harvests and restoration of God's people. And this means that Yahowah knew this Tsadaqah | One who is Correct, as a enowsh* | mortal man, a *ben adam | descendant of Adam, would arrive as ha Nakar | the Observant Foreigner in advance of His deliverance and form an enduring relationship over three millennia before it was tangibly manifest in spacetime.

Describing him further, God tells us that he is Sarys | Esteemed and Authorized, the One Officially Designated by Him. But even more than this, we discover that his foes wish to sarys | castrate him, which is something one does to a bull they are seeking to control and keep from being productive.

As a result of his collaboration with Yahowah, Yahuwdym are asked to forego their defiance. God is returning because the time has come to restore His relationship with His people. Reconciliation is at hand. Simply stop being rebellious and nothing will prevent Yisra*elites from being included within the Covenant Family. This is the mission of ha Nakar ~ the purpose of Yada Yahowah and the Yahowah Vlog at YadaYah.com.

With everything riding on this one relationship, including the viability of the Covenant and the continued existence of life on this planet, Yahowah has a message for ha Nakar | Observant Foreigner. God's official designee must not ask, "What then, if I become a withered and unproductive ets | Tree, an incapacitated counselor or paralyzed messenger?" There is no time for second guessing, for doubt, a reprieve, to cease being productive on the Shabat, or even for a Moseh moment, when he buckled under the pressure of constant embitterment and ridicule.

Some might call it a coincidence, but I would not have identified with the ets | tree, or understood the consequence of it yabesh | withering and drying up as unproductive, had it not been for the relentless slander of the Mother Goddess Clique that has sought to castrate Yahowah's Bull. But as a result of their opposition to ha Nakar, God directed my attention to His response to Miryam's rebellion in Numbers 12, to Mykel's meltdown in 2nd Samuel 6, and then to Chawah in Genesis 2 as she twisted Yahowah's testimony to become a goddess. It was then that I discovered that the ets Da'ath | Tree of Knowledge and the Choter's receipt of the Spirit of etsah* | Counsel on the Entire Story and Da'ath | Knowledge demonstrated that they were one and the same. And it is from this perspective, and only this vantage point, that this prophecy can be understood. I will, and I must, continue being productive.

God provided this advice for His people and for this day. How you respond is up to you. In a world rife with irrational and immoral thought-police and muddled in conspiracy theories, while greatly outnumbered, our message will not be drowned out by the many complainers and critics nor muted too soon by the resolutely political.

Fortunately, God is not going to allow His Witness to be drowned out or suppressed. Together with the Family Yahowah has provided to buttress and enable His Nakar at this time, we will prevail. And even in the face of unrelenting censorship seeking to debilitate our efforts and silence God's Voice, as a result of our Yahowah Vlog collaboration, something we livestream every week, sometimes twice a day, we can celebrate this assessment...

“To the contrary, this is what (ky koh) Yahowah (Yahowah) says (amar*) on behalf of the Sarys | Esteemed and Authorized Official Designees who have been subject to castration as a result of the positions they have taken as leaders (la ha sarys), ‘They provide guidance regarding the benefits of the relationship (asher*) by being consistently observant and actively attentive while actively exploring and investigating (shamar) My seven Shabat promises (eth shabatowth any).

So they have chosen, preferring at this time (wa bachar), My will and My appreciation (chaphets) by revealing the correct path to the benefits of the relationship (*ba asher).

Therefore (wa), they are positioned to be overpowering and intense, uncompromising and firm, unrelenting and effective (chazaq) with My Covenant (*ba beryth any).” (*Yasha yah / Isaiah 56:4)

This mission cannot be accomplished alone, even with the seven spirits of Yahowah enabling ha Nakar | the Observant Foreigner, ets Da ath | Tree of Knowledge, and Choter | Stem. And this is why God cleaned house, replacing my publisher, editor, webmaster, and social media manager with officially authorized and esteemed designees so that we would prevail as we approach the ultimate Shabat observance. Team Yah has chosen to be at the center of Yahowah's will, earning His appreciation, doing so by revealing the correct path to receive the benefits of the relationship.

But let's be clear, it isn't easy. To prevail we must all remain chazaq ~ which is the operative term at this time. It is the antithesis of compromising, modest, humble, or meek. To be chazaq, the Covenant Family must remain intensely devoted, overpowering to the point of being harsh, unrelenting, and firm, totally resolute. There is to be no compromise with regard to the Covenant. You are in or you are out ~ a condition demonstrated by tenacity and determination to stay the course. Waver at this time, lured away by malcontent mothers, and your Father will disown you. These are not my rules or determinations, but His. And I'm not about to question Him or propose otherwise.

This is our Father's gift to His chazaq...

“Then I will offer, freely giving at that time (wa nathan) to those (la hem) in My Home and in My Family (ba beyth *any) and within My protected enclosure (wa ba chowmah *any) a hand, outstretched, welcoming, supportive, and empowering (yad), and a name (wa shem) even better, more beneficial, and valuable (towb) than other sons and daughters (min ben wa min bath).

I will give to him (*nathan la huw) an everlasting and eternal (*owlam) personal and proper name, designation and reputation (shem) which, for having shared the benefits of the relationship (*asher), will never be removed or taken away (lo karath*).” (Yasha Yah / Isaiah 56:5)

The beyth | home is the Covenant Family. The chowmah depicts our position within the protective enclosure of Earth when restored to the conditions of Eden during Sukah | Shelters in year 6000 Yah ~ less than eight years from this writing. The yad | hand is God's, welcoming and supporting those who continue to contribute to the wellbeing of His people. And the shem | name will be a God-given designation befitting the chazaq | resolute.

There are times when the context reveals that *huw | him (third-person masculine singular) should be rendered as if the text read hem | them. And while that may be permissible here, it would have God repeating Himself using a different pronoun since hem | those in Yahowah's Family and Enclosure are assured of His hand and favorable designation. Therefore, I suspect that the concluding gift of an eternal designation which will never be removed is being bestowed on ha Nakar for his commitment to revealing the way to receive the benefits of the Covenant.

In this next statement, 1QIsa^a differs from the Masoretic and from 1QIsa^b in the positioning of those serving as coworkers, whether this distinction precedes or follows Yahowah's name. Also, 1QIsa^a is the odd text out on "extolling" Yahowah's shem versus "loving" it.

"The children (wa beny) of ha Nakar | the Observant and Discerning Foreigner (ha nakar) have formed a relationship with and adhere closely to (*ha lawah al) Yahowah (Yahowah) to serve, attend to, and assist H/him (*la sharath huw), loving and adoring (*wa la ahab) that which is associated with Yahowah's (eth YaHoWaH*) name (shem), continually and demonstrably existing as H/his coworkers (la hayah la huw la ebed), always observing and noticeably examining while considering (kol shamar) the Shabat and the Promise of Seven (Shabat), making it special by avoiding disrespecting it (*min chalal huw), they are uncompromising and strengthened, devoted and unrelenting, established and firm (chazaq) in My Covenant (*ba beryth any)." (*Yasha yah / Isaiah 56:6)

Ha Nakar | the Observant Foreigner is masculine singular. And yet, as a miracle from God, he has children. They are the beneficiaries of his purpose, which is to direct all who will listen to the Covenant. This is why he is referred to as a Zarowa^o | One Cultivating a Fruitful Harvest. This explains why the Par | Bull becomes Parah | Productive.

Discerning individuals can quibble over whether the Covenant Children who have formed a close and indivisible relationship with Yahowah are sharath | attending to and assisting Yahowah directly or indirectly by serving alongside His Nakar. While the distinction may seem trivial to some, I see this as Yahowah provided the needed support to get this done as we are running out of time. And either way, the Children of the Observant Foreigner are not only enjoying a close, personal relationship with Yahowah, they are in love with His name.

Therefore, I see us as members of the same family, working together as a team, to accomplish the mission before us. And from this perspective, Yahowah is commending our continued and steadfast willingness to define ourselves by our resolve to demonstrate our commitment to examining and considering that which pertains to the final Shabat as it represents Yahowah's ultimate promise relative to the seventh epoch of time on this planet. He is also pleased with our unwavering and unflinching commitment to standing resolute in our convictions, never relenting, so that we are firmly established in His Covenant Family. And so, with the constant iteration of chazaq, we recognize Yahowah's preference for strength over timidity, harshness instead of meekness, and resilience over humility.

“I will bring them at this time (*wa bow*hem*) to My Set-Apart Mountain (*hem *el har qodesh any). I will cause them to rejoice, such that they are elated (wa samach hem) in My Family and Home (*ba beyth any) to be distinct, separated, and set apart, of intervention and intercession, of judgment and decisions, and of being assessed and evaluated (taphilah).

Their uplifting and elevating offerings and the sacrifices slaughtered for them (olah hem wa zebach hem*) are acceptable and approved, especially satisfying (la ratsown) on My sacrificial altar (al mizbeach any).

This is because (ky) My Home and Family (*beyth any) will be invited and summoned, read and recited, called out and proclaimed (*qara) a Home and Family (beyth) of reasoned requests and sound judgment for those who are set apart, distinct, and uncommon, and of intervention and intercession, even of assessment and evaluation (taphilah), for the entire family and all people (*la kol ha am).”
(Yasha Yah / Isaiah 56:7)

On Taruw^{ah}, Yahowah will be bringing every Covenant

Member, and especially those who have come to the aid of His Nakar, to the Temple Mount in Yaruwshalaim to witness the sacrifice and uplifting offering of the *Adamah Parah. It will be a time of great celebration as God removes all traces of religious contamination from the surviving remnant of His people. And from this point forward, all who inhabit the Earth will be set apart onto Yahowah and special.

One of the most maligned of all Hebrew words is taphilah. It is from the actionable root palah | to be separate and set apart, distinct and distinguished. Taphilah is also flavored by palal, which speaks of intercession and intervention, judgment and mediation, and of being assessed and evaluated. And while I incorporated each of these concepts into the translation, I did not include “prayer” because there is no basis for it in the word’s etymology.

As a result, Yahowah is bringing the chazaq | fiercest and most steadfast defenders of the Covenant to Mount Mowryah at this time to celebrate the sacrifices of the Bull and Goat, Yada and ELYah, as we prepare Yisra*el for their homecoming with Dowd and Yahowah.

This will be a time of intervention followed by evaluation, as the mortal remnant of Yisra*el is not only tested on Taruw*ah to determine who can enter the Garden on Sukah, but also to assess which of these people develop sufficiently over time to be trusted off of the planet in dimensions exceeding three.

God’s Family at this time will be noted for including Yahuwdym and Gowym, making it inclusive of every ethnicity on Earth. And this will be particularly so for those exercising good judgment.

So these are transformative words, serving as a life-changing revelations for those living at this time. This prophecy epitomizes the merit of working collaboratively in support of the Nakar | Observant Foreigner. And it affirms the simple truth that the will of God is to establish His Covenant Family and enjoy developing a productive relationship with His children.

Our purpose is to intervene on your behalf, translating Yahowah's words from a language too few understand, into the lingua franca of the world. And our offering to our God is your soul, delivered safely before Him.

These prophetic writings prove conclusively that Yahowah is God. He has provided a depiction of what is common among those who are invited into His Home. And God is celebrating His relationship with His children, showering them with everlasting gifts.

“Yahowah (YaHoWaH), My Upright One and Foundation (*edony), who gathers and assembles (qabats) yet again (*owd) the scattered (nadach) of Yisra*el | Those who Engage and Endure with God (Yisra*el), announces, in advance of it occurring (na*um), ‘I will obtain, bring together, and assemble (qabats) before him (al huw) those collected and obtained by him (la qabats huw*).’” (Yasha Yah / Isaiah 56:8)

This is the day I have most longed to witness, when those whom we have gathered unto Yahowah and into the Covenant are assembled before us. I am looking forward to seeing Yah's expression as He greets each new addition to His growing family.

And while that will occur and be marvelous to witness, there is another way to interpret this same prophecy because Yahowah will, during the evening of Taruw*ah, gather every eligible Yisra*elite on Earth and bring them to Yaruwshalaim so that they might benefit from the sacrifice of the *Adamah Parah. And this being the case, God is sharing credit by revealing that His Nakar and Team Yah will have made a contribution toward this ingathering through their witness. This is likely because we will have spoken of this event several thousands of times by this point.

All the while, until this day is over, and Yahowah sends the worst of men to She*owl and incinerates the rest of the rubbish at the conclusion of Taruw*ah, the beasts will remain fixated on terminating life, especially within the foliage of God's designated Tree...

“Every Beast and animal (kol chaythuw) of the country and open environs (saday), you will choose to come (bow) to devour and destroy (akal) every living thing (kol chaythuw) in the thicket and foliage of the tree (*ba ha ya*ar*).” (Yasha Yah / Isaiah 56:9)

This, the conclusion of the deadliest episode in human history, will transition this day to the most glorious celebration of life. And for that to occur, Satan and his minions must be throttled. And at this point, at least before the comprehensive purge of religion and politics, there will still be billions in league with the Adversary. Far too many will remain ensnared by religion, confused by conspiracy, and misguided by politics. And leading the parade to She*owl will be a cast of characters so appalling to God that He will devote much of the next chapter to their repudiation...

“Those who are watchmen, assigned to be lookouts (tsaphah huw), are blind (iwer). All of them (kol hem) are ignorant and opposed to Yada*, without understanding, without revelation and unaware, unable to teach and thus clueless (*lo*yada).

They are universally (kol hem) contemptable, rife with emotion, akin to dumb dogs, incapable of intelligent speech (ilem keleb*). They are without the capacity to understand or the ability to prevail, and they will not succeed as they are utterly incompetent, unable even (*lo*yakol*) to bark (la nabach), panting while dreaming, and thus hallucinating (hazah), lying around smitten with their inactivity and lack of awareness (*shakab ahab la nuwm). (Yasha Yah / Isaiah 56:10)

And so these overly emotional whores and malcontents (wa ha keleb) have an intensely fierce soul, stubborn and self-willed (az nepesh*). They will never acknowledge that they have gone too far, never admitting that they are gluttonous and unrestrained, as they are insatiable, never being satisfied (lo yada° saba° ah*).

Those acting as shepherds, clamoring for authorization to lead and feed the flock (wa hem ra° ah) are not Yada because they are ignorant and irrational, devoid of understanding, neither perceiving nor comprehending, and thus lacking the capacity to make intelligent connections (lo yada° byn*).

All of them have turned to their own way (kol hem la derek hem panah), every person after their own ill-gotten gain and dishonest advantage, acting like thieves (*°ysh la betsa° huw) without exception or restraint, and to the very end and their demise (*min qatseh huw).” (Yasha °yah / Isaiah 56:11)

Prior to the Mother Goddess rebellion last year, and previous to returning to Yasha°yah 56 and 57 to validate the nature of the Shabuw°ah Harvest this malevolent clique has been trying to misappropriate for themselves, I would have perceived this rebuke as a generic criticism of those lost in religion. But now, especially cognizant of what follows in the next chapter of Isaiah, combined with the utter irrationality of those trying to undermine Yahowah’s Nakar, I realize that this is specific to a particularly dumb and blind contingent of irritating women.

They foolishly perceive themselves to be enlightened, as watchmen of sorts. And they are so desperate to be Yada, they malign the one who earned that distinction with Yahowah long ago. All the while, the more they protest and post, the more apparent it becomes that they lack the capacity to understand much of anything pursuant to God. They are, as Yahowah depicts them ~ smitten with themselves because they are hallucinating.

While they are largely psychotic, lacking genuine empathy, they are an overly emotional, reactionary, and thoughtless brood. And because they are so mean spirited and vicious, and so pathetically self-willed, while recklessly stubborn, there is no appeasing or satiating them. They are unrestrained and insatiable in their craving to be seen as credible, even moral, lusting to be perceived as shepherds instead of wolves. And as much as their sole motivation is to replace me, they are as far from being Yada as were Paul, Akiba, and Muhammad. Even when their obvious failures to make intelligent connections are shared, they show no capacity to learn or correct their mistakes.

They have turned to their own way, to their goddess mythology. Seeking recognition, they have assured that their only acknowledgements will be in rebukes such as these. Not only did the Queen of the Goddesses steal tens of thousands from me and other Covenant members, they are currently misappropriating my unique translation format and transliterations to pass themselves off as if they were me. It's so bad, their most repeated hashtag is #CraigWinn, followed by #Yada and #YadaYahowah. It's thievery, just as Yahowah foretold. And it will result in their demise.

Should you be of the impression that I'm making too much of a gaggle of goons, I'd normally be prone to concur. But since Yahowah sees this differently, and targets them as a particularly aggravating foe, I'm going to follow God's lead and follow His words to their natural conclusion.

There isn't, and never has been, anything like what is found at YadaYah.com with the Yada Yahowah series and the Yahowah Vlog. The unparalleled amplified translations, copious explanations, illustrative commentary, and many thousands of unheralded insights reintroduce Yahowah's name, reestablish Dowd as our Savior, explain the purpose of the Beryth and Mow^oedym, provide an accurate timeline of events, renounce religion, and direct those who visit to God. And from Yahowah's perspective, a viewpoint that resonates throughout this portion of Yasha^oyah, this message is not only essential at this time, there is only one through whom it is being conveyed. So God is all in when it comes to protecting and supporting him.

There are upwards of a thousand prophecies which convey the same message ~ I am the one God has chosen and equipped to convey His message, announce His return, and reconcile the fractured relationship. And as this prophecy has already foretold, even pondering the possibility of this Tree of Knowledge withering is wholly unacceptable to Yahowah.

Considering the broader implications, when we survey the abuse which has been directed toward Israel and Jews by nations and religions, the most menacing institution of all has been Judaism. And the worst of the worst are Haredim – living as parasites while misrepresenting Yahowah, His Beryth, Towrah, and Ben. And if not for rabbis, there would be no Christianity or Islam to distort Yahowah's message.

While the rabbis will continue to conspire, they will soon come to regret what they have done, not because of the casualties they have inflicted, but because there will be recompense. And especially humiliating for them, the gowy they will come to despise will be judging them.

Fortunately for many, between now and then, there will be a harvest and a gleaning of the Covenant's Children on Shabuw^{ah} and then another on Taruw^{ah}. These will occur on either May 22nd, 2026 or June 11, 2027 and then during the early evening of September 23rd, 2033, not that the religious will notice. According to Yasha^{yah}, rabbis will be scheming against the Almighty and their brethren to the very end...

““You should agree to come, consenting to assemble together to change things around (*atah). I have decided to obtain and accept (laqach) intoxication with the confusion and insobriety of wine (yayn).

So (wa), we have chosen to be habitually inebriated, constantly consuming alcohol and sundry liquors to the point of incapacitated judgment (saba^h) through fermented libations (shekar).

Therefore (wa), it will be and he will exist (hayah) like this day (ka zeh yowm) tomorrow, if the days to come are opposed and delayed (machar) to a significant extent (gadowl) for the thousands of remnants (*yether ma*od*).”

(Yasha Yah / Isaiah 56:12)

This translation proved to be an interesting exercise in voice, pronouns, moods, and defining roots. This analysis begins by recognizing that this is presented as a quote to cite the mindset of the dishonest shepherds who were rebuked in the preceding statement. Their intent is to incapacitate the judgment of those they intend to beguile, literally intoxicating them with their debilitating rhetoric. They are knowingly peddling their delusions to the detriment of those they confuse. In fact, by using the imperative and cohortative moods, God is reporting that these malcontents have chosen to be inebriating and expect their followers to capitulate.

The most intriguing aspect of this comes from machar because it is a compound of ma | to ponder the implications of achar*, which is to “delay, defer, hinder, and cause many to hesitate and be left behind.” In this context, this means that the Mother Goddess Clique is committed to debilitating Yahowah’s Nakar | Observant Foreigner to such an extent that thousands of Yahuwdaym and Gowym who would otherwise benefit from the Ingatherings, in addition to the final remnant of Yisra*el to be purged of guilt on Taruw*ah, will machar | hesitate because their judgment will have been incapacitated. With the waters muddied, and now toxic with embittered slander, many potential beneficiaries will be hindered, with others delayed, such that they are left behind, unable to capitalize on God’s plan.

Beyond the specific warning, the preceding is also an admonition not to be swept up by the inertia of the Normalcy Syndrome. With all evidence to the contrary throughout history, and even with debilitating examples recently, people tend to believe that nothing much will change. They have been lulled into the opinion that tomorrow will be as today. But that is not the case, especially as we move into the Time of Israel’s Troubles.

Therefore, Yahowah is telling us that many obstacles will be tossed in the path of those who would otherwise benefit from ha Nakar. And more still will remain inebriated, with incapacitated judgment, such that they are lured into a false sense of security.

Fortunately, Yahowah is not playing a numbers game. He never has, and He never will. He knows that the naysayers will continue to hold sway over the deluded masses who are now less than eight years from drawing their last breath. With evidence and reason having no effect on most, and being indifferent to the very word of God, the only rational option is for Yahowah to value quality over quantity.

Yahowah's outreach through ha Nakar | the Observant Foreigner will continue to be directed toward those willing to invest the time to be right about Him and who approach with an open and clear mind. The most devoted of these highly valued souls will soon vanish during the Shabuw'ah Harvest. And when we are withdrawn to be with Yahowah on the Shabat of May 22nd, 2026 at the very beginning of the Time of Israel's Troubles, or on the Shabat of June 11th, 2027, as a hoard of Muslims flood into Isreal for the Great Jihad, hardly anyone will notice.

This is why we directed our attention to Yahowah's portrayal of the asaph* | Ingathering in Yasha'yah / Isaiah 57. A magnificent miracle of Godly proportions is inevitable and imminent...

“Then the right and vindicated (ha tsadyq – the correct and innocent) will vanish, disappearing such that those who remain will not know where they have gone (abad* – their whereabouts becomes unknown as they go missing and appear to be lost, having been carried away (qal perfect)). No one will give it any thought nor meaningfully ponder the implications (*wa *ayin *ysh sym al leb – but no individual examines or questions this or takes it to heart (qal perfect)).

Loyal and devoted individuals (*wa ysh chesed – people who are favored, loving, kind, and steadfast) will be harvested, gathered together and taken away during the asaph | Ingathering (asaph – they will be withdrawn, removed, and received (nifal participle)) while no one makes the connection to comprehend why (*ba ayin byn – with no one cognizant of the reason nor understanding the implications (hifil participle)).

For indeed (ky), away from (min) the presence (paneħ – the appearance and existence, typically the inception and beginning) of this evil shepherding, this disastrous calamity caused by troublesome former compatriots and miserable companions who are wickedly wrong (*ra*ah* – of malignant leadership, destructive rulers, maniacal cohorts, and insufferable malcontents), those who are correct, upright, and innocent (ha tsadyq – those who are right, guiltless, and vindicated) will be gathered in the harvest, removed and received (asaph* – will be taken away and withdrawn, assembled and brought together during an ingathering (nifal perfect third-person masculine singular (addressing ha tsadyq which is masculine singular))).” (*Yasha yah / Isaiah 57:1)

This statement, and the one which follows, is conclusive in affirming that the asaph* | Ingatherings will be of human souls. And during the most prolific of these – the *Shabuw*ah Qatsyr* – those who are tsadyq | right about Yahowah, His Towrah, Beryth, and Mow*edym, will abad* | vanish. They will abad* | disappear, such that those who remain will not know their whereabouts.

With the use of abad* we are also afforded an insight as to the disposition of our physical bodies. Since it is often rendered “perished” and “destroyed,” this suggests that, once our nepesh | souls depart, our lifeless flesh will cease to exist. This is because we must shed our basar | bodies to participate in the Shabuw^oah Harvest. A physical body cannot enter the 4th, 5th, or 6th dimensions en route to Shamaym.

Also interesting, abad* was scribed in the qal perfect, indicating that the tsadyq | correct will actually vanish at a point in time, with this transpiring with a definite beginning and finite conclusion. There is no nuancing this result. The outcome is presented as real, and not as a metaphor. Further, the fact that tsadyq is masculine, and realizing that abad* was scribed in third-person masculine singular, affirms that those who are correct who will be carried away and disappear.

The reason tsadyq is repeated, is because it is the key to deliverance. Those who participate in this ingathering will be right about the relationship, correct regarding the Covenant, and guiltless by having relied upon the Miqra^oey. Sharing what we have learned in this regard is our purpose.

On a planet whose inhabitants are numbered above eight billion, with fewer than one in a million extracted on Shabuw^oah, the relatively few who are withdrawn will barely constitute a ripple in the sea. Some will no doubt notice their disappearance, but in a world essentially devoid of analytical researchers and diligent journalists, few, if any, will ponder the implications. Souls are invisible to our eyes and even scientific detection methods, so, as our bodies vanish and souls depart, there will be nothing to see or report.

By describing the ingathered as ysh chesed* | individuals who are loyal and steadfast, Yahowah is reinforcing something I did not recognize or appreciate prior to December of 2024. It was then that a dozen former associates, including my publicist, editor, webmaster, and media manager, bolted to assuage the fragile ego of a jealous and embittered woman who was vying and crying for attention. Prior to this, I had thought that once Covenant, always so, but that isn't the case. Yahowah is only willing to accept those He can depend upon, who demonstrate that they are loyal and devoted. Eternity is a very long time, and God isn't interested in spending His with those He cannot trust.

He's reliable and steadfast, and He expects the same in us. This is the message of the Garden.

As further evidence of this, consider Miryam. She was called a prophet when she led the women's chorus of the Song of the Sea, but then she was berated by God, banished, stricken with leprosy, and subject to a final divorce, for having challenged her brother, Moseh.

This connection between devious and conniving women then and now is one Yahowah doesn't want us to miss. That is why He has repeated the reference to the ongoing problem of *ra*ah* | disastrous shepherds. Here, it is from their presence that those who are right are being harvested on Shabuw*ah. We will be forever parting company with the *paneḥ ra*ah* | presence of this miserable and malignant contingent of toxic conspirators.

Therefore, according to God, those who bailed on Yahowah and His Choter with so much left to be accomplished, and who then viciously turned against both, changing Yahowah's name while maligning the Tree of Knowledge, will be excluded from the Shabuw*ah Harvest. And they, as irrational and belligerent as they have become, will not comprehend why they will be left as we are asaph* | brought together, removed and received, during this ingathering. However, they will not be alone because the overtly political, conspiratorial, and religious prefer believing to reasoning, faith to facts, and as a result, they will remain clueless – which is as it should be. They are not redeemable. Byn escapes them, and it is by byn | evidence and reason that we come to a knowledge of God.

As a result of this fracture in what I had wrongly perceived as family, Yahowah directed our attention back to the Garden of Eden, where Adam and Chawah also proved unworthy because they were unreliable. This is the reason that Yahowah caused the fall of man, only to give us the opportunity to demonstrate what we were worth His attention, would listen, could be trusted, and were motivated to make an ongoing contribution to the relationship. This is why we being allowed back into the Garden on Sukah following Taruw^{ah} and Kipurym. It is why the Tree of Knowledge exists and why the Choter has been inspired to share its fruit. We will be afforded another one-thousand years under ideal circumstances to prepare the surviving mortal remnant to earn Yahowah's trust so that He can equip and enable those who are worth the risk such that they journey off of this planet and explore the universe.

Continuing to examine every nuance of God's timely message so that we get this right, note that the phrase "no one will consider the implications" was also written in the qal perfect. This means when the harvest transpires, we can be assured that, in the aftermath of our departure, there will be no cogent response at this time.

Then it gets interesting with asaph* | taken away during the harvest. It was scribed in the nifal participle. As a result, we discover that those who will benefit from the ingathering will have contributed to their own highly favorable outcome through their diligence. Further, they will be so incorporated into this harvest that they will be defined by it, becoming known as the asaph* | Ingathered.

While Yahowah has answered the questions we came to resolve, He was not done reinforcing His point. The tsadyq | correct and vindicated will abad* | vanish during the asaph* | harvest because they remain chesed | loyal and devoted and are favored for being steadfast. They will be min paneh | removed from the presence of ra^{ah} | a miserable time and malignant people. In addition to the MGC, the world's religious clerics, political leaders, and social influencers, as well as those caught up in the nonsensical frenzy posting away online, will have made a mess of things. They will have placed themselves and the planet in an irrecoverable death spiral. If not for Yahowah's intervention on Taruw^{ah} in 2033, Earth would become desolate.

Since it is important, I want to affirm that the ra^{ah} from which the right-minded and steadfast are being withdrawn are comprised of malevolent malcontents. *Ra*ah* depicts the degradation of judgment and leadership, such that many operate without morality. It predicts an inverted mindset where wrong is seen as right, and bad is considered good. This suggests that Yahowah is familiar with X in addition to the toxic drivel of the Mother Goddesses.

As the *ra*ah* | rottenness festers and this malignancy metastasizes, there will be no point to the continued presence of the tsadyq of the Beryth remaining on Earth. Not only will the plethora of contrarian voices and adverse conditions be too caustic for us to be heard over their roar, for those who would otherwise listen to become salvageable, they will have to hit rock bottom first. Far too few will consider the alternative to man prior to the point that they despair of hope, and that will only transpire when they realize that a political or religious solution to the carnage isn't possible.

All the while, the Earth will not be left without a voice or witness because our testimony will remain published in Yada Yahowah, presented at YadaYah.com, and streamed on the Yahowah Vlog. Moreover, in due time, the Witnesses will return in opposition to the religious and political while we give voice to Yahowah's last call.

Therefore, our removal during Shabuw*ah is best for everyone. The residue will continue to fall to the point where a few will begin to reject man and choose God. All the while, the tsadyq will be given a well-earned respite along with the opportunity for comprehensive learning so that we are prepared for the stretch run to the finish line.

Showing consistency, Yahowah reminds us by using the nifal stem a second time as the concluding verb, that those who are asaph* | gathered in the harvest and withdrawn by Him, will be received because they contributed to this ingathering. We are also reminded that ha tsadyq | those who are vindicated will be innocent ~ not guilty ~ because they will be right, which means that they are correct regarding Yahowah, His Son, Dowd, and all they are offering and have achieved.

The contrast between those taken and left during Shabuw^{ah} will become the ultimate expression of right versus wrong, devoted and compassionate as compared to malignant and maniacal, aware and engaged as opposed to oblivious and apathetic. This known, are you prepared and willing to be among the few advancing God's solution or are you contributing to the problem as a counterproductive and damning influence?

As the Earth plunges into the darkness of deceit, destruction, and death, Yahowah says of those contributing to and participating in this asaph* | Ingathering, that...

"They will arrive (*bow – they will come and be included (qal imperfect third-person masculine plural [from 1QIsa])) reconciled and restored, intact and healthy, satisfied and content, blessed and prosperous, in favorable circumstances and saved (shalowm – completely safe and sound).

They will be spiritually restored and comfortably settled (nuwach – they will be favorably associated and allied (qal imperfect third-person masculine plural)) within (al*) His restful environs (*mishkab huw – His lodge, pondering the implications of relaxing while being contemplative [from 1QIsa]), moving about and walking around while conducting their lives in a manner (halak – traveling around and going about, traversing space and proceeding in a way (qal participle)) which is right, honest, fitting, and proper (*nakoach huw – truthful, sincere, appropriate, justified, and honorable)." (Yasha Yah / Isaiah 57:2)

*Shabuw^{ah} Shalowm! asaph Shalowm! The Tsadyq will *Bow and find Shalowm! From a planet rife with ra^{ah} | rotten we will take the ride of a lifetime to shalowm | tranquility. Yahowah is withdrawing His Covenant Contributors from the rot of man, whereby God's sons and daughters will enjoy the most satisfying circumstances imaginable. Shamaym will be to our liking. Reconciliation and renewal await those being received.

I have always perceived Heaven as being a place where we are up and active, which is being reinforced here by halak | moving about. And since our inclusion will be predicated upon being tsadyq | right, it is to be expected that Shamaym | the Spiritual Realms will accommodate that which is nakoach | fitting and proper.

It is my hope and, indeed, God's expectation, that those who invest the time to read and become vindicated will exit this planet with us so that we do not have to endure what those who remain will experience. There will be pestilence and war, natural disasters, human disasters, runaway inflation and economic collapse – all while the world promotes its favorite conspiracy: blame the Jews.

Specifically addressing the clique of malcontent conspiratorialists who sought to claim this Shabu^wah Harvest for themselves as the voice of a Mother Goddess while disparaging Yada^o, Dowd, Yahowah, and the Ruwach, especially Yada Yahowah and the Yahowah Vlog, all under false pretenses, we find God outing and lambasting them...

“But as for all of you (*wa atem), those of you who are still present, wanting to approach (qarab – you who want to draw near by presenting your case (qal imperative second-person plural active)) at this time (henah – concurrently), you are children of false pretenses, under the spell of an anan* | Demonic Woman deliberately conjuring a false spirit to obscure reality and blow smoke as a Sorceress (*beny anan – you are the offspring of a female who is genuinely and intensely committed to pursuing a demonic spirit to actually occlude observation through sleight of hand and fortune-telling (poel piel qal participle feminine singular active absolute)), the seed (zera^o – offspring and product) of Na^aaph | the Adulterous One who is Unfaithful, Disloyal, Unreliable, and Religious (na^aaph – of the one soliciting lovers by way of idolatry and veneration of false gods and spirits (piel participle singular masculine absolute active)) and Zanah | the Despised Whore, the loathed woman prostituting her despicable nature by pandering to her partners for favors and bribes (wa zanaḥ – the shunned and scorned harlot and immoral prostitute who feigns love for adulation and money (qal imperfect third-person feminine singular active)).” (Yasha ʿyah / Isaiah 57:3)

Yahowah’s assessment is directed specifically toward those who are both raʿah | evil shepherds and troublesome compatriots who are wickedly wrong, and those who are trying to ascertain why others were taken and they were left behind during Shabuʿah. We know this to be true because God said “But as for all of you, those of you who are still present, desiring to approach at this time.” Especially relevant in this regard is that qarab, in the imperative mood, reveals that these people wanted to be part of the Harvest. And that means they knew about it and coveted it, while being excluded from it. And as such, this places a bullseye on the Mother Goddess Conspiratorial Clique.

There is no rational way to deny the realization that the people Yahowah is denouncing for having fallen under the spell of an Anan* | Demonic Woman conjuring false spirits is directing our attention to the malcontents congregating around Dee Powers. This cannot represent religious Jews because there are no ingatherings of souls associated with Judaism. Furthermore, they cannot be Christians because their rapture is on Taruʿah. Misled by Peter and Paul, Christians believe Shabuʿah was fulfilled as Pentecost with the birth of their Church. And in addition, Paul claimed that the Rapture would occur on Trumpets.

Having eliminated religious Jews and faithful Christians from the mix, we also know that this despised clique of the Zanaḥ | Despised Whore can neither be numerous nor have a significant audience, or else this repudiation of them would be in conflict with the previous statements where we learned that relatively few will pay attention. Therefore, apart from their irritatingly negative antagonism toward those who will be asaph* | Withdrawn, this is an otherwise meaningless cast of fools devoid of understanding.

That said, we must also confront the realization that this is among the longest, most detailed, and vitriolic condemnations found anywhere in the Towrah and Prophets. Therefore, this otherwise irrelevant assemblage of miscreants have garnered Yahowah's unbridled animosity. And in this context, it is obvious that it has been for their aversion to His Nakar | Obervant Foreigner and plans pursuant to the Shabuw^{ah} Qatsyr that has caused God to hate them.

The whole of Yasha^{yah} / Isaiah 56 and 57 leaves us with no other rational option other than to conclude that this hideous condemnation is focused on the same psychotic woman previously condemned in the prophecies associated with Chawah, Miryam, and Mykel in Genesis 2, Numbers 12, and 2 Samuel 6 ~ Dee Powers and her embittered conspiratorialist. They alone have claimed Shabuw^{ah} as their Harvest while writing themselves out of it.

While it seems like such an insignificant number of worthless humans, the two-dozen lost souls operating under the influence of the Mother Goddess will somehow cause through their intermixing of truth and deception, upwards of one thousand Jews to hesitate relative to the Harvests such that their progress is impeded and they get left behind. Yahowah views this as not only unforgivable, but as we shall soon see, as damnable.

Therefore, the cadre of characterless conspiratorialists who will be left behind at this time while expecting to have been part of the Ingathering are said to be beny^{an} anan | children of false pretenses, under the spell of a demonic woman deliberately conjuring false spirits to obscure reality and blow smoke. That's bad.

And this does not help: "beny^{an} anan – you are the offspring of a woman who is intensely committed to pursuing a demonic spirit to occlude observation through sleight of hand and fortune-telling." anan is a "Sorceress." That's worse.

In the participle form, anan is a derogatory title, depicting someone who is demonic. In the poel stem, those beguiled by her, rather than seen as victims of her seduction, are presented as collaborating with her. Under false pretenses, they willfully and knowingly deceive, while trying to obfuscate the truth. This means that they are equally committed to promoting their demonic diatribes as they are to slandering those who have earned the right to participate in the Harvest.

From this point forward, and inclusive of ʿanan | sorceress, indeed, throughout this entire denunciation beginning with the 6th verse, almost every verb will be presented in the second-person feminine singular ~ addressing one very nasty woman. This is something I’ve not witnessed previously in twenty-four years of translating. Clearly, God hates this woman.

However, before we get to the 6th statement of the 57th chapter, it’s the entire contingency of the Demonic Whore who are being condemned by God, beginning here with qarab. It reveals that a number of men and women have opted of their own freewill, to anger the Almighty while operating under her spell. Further, we find naʿaph, revealing that the degenerate woman has a male accomplice, someone who is “Unfaithful, Disloyal, Unreliable, and Religious.” And indeed, she does. We’ll call Dee Power’s cohort David Crud because he is her chief solicitor and enabler. Without him, the Sorceress has no influence.

David Crud is the spawn of the ʿanan | Demonic Woman, making him Naʿaph | Someone who Venerates False Gods. And as the lead devotee of the Mother Goddess, his job is to seek lovers for the Sorceress, drawing people in to venerate her. With naʿaph written using the piel participle, there is no refuting that D Crud has earned his dubious distinction of Disloyal and Unreliable explicitly by enabling the ʿanan | Sorceress. And that is exactly what we have witnessed. I have letters and other evidence to prove it.

This brings us to our third successive participle ~ verbal noun: Zanah | Loathed Woman. Therefore, in addition to being an anan | Demonic Woman and Devil's Advocate, the object of Yahowah's ire is a Zanah | Despised Whore. She zanah | panders to her partners for favors and bribes. This scorned harlot and miserable prostitute feigns adulation and love for money. And that is precisely our experience with Dee Powers.

As we press forward with our evaluation of this prophecy, let's remain grounded within the context in which it has been delivered. God's rebuke is so focused and personal, it's important that we remain cognizant of the crime which led to Yahowah's evisceration of her character...

“For this is what (ky koh) Yahowah (Yahowah) says (amar*): ‘You should choose to be observant, carefully considering and closely examining (shamar) the means to exercise good judgment and justly resolve disputes, making good decisions (mishpat).

Then (wa), chose to engage, so that you act upon (asah*) that which is correct and vindicating (tsadaqah) because (ky) My deliverance and resulting salvation (*yashuwah any) are approaching, they are close, imminent, and personal (*qarowb la any).

Therefore (la), the *Tsadaqah any | One who is Correct about Me and Vindicates with Me (*tsadaqah any) will come to pursue the harvest, be included and return, then remain (*la bow) so as to be revealed and made known (galah). (Yasha Yah / Isaiah 56:1)

Blessed by the benefits of the relationship, joyous and productive by showing the proper way (ashry*), is this person, a mortal man (enowsh*), who acts upon as he engages in this with unfolding implications over time (asah zo*th*).

Because (wa) this son (ben) of Adam is a lone man (adam), he will be exceptionally firm and resolute in this, empowered and strengthened to prevail, restoring through his conviction and resolve with regard to this (*chazaq ba hy).

By closely examining and carefully considering (shamar)

the Shabat as the promise of seven (Shabat), thereby avoiding defiling and profaning it, or making it common (*min chahal huw), he is being observant, careful, attentive, and aware (wa shamar).

So, his hands, and especially that which he influences (*yad huw), will be kept from acting upon or engaging in (*min asah) anything unjust, immoral, or irrational, troubling or distressful (*kol ra). (*Yasha yah / Isaiah 56:2)

Do not say regarding (*wa *al amar) ha Nakar | the Observant Son of a Foreign Land, the one who knows and understands through thoughtful examination, then acknowledges by being discerning and respectful (wa ben ha nakar), who has formed a relationship and joined with (*lawah el) Yahowah (Yahowah), something which would infer (*la amar), ‘Yahowah (𐤏𐤓𐤕𐤁) will surely abandon me, preventing me from being included (*badal badal any) as part of His family (*min *al *am huw).’

And let not the Sarys | Esteemed and Authorized Official Designee say (*wa *al amar ha sarys), ‘What then, if (hen) I become a withered and unproductive *ets | Tree, an incapacitated counselor or paralyzed messenger (*any *ets yabesh)?’ (*Yasha yah / Isaiah 56:3)

To the contrary, this is what (ky koh) Yahowah (Yahowah) says (*amar) on behalf of the Sarys | Esteemed and Authorized Official Designees who have been subject to castration as a result of the positions they have taken as leaders (la ha sarys), ‘They provide guidance regarding the benefits of the relationship (*asher) by being consistently observant and actively attentive while actively exploring and investigating (shamar) My seven Shabat promises (*eth shabatowth *any).

So, they have chosen, preferring at this time (wa bachar), My will and My appreciation (chaphets) by revealing the correct path to the benefits of the relationship (*ba asher).

Therefore (wa), they are positioned to be overpowering and intense, uncompromising and firm, unrelenting and effective (chazaq) with My Covenant (ba beryth *any). (Yasha ʿyah / Isaiah 56:4)

Then I will offer, freely giving at that time (wa nathan) to those (la hem) in My Home and in My Family (ba beyth *any) and within My protected enclosure (wa ba chowmah *any) a hand, outstretched, welcoming, supportive, and empowering (yad), and a name (wa shem) even better, more beneficial, and valuable (towb) than other sons and daughters (min ben wa min bath).

I will give to him (nathan la huw*) an everlasting and eternal (*owlam) personal and proper name, designation and reputation (shem) which, for having shared the benefits of the relationship (asher), will never be removed or taken away (lo karath). (Yasha ʿyah / Isaiah 56:5)

The children (wa beny) of ha Nakar | the Observant and Discerning Foreigner (ha nakar) have formed a relationship with and adhere closely to (ha lawah al) Yahowah (Yahowah) to serve, attend to, and assist H/him (la sharath huw), loving and adoring (wa la *ahab) that which is associated with Yahowah's (eth YaHoWaH) name (shem), continually and demonstrably existing as H/his coworkers (la hayah la huw la ʿebed), always observing and noticeably examining while considering (kol shamar) the Shabat and the Promise of Seven (Shabat), making it special by avoiding disrespecting it (min chahal huw*), they are uncompromising and strengthened, devoted and unrelenting, established and firm (chazaq) in My Covenant (ba beryth *any). (Yasha ʿyah / Isaiah 56:6)

I will bring them at this time (wa bow* hem) to My Set-Apart Mountain (hem *el har qodesh *any). I will cause them to rejoice, such that they are elated (wa samach hem) in My Family and Home (ba beyth *any) to be distinct, separated, and set apart, of intervention and intercession, of judgment and decisions, and of being assessed and evaluated (taphilah).

Their uplifting and elevating offerings and the sacrifices slaughtered for them (olah hem wa zebach hem*) are acceptable and approved, especially satisfying (la ratsown) on My sacrificial altar (al mizbeach any).

This is because (ky) My Home and Family (*beyth any) will be invited and summoned, read and recited, called out and proclaimed (*qara) a Home and Family (beyth) of reasoned requests and sound judgment for those who are set apart, distinct, and uncommon, and of intervention and intercession, even of assessment and evaluation (taphilah), for the entire family and all people (*la kol ha am). (*Yasha yah / Isaiah 56:7)

Yahowah (YaHoWaH), My Upright One and Foundation (edony*), who gathers and assembles (qabats) yet again (owd*) the scattered (nadach) of *Yisra*el* | Those who Engage and Endure with God (*Yisra*el*), announces, in advance of it occurring (*na*um*), 'I will obtain, bring together, and assemble (qabats) before him (al huw) those collected and obtained by him (*la qabats huw). (*Yasha yah / Isaiah 56:8)

Every Beast and animal (kol chaythuw) of the country and open environs (saday), you will choose to come (bow) to devour and destroy (akal) every living thing (kol chaythuw) in the thicket and foliage of the tree (*ba ha ya ar). (*Yasha yah / Isaiah 56:9)

Those who are watchmen, assigned to be lookouts (tsaphah huw), are blind (iwer). All of them (kol hem) are ignorant and opposed to Yada*, without understanding, without revelation and unaware, unable to teach and thus clueless (*lo*yada).

They are universally (kol hem) contemptable, rife with emotion, akin to dumb dogs, incapable of intelligent speech (ilem keleb*). They are without the capacity to understand or the ability to prevail, and they will not succeed as they are utterly incompetent, unable even (lo yakol*) to bark (la nabach), panting while dreaming, and thus hallucinating (hazah), lying around smitten with their inactivity and lack of awareness (*shakab ahab la nuwm). (Yasha Yah / Isaiah 56:10)

And so these overly emotional whores and malcontents (wa ha keleb) have an intensely fierce soul, stubborn and self-willed (az nepesh*). They will never acknowledge that they have gone too far, never admitting that they are gluttonous and unrestrained, as they are insatiable, never being satisfied (*lo*yada° saba°ah*).

Those acting as shepherds, clamoring for authorization to lead and feed the flock (wa hem ra°ah) are not Yada because they are ignorant and irrational, devoid of understanding, neither perceiving nor comprehending, and thus lacking the capacity to make intelligent connections (*lo*yada° byn*).

All of them have turned to their own way (kol hem la derek hem panah), every person after their own ill-gotten gain and dishonest advantage, acting like thieves (ysh la betsa° huw) without exception or restraint, and to the very end and their demise (*min qatseh huw). (Yasha Yah / Isaiah 56:11)

‘You should agree to come, consenting to assemble together to change things around (atah*). I have decided to obtain and accept (laqach) intoxication with the confusion and insobriety of wine (yayn).

So (wa), we have chosen to be habitually inebriated, constantly consuming alcohol and sundry liquors to the point of incapacitated judgment (*saba) through fermented libations (shekar).

Therefore (wa), it will be and he will exist (hayah) like this day (ka zeh yowm) tomorrow, if the days to come are opposed and delayed (machar) to a significant extent (gadowl) for the thousands of remnants (*yether ma*od*).’

(Yasha ʿyah / Isaiah 56:12)

Then the right and vindicated (ha tsadyq) will vanish, disappearing such that those who remain will not know where they have gone (abad*). No one will give it any thought nor meaningfully ponder the implications (*wa *ayin *ysh sym al leb).

Loyal and devoted individuals who are steadfast (*wa ysh chesed) will be harvested, gathered together and taken away during the asaph* | Ingathering (asaph*) while no one makes the connection to comprehend why (*ba ayin byn).

For indeed (ky), away from (min) the presence (paneḥ) of this evil shepherding, this disastrous calamity caused by troublesome former compatriots and miserable companions who are wickedly wrong (*ra*ah*), those who are correct, upright, and innocent (ha tsadyq) will be gathered in the harvest, removed and received (asaph*). (Yasha ʿyah / Isaiah 57:1)

They will arrive (*bow) reconciled and restored, intact and healthy, satisfied and content, blessed and prosperous, in favorable circumstances and saved (shalown). They will be spiritually restored and comfortably settled (nuwach) within (al*) His restful environs (*mishkab huw), moving about and walking around while conducting their lives in a manner (halak) which is right, honest, fitting, and proper (*nakoach huw). (Yasha ʿyah / Isaiah 57:2)

But as for all of you (*wa atem), those of you who are still present, wanting to approach (qarab) at this time (henah), you are children of false pretenses, under the spell of an anan* | Demonic Woman deliberately conjuring a false spirit to obscure reality and blow smoke as a Sorceress (*beny anan), the seed (*zera) of *Na*aph* | the Adulterous One who is Unfaithful, Disloyal, Unreliable, and Religious (*na*aph*) and Zanah | the Despised Whore, the loathed woman prostituting her despicable nature by pandering to her partners for favors and bribes (wa zannah).” (Yasha^oyah / Isaiah 57:3)

It is from this vantage point, one which reveals the timing of these events, and identity of hero and villain, and the basis of the argument, Yahowah continues to critique this adversarial contingent of demonic conspiratorialists. *Anag | ridicule, as the opening verb in this segment of the rebuke, was scribed in the hitpael imperfect plural to reveal that the Demonic Woman’s rebellious and condescending brood would continue to mock and slander on their own initiative...

“On what basis (al my* – against whom concerning the Most High is of question that) have you, without any actual guidance or provocation, independently and continually become effeminate and overly sensitive, whiny bitches, self-entitled crybabies, delighting in ridiculing and mocking because you are so easily swayed to incitement (anag* – have you all, apart from others, uniquely become so readily swung by a woman, shedding all traces of masculinity, overtly prone to derision, enjoying being slanderous without any prior inducement, exploiting another while taking pleasure in acting like overly emotional, needy, and gossipy women hopelessly relishing contempt, pliable and without substance (hitpael imperfect second-person plural))?

Against what and whom (al my*) do you open your mouth and boast (rachab^opeh – are you so continually covetous and greedy, profuse in your communication (hifil imperfect plural)), sticking out your fangs and prolonging your tongue lashings (arak lashown* – extending your diatribes (hifil imperfect second-person plural))?

Are you not (lo^{} atem*) the children born (yeled – the offspring conceived) of revolting rebellion who rose up in clear defiance of the authority and relationship by holding a grudge and remaining stubbornly indignant (peshah^o – into discordant deflection and false interpretations contrary to God, lost in religion, offensive, incensed, and criminal, wantonly rebellious against the agreement), the seed (zera^e – the offspring and result, the harvest and product) of a Sheqer | Vain and Useless Liar who is a Betrayer, a deceptive fraud promoting a sham (sheqer – of false pretenses and injurious testimony of one who swears deceitfully and thereby disappoints by way of self-delusion)?” (Yasha ʿyah / Isaiah 57:4)

Addressing the Demonic Whore’s malcontents, Yahowah explains that they will be acting on their own initiative rather than on His instructions. God further insists that there will be no basis for their provocations. He says that their sense of self-entitlement is the result of an emotional outburst, with them becoming overly effeminate and sensitive rather than informed or rational.

Then Yahowah lays down the gauntlet, prophetically proclaiming that the mean-spirited provocateurs would assuage their hurt feelings through mocking, slander, and ridicule – thereby committing the ad hominem fallacy ad infinitum. Without a valid justification, actual guidance, or provocation, they will become a clique of gossip women pathetically pursuing derision. They will define themselves by their exploitation and extortion.

Having told all who were willing to listen in the 56th chapter of Isaiah that He would be revealing and enabling His Tsadaqah and Nakar at this time, Yahowah’s reveals that the boasts and tongue lashings of the Betrayer’s faithful are exceptionally ill-advised. But at the same time, we learn that they won’t listen, will deny God’s condemnation applies to them, and continue senselessly wagging their tongues.

Those promoting their Mother God while slandering the Herald of the Son of God, are, according to God, anag* scribed in the hitpaal imperfect. This means that they, without any actual provocation or guidance, have become overly effeminate and sensitive, whiny bitches. They are self-centered and self-indulgent. These crybabies delight in ridiculing and mocking because they are pliable and easily swayed to incitement and derision.

One would do well to avoid being called anag* by God. But I suppose the same would hold true for anan* | Sorceress, Zanah | Whore, *Na*aph* | Unreliable, and Sheqer | Betrayer. Methinks Yahowah has a serious bone to pick with these dysfunctional zombies.

Rather than Children of the Covenant, Yahowah announces that they are yeled peshah | born of rebellion. And He is right. They removed themselves from the Covenant, Yahowah, and His Nakar for no other reason than peshah | defiance, indignance, and discord. When their claims to have found a mother god and to be speaking for her were repudiated, rather than return to the fold, they demonstrated that they were sheqer | vain and useless liars, repugnant betrayers, deceptive deceivers knowingly promoting a scam. Unable to defend their claims, they hid, blocking access to their clique, proving that they weren't actually serving anyone other than themselves. Then, unable to attract an audience, they stooped to misappropriating my name. And so Yahowah reports that they are delusional and injurious, operating under false pretenses.

This is Yahowah's primary concern. He has chosen and enabled His Nakar | Observant Foreigner to awaken His people from their stupor before His return and this disrespectful and pretentious clique seeks to destroy his credibility, thereby negating our Father's intent. According to God, the anan* | Demonic Woman who is a Zanah | Despised Whore in concert with her *Na*aph* | Unreliable Man are Sheqer | Betrayers who are covetous and greedy, craving that which is not theirs to take ~ just like Chawah, Miryam, and Mykel. They are in defiance of the Almighty as a result of a senseless grudge. And like so many Yisra*elites throughout the ages, they are embittered and indignant.

The fact that these wretched souls continually solicit followers by hash-tagging my name, God-given titles, and website devoted to our collaboration, is because of their intense acrimony. They have been whipped into a cantankerous frenzy. And as bad as that sounds, God has even more to say about those trying to topple the Tree of Knowledge serving the Ram, making this personal and family business...

“Are you not those who burn with rage and are so intensely and acrimoniously riled up and boiling over (ha ha chamam – why be the ones in such a cantankerous frenzy, steaming while spewing animosity (nifal participle plural)) against *ha ayil | the most Prominent Tree and the Ram, the doorway and prolific source of leadership (*ba ha ayil – why question and oppose the most noble, prominent, and important of men, the robust and prolific source of wealth from the branches (masculine plural addressing both expressions of the ayil*)) in the orderly arrangement (tachath) of the spreading out of the entirety of the flourishing and profusely productive ets* | Tree (*kol *ets ra*anan* (both are masculine singular)), thereby taking the lives of those who would be born (shachat ha yeled – killing (qal participle plural (making this the last inclusive verb)))) with an inheritance (ba ha nachal) from the *Sa yph | Branch and *ha Sela | Rocky Crag (*tachath sa*yph ha sela (both titles are masculine))?” (*Yasha yah / Isaiah 57:5)

Just a guess on my part, but it’s probably a bad life decision to have irritated God to the extent He refers to you as chamam | intensely acrimonious, enraged, and cantankerous. And then when He states that you have earned His wrath by spewing venom at His ayil* | Prominent Tree and Ram, it’s time to reevaluate one’s ambitions. Yahowah is exceedingly protective of His ayil* ~ by any definition.

Not only is an ayil* the largest and most prominent tree, ets* is the Hebrew word for “tree.” And because this Tree is the one God has equipped as His ets* | Tree to *Ra*anan* | Spread Out and Flourish, his mission is to be *ra*anan* | profusely productive. He is, of course, describing the ets Da*ath* | Tree of Knowledge in the Garden who has been equipped by His Ruwach | Spirit as the Choter | Stem with etsah Da*ath* | Counsel on Everything Pertaining to the Tree of Knowledge.

By trying to poison the roots of God's Tree, and trash its fruit, the Mother Goddess Clique became the living embodiment of Chawah in Genesis 2 and of the one who was stoned on God's instructions for uprooting the trees in Numbers 15.

As a result, those speaking for their Mother God are seen "shachat ha yeled – taking the lives of those who would be otherwise be born" into the Covenant. They have become spiritual murderers, not unlike Satan.

These vicious malcontents are also depicted trying to steal the inheritance of God's people, plucking it from the Choter's Sa'yph | Branches and from ha Sela | the Crag. For this crime, there is no resolution or forgiveness according to Yahowah.

There is also no obfuscating this indictment. This is as specific to their character and this crime as was Chabaquwq / Habakkuk to Sha'owl | Paul. Just as he was identified as the Plague of Death, Dee P and D Crud are Sheqer | Betrayers, an 'anan | Demonic Woman who is a Zanah | Illicit Whore working through a Na'aph | Unreliable Man.

The reason that I highlighted the fact that everything mentioned in the previous statement was plural, is that Yahowah is condemning the entire coterie of coconspirators. They are all 'anag | unscrupulous. This known, from this point forward, God's condemnation is focused on one exceptionally evil woman. We know this because every accusation henceforth is directed at a feminine singular individual and there is nothing in Isaiah 57:5 which could serve as the female subject of the scathing rebuke which follows. And that leaves us with a single candidate when seeking the identity of the 'anah | Demonic Woman and Zanah | Whore who is the Sheqer | Great Betrayer.

So let it be known, according to Yahowah, the 'anan Zanah Sheqer will reap what she has sown, and that is to be associated with an equally maligned cast of characters and cast into She'owl...

“Your fate and assigned (*chalaq ath – your reward and allotment (feminine singular)) inheritance (nachal) is among (ba) the illegitimate smooth-talking and insulting flatterers who feign praise and adoration but are divisive (cheleq – the seductive who scatter and divide). Their sorrow (ham hem – their turmoil and exasperation) is your lot (*gowral ath – is your fate and retribution (feminine singular)).

Afterall (gam), to them (la hem) You have poured out (shapak – you have offered, lavishing and bestowing (qal perfect second-person feminine singular)) a drink offering with a fusion of ideas (nesek – blending and mixing things together). You have elevated, overstated, and offered up (alah* – you have ascribed an undue status to (hifil perfect second-person feminine singular)) grain offerings (minchah).

So why (ha) should I change My mind and relent, ceasing to be concerned (nacham – should I stop caring (nifal imperfect first-person singular)) about these things (al el-leh)?” (*Yasha yah / Isaiah 57:6)

This is Yahowah’s assessment and decision regarding the one who has devilishly mocked and slandered His Tsadaqah Nakar at this crucial moment in time. And clearly, God isn’t about to change His mind.

In essence, Yahowah is acknowledging that He has encountered comparable rebellions and that He has dealt with them similarly. And, of course, Chawah, Miryam, and Mykel from Genesis 2, Numbers 12, and 2 Samuel 6 immediately come to mind. However, this is a bit different because this later-day anan Zanah* initially feigned support and adulation for Yahowah’s Nakar before contradicting herself and becoming so seductively divisive as the Sheqer | Betrayer.

The lesson here is as clear as it is consequential. There is something deemed far worse than continuing to be overtly religious or political, something vastly more costly than being ignorant and apathetic, and that is to have been exposed to the truth and then, not only reject it, but repudiate it. And that, combined with the timing and the severity of this crime, is why the Mother Goddess Clique has earned Yahowah's most comprehensive and condemning reprimand.

The thing God has had to endure the longest and that He most regrets is the fracturing of His family. It began, of course, immediately after the Children of Yisra*el were conceived and became untenable during the Exodus, only to continue unabated in the Promised Land. And now, on the cusp of delivering salvation, an especially horrendous breakup has occurred, one fixated on undoing all God wants accomplished. And for that, this sorrowful lot will be sorry forevermore.

According to Yahowah, the woman He introduced in Isaiah 57:3 as someone deliberately conjuring a false spirit to obscure reality and blow smoke as a sorceress and despised and loathed woman of ill-repute pandering to her partners for favorable treatment while complaining that she was excluded from the Shabuw*ah Harvest, is pouring out a toxic brew of inebriating concoctions that are essentially babel because they comprise a confounding blend of commingled contents. Equally troublesome, she claimed Shabuw*ah for herself, elevating and overstating her absurd claims regarding this offering of grain. Craving a role in God's story, she ascribed an undue and undeserved status to herself – as had been her custom over the years. She would be the mother speaking for her Mother God.

But since there is no such entity, or voice, she lied about everything, going so far as to change Yahowah's name and gender identity to suit her situation. Yahowah, however, didn't much like being presented as a hermaphrodite and said, “So why (ha) should I change My mind and relent, ceasing to be concerned (nacham) about these things (*al *el-leh)?”

There are many subjects about which Yahowah is clear and uncompromising, beginning with His name and nature. And as protective as God is regarding both, there is something about which He is even more defensive – those through whom He works to achieve His goals. This is particularly so of His Son and of His Beloved's Herald.

In this case, Yahowah has revealed that His Nakar | Observant Foreigner will, as the Man from Edom and *Adamah Parah, serve as a Witness on the Temple Mount before offering himself as a sacrifice to purge the returning remnant of their guilt. Knowing this, the Sorceress has sought to place her cravings over God's plans. And since He has positioned her as a Whore, Yahowah is continuing to flesh out the metaphor of wonton infidelity in contrast to the wellbeing of His Covenant Family. Rather than the Bull's willingness to offer himself to save Yisra^{el}, she is seen with a bed accommodating herself as the voice of her mother goddess.

“Over the exalted mount, arrogantly, through self-exaltation (al har gaboah*) and being carried away with desire (wa nasa), you have placed and made (sym – you have set (qal perfect second-person feminine singular)) your bed (mishkab ath* – your bier for your corpse in death).

Additionally (gam), there (sham) you ascribed status to yourselves (alah*) while slaughtering the living (zabach zabach).” (Yasha ^{יְהוָה} / Isaiah 57:7)

Bad idea. Not only are we encouraged to listen to Yahowah and do as He instructs rather than as we desire, there are no beds associated with Mount Mowryah. It is a place devoted to the affairs of God and His Covenant Family. And these things are brought to fruition through the fulfillment of the Mow^edym, and not though personal indulgence.

Further, it is Yahowah who ascribes status to His coworkers. We are correct in acknowledging His aspirations, but foolish in ascribing our ambitions to Him (or her as the case may be). The consequence of doing so is shattered lives, embittered estrangement, and the demise of countless souls. This isn't something God takes lightly or will leave unpunished.

With God, there is cause and consequence and He is always fair, allotting what we deserve. In this case, during the final countdown prior to His return, as the door to life in the Garden is reopened, there the Mother Goddesses are trying to unhinge God's plans on the cusp of providing eternal and abundant life. She would have Yahowah's Zikarown | Most Memorable Men replaced by her own proverbs and maxims. And that's particularly funny because the fracture commenced with the ʿanan Zanah falsely claiming that the 14th Proverb spoke of her Mother Goddess even when there is no mention of em* | mother, even ruwach | spirit in the whole of the Mashal and the lone feminine subject is chakmah | intelligence ~ something they are clearly lacking.

“Then, in the end, and at the backside (*wa achar – so afterwards, sometime later toward the end) of the door (ha deleth – the entrance and portal to be drawn up), at the doorframe and on the cusp of abundant life (wa ha mazuwzah – the doorpost; from mah – to ponder the implications of ziyz – full and productive living), you have set up and placed (sym – you have made (qal perfect second-person feminine singular)) your own memorial along with your maxims (*zikarown ath – your (is feminine singular) commemoration and proverbs, even your own memorable man) because, indeed (ky), separated and away from Me (*min *eth any), you are laid bare, revealing (galah – you have exposed (piel perfect second-person feminine singular)) your bed and death bier (*mishkab ath). And you have climbed up to your bed (*wa *alah mishkab ath – you have exalted and offered your (feminine singular) death bier (qal imperfect second-person feminine singular)), enlarging it opportunistically and greedily (rachab – adding to it to gain from it (hifil perfect second-person feminine singular)).

So (wa), You all have made a covenant with her against them (*karath la ath min hem – you have cut yourself into her situation in opposition to them, thereby you have forever banished and estranged yourselves for her apart and severed from them by you uprooting yourselves for her (qal imperfect second-person masculine singular)). You have loved their bed

(ahab mishkab hem* – you adore their death bier (qal perfect second-person feminine singular)). You prefer and have inspected (chazah) phalluses (yad – genitalia referred to euphemistically using the word for hand).” (Yasha Yah / Isaiah 57:8)

While it has been blatantly obvious for more than a year now that the psychotic woman pursuing these caustic ambitions had assured her incarceration in She^{*}owl, something Yahowah will affirm momentarily, since there were women in her ranks that I once valued, I warned them that they were writing themselves out of the Covenant, thereby excluding themselves from Heaven. My many attempts to help them, only made them more belligerent and finally I gave up and left them to the fate they had chosen for themselves.

As clearly as words allow, God has declared that these malcontent women and misled men are estranged from Him. And there is no revolving door on Heaven or the Covenant Family. You can arrive on God’s terms or leave on your own, but there is no means of return.

In this case, however, those posturing the voice of their Mother God have gone well beyond exiting the Covenant. According to Yahowah, they have made another arrangement with her ~ the anan Zannah* | Demonic Whore. And in cutting themselves into her situation, they are now seen as opposed to hem | them ~ Yahowah, Dowd, and Yada.

*Karath la ath min hem reveals that the men and women in league with and pandering for this cantankerous and vitriolic Zannah have cut themselves into her situation which is in opposition to those who will be taken during the Shabuw^{*}ah Harvest. They are, thereby, eternally banished and estranged along with her. They are now severed from us, having uprooted themselves because they preferred to develop a relationship with her in opposition to Yahowah’s Covenant Family, to the Tree of Knowledge, and the Passover Lamb. So, they are not without a covenant, and thereby will suffer a communal fate.

I would like to remind everyone that in twenty-four years of rendering Yahowah's testimony as accurately and completely as possible, I have never before seen such a proliferation of feminine singular references. And they all point to the ʿanan | Diabolical Woman. She remains the subject of this rebuke because this Zanah | Insincere Whore is deliberately conjuring demons to obscure reality as a sorceress while pandering for favorable treatment, all while protesting about being excluded from the Shabuwʿah Harvest and Heaven.

As for God's concluding assessment, that is an inside joke between us. You see, the most unhinged of the Sorceress' demons is a sexually frustrated anorexic alcoholic and cutter who bounces between religious cults. While I don't know her, my wife tried to help her, and she repaid her kindness by creating a website devoted to slandering me, complaining that I had killed her. Among her issues is a box containing a phallus of sorts that she bought online and had shipped to a longstanding friend of ours whom my wife had introduced prior to knowing that she was fruitloops. You see, God has a sense of humor. And as would be expected, because she is so robust and unattractive, the ʿanan is a sexually deprived Zanah, as are most of her supporters.

After continually renouncing Yahowah's Choter, Nakar, Zarowaʿ, and ʿAdamah Parah, the Mother Goddesses turned against Dowd, denying his second of three lives when he served as our Savior by fulfilling the Spring Mowʿedym. Theirs became an especially toxic brew of diabolical deceptions, all designed to deny King Dowd's return. And in so doing, they ignorantly played themselves right into Satan's hands while doing everything in their power to mask the stench.

Those pretending to speak for Spirit Mom are so entrenched in their pagan mythology that they have become continually contentious, imposing themselves into the midst of a story that was not supposed to be about them. And here is the problem with that ~ ha Nakar's primary purpose has been and remains to reintroduce Yahowah's name while reacquainting Yisraʿel that Dowd is their returning King, the Messiah and Son of God who redeemed them by fulfilling Pesach, Matsah, and Bikuwrym. Without this knowledge, everyone misses the Shabuw^{ah} Qatsyr and the Taruw^{ah} Laqat. The sacrifice of the ^{*}Adamah Parah does not occur. There is no mortal remnant to restore so there is no Homecoming on Kipurym or return to the Garden on Sukah.

Opposing all of this is Satan's life goal. If any aspect of the foregoing doesn't occur as foretold, Satan wins and the Earth is destroyed, along with the human experiment. And so now with everything riding on His collaboration with His Nakar | Observant Foreigner who has come to be Tsadaqah | Right about God and Vindicating, this ^{*}anan | Sorceress and Zanah | Whore who is Sheqer | the Betrayer has joined ha Satan | the Adversary in trying to preclude Yahowah's and Dowd's return on Yowm Kipurym | the Day of Reconciliations.

This is the ultimate crime because, without the Nakar, none of this occurs. God is all in with one man bearing many titles and the weight of the world on his shoulders. It is why the Choter is equipped like none other ~ with the Seven Ruwach | Spirits of Yahowah: Chakmah | Intelligence, Bynah | Understanding, ^{*}etsah | Comprehensive Counsel as the Tree, Gibowrah | Courage and Conviction, and Yir^{ah} | Admiration and Respect, in addition to the very Ruwach Yahowah. He is, thereby, chazaq | resolute in his resolve, determined in his purpose, unshakable in his conviction, firm in his approach, ferocious in his defense, uncompromising in his commitment, and unrelenting in his mission. It is why there are upwards of a thousand prophecies regarding his deployment at this time. And it is why Yahowah is so condemning of this Sheqer | Betrayer.

God, no doubt, wanted my wife and I to experience an embittered taste of what He has endured with the Children of Yisra^{el} over the past forty centuries. This is how we develop a shared sense of empathy, which is needed to persist against a target audience of chronic malcontents. But more than this, it's apparent that Yahowah wanted to send another essential message ~ we are capable of being aman* | reliable and chazaq | consistently dependable when we are tsadaqah | right. We can earn God's trust. We can prove worthy by getting back up when we fall, by learning from our mistakes, and by engaging collaboratively such that we make the world a better place.

Yahowah isn't asking us to be perfect because that would be unachievable and boring. There would be nothing to learn and no way to grow. He wants us to be observant, to engage, and to be steadfast such that He can trust us. This was my test. And now God is announcing the result.

We were both exposed to the same Towrah | Guidance and Instructions. Upon shamar | close examination and careful consideration, I have been declared tsadaqah | correct, earning the title of ha Nakar | the Observant Foreigner. I have chosen to go where Yahowah's words lead.

But choice requires an alternative, a Serpent in the Garden so to speak. And since ha Satan was allowed inside *Gan eden to seduce Chawah, her namesake was allowed into the Covenant Family for the same purpose, luring souls away from God 6000 years removed from the initial confrontation.

It was deliberate, a necessary line of inquiry, the opportunity to make a final and enduring decision. Since eternity is forever and the Covenant is Family, Yahowah must build a protective wall around it just as He did by surrounding Eden*.

In this regard, while we get to choose God, He also has the opportunity and responsibility to decide among us as well. And this was one of my greatest concerns initially in writing the books of Yada Yahowah. I was always apprehensive of giving too much away, of making it too easy for the casual observer to meet the baseline requirements of the Covenant, even when their character and convictions were inadequate. And now I know how Yahowah resolved my concern.

The shamen | calloused and unresponsive, ignorant fatling concocting her babel | confounding commingling of truth and lies would be allowed to shalach | dispatch her tsyr | unhinged and twisted messenger as adversarial envoys. Her ad* | witnesses would rachog | alienate and estrange, separating themselves from God and His Covenant Family. But in so doing, at this time, to thwart our King's glorious return to His Family, in this way, she and her cronies will have earned the worst possible outcome...

“You have consistently contended with, imposing yourselves over (wa suwr – you have lorded over (qal imperfect second-person feminine singular)) the approach of the King (la ha melek). Calloused, unresponsive, ignorant, and fat (shamen), you have increased and multiplied (wa rabah – you have been exalted (hifil imperfect second-person feminine singular)) your mixtures and compounds even as perfumes, ointments, and salves (*raquach ath – your (second person feminine singular) propensity to intermix and commingle).

Then you dispatched, sending out (wa shalach – you dispatched and let loose (piel imperfect second-person feminine singular)) your unhinged and twisted messengers and anguishing idolatrous envoys to cause distress and anxiety while you besiege on behalf of yourself in adversarial fashion (*tsyr ath - your (second person feminine singular) pivoting envoys are hostile toward the tsuwr | crag) as witnesses into perpetuity, eternally (ad* – endlessly) alienated and estranged, as remote, distant, and separated as is possible in space and time (min rachog), even (wa) as you are humiliated and cast down (shaphel – you are debased and brought down (hifil imperfect second-person feminine singular) forever (ad*) to She*owl (*She*owl*).’ (*Yasha yah / Isaiah 57:9)

And there it is...off to Hell ~ just as I had foretold.

So, Ms. Powers, are you enjoying playing the starring role in this prophetic portrayal? Isn't this what you have coveted all along?

I think, as does Yahowah, that is fitting now for you to rename yourself and your adversarial accounts, channels, and websites: anag* | Derision of the anan* | Demonic Woman and Zanah | Illicit Whore who is the Sheqer | Great Betrayer. I'd wager that the URLs are available and they have your name written all over them. Surely, your *Na*aph* | Unfaithful One can acquire them for you.

It's hard to know what to add once Yahowah dispatches someone you once tried to help to She*owl. But it's not like me to walk away from the scene of a crime this hellish without providing additional guidance.

And in this case, the anan* and ha Nakar are at odds. I am trying to facilitate the glorious return of my King before his adoring family and they are trying to preclude it. I want the final remnant of Yisra*el restored no matter the sacrifice, and they only care about themselves. I'm devoted to Yahowah and to learning all that can be known, then sharing it, and they are calloused, ignorant, and unresponsive. I'm committed to a single unified presentation of Yahowah's story from beginning to end and they are all over the map. I'm trying to clear the air, and they are fumigating the joint.

I have been sent by Yahowah to His people at this time and they are dispatching demonic assaults against my reputation and our presentations of God's message. They would have two gods, and I celebrate the realization that our Father is one. I serve Yahowah while they are aiding and abetting the Adversary. My purpose is to restore Yahowah's relationship with His people and theirs is to keep everyone alienated and estranged because misery loves company. But because of this conflict, they have a confirmed reservation in She*owl.

Continuing to disparage those committed to disparaging His Nakar and Melek, Yahowah reports...

“With the many variations of your way and prolonged path (*ba rob derek ath – your (second person feminine singular) manner), you have become wearisome (*yaga – you have expended considerable energy in becoming tedious (qal perfect second-person feminine singular)), but you are never willing to admit (lo amar – you never acknowledged (qal perfect second-person feminine singular)), ‘Life of the beastly group (chayah – the beast, life, renewal, and a band of individuals) is hopeless, futile, and damning (yarash – is depressing and dissipating and must cease and desist (nifal participle)).’

Through your influence (*yad ath – by your (feminine singular) actions), you sought to be found sufficient and obtain (matsa – you tried to discover, find, experience, possess, and encounter, becoming recognized for (qal perfect second-person feminine singular)) a reason to assert (al ken – a basis to justify that) you were not diseased and afflicted (lo chalah* – you were not sick and weak, mortally wounded and grievous, nor even remorseful or sorry (qal perfect second-person feminine singular)).” (*Yasha yah / Isaiah 57:10)

As is the case with most serial liars, they cannot keep their stories straight. And when confronted with irrefutable evidence that they are mistaken, they pivot to another position as if argumentum by distraction were a rational response. And, therefore, debating them becomes wearisome. Even when obviously wrong and the effort is made to correct them, they reject all evidence to the contrary, even from God, and deny reproof. They are incapable of admitting that they aren’t just incorrect, they have been errant from the outset and have gone from bad to worse.

After having revealed that He is sending the Mother Goddesses to Hell, one would think that Yahowah would move on to another pressing issue. But that is not the case. And even with countless misleading paths being strewn haphazardly upon His own, God remains uniquely concerned about the anan* and her accomplices. And that’s unusual for Him because this cast of caustic characters is far from the first to never admit they are wrong. But I suppose that the difference this time is that this beastly group of naysayers picked the worst time and wrong target for the futile and damning assault on God’s plans and people.

As a result, the psychotic instigator of this ill-timed rebellion has been called out and condemned. The woman who has long been crazed to find herself written into God's plans so that she might feel important in light of all evidence otherwise, has been revealed as the most catastrophic and condescending of souls – as someone far worse than worthless.

While she was always psychotic, anxiety ridden, and diabolical, she was never honest. Her insecurities terrified her the such an extent, she had to mask them behind the veil of mother goddess delusions...

“And so by association, who is it and what (*wa eth my – so why) are you so troubled over and riddled with anxiety, dreading to the point of being frantic and psychotic (*da*ag* – are you so concerned in your dreadful and desperate degraded mental state (qal perfect second-person feminine singular)) while you continue to be so intimidated and anxious, awestruck while trembling, horrified to the point of being terrified (*yare – are you so frightened and afraid (qal imperfect second-person feminine singular)) such that (ky – because by comparison) you are so deceptive with your outright lies, thereby promoting a pagan delusion which is contrary to reality (kazab – you became dishonest, communicating that which is not true even as your deceptions and your gods have been shown false and you have been convicted of perpetrating a fraud (piel imperfect second-person feminine singular))?

And, therefore, it's Me you no longer mention or remember, such that you do not recall My most memorable of men (*wa *eth any lo zakar* – you have forgotten and fail to consider (qal perfect second-person feminine singular)).

You have not considered these words judgmentally nor have you taken these statements to heart, examining this message relative to your inclinations and motivations (lo sym *al dabar leb ath – you have not placed this testimony on your heart (qal perfect second-person feminine singular)) [from 1QIsa]].

Don't question whether I (ha lo any) will take action, even after remaining silent for a long while (chashah – will act and speak out, responding out after having withheld My reply (hifil participle masculine singular)).

From the very beginning and without end (*wa min owlam), regarding Me (*wa *eth any) you have never shown any respect or admiration (lo yare – you have continually been disrespectful (qal imperfect second-person feminine singular)).” (Yasha Yah / Yahowah Saves / Isaiah 57:11)

Note to self and others: lying about Yahowah while slandering His collaboration with His Nakar is a very bad idea. Turns out, God does not appreciate such things and He holds grudges.

As is the case with most psychopaths, deep down, they are incurably insecure. And they will say or do anything to mask their vulnerability. Today's anan* | Demonic Woman and Zanah | Duplicitous Whore who has been so inappropriately cruel to my wife, caustic towards me, and condescending toward God, was clinically diagnosed as being exactly as Yahowah has foretold. Desperate to hide her degraded mental state, she slanders others as a smokescreen.

The woman my wife and I had treated better than anyone in her life by her own admission, returned the favor by lashing out against us when we had never been anything other than supportive and kind. And according to God, her motivation was her own sense of inadequacy. She found our genuineness and generosity intimidating because she was not capable of either and was horrified by comparison. This is a debilitating failure in human character and psyche that I've studied for a long time and experienced often, so I'm fully aware that Yahowah understands the problem and has assessed her condition accurately.

However, while there are millions of psychopaths, there is only one whose outright lies and pagan deceptions emerge from someone who was exposed to the truth and then chose to twist it to misrepresent Him and slander His chosen implement. This is the kind of dishonesty manifest by Satan in the Garden when he conspired with Chawah against Adam. And the fact that her vitriol is being spewed publicly at this time, with the fate of His Mow*edym, Beryth, and Bakowr on the line, Yahowah is unrelenting in His condemnation.

Sure, the likes of Paul, Akiba, and Muhammad have lied, creating debilitating religions, but they were always unaffiliated with God, His chosen implements, and never knew the truth. But such was not the case with Chawah, Miryam, Mykel, or now Dee Powers. They were not mistaken; they exemplify deliberate deception.

This is why Yahowah confronts the *Anan Zannah by telling us that she has dismissed Him and His most memorable of men. She heard and saw His words spoken and written by His Nakar, but she failed to consider their implications. She placed her ambitions above God's acclaim, her interests over His instructions, and her perceptions atop His pronouncements. She not only created and promoted a Mother Goddess, changing Yahowah's name and testimony to advance her pagan proposition, she became the voice of her invention. And then when I demonstrated that the passages she cited to promote her delusions said the opposite of her proposition, she formed accounts and websites designed to destroy my reputation and the credibility of Yada Yahowah.

Turns out, Yahowah knew she would do this very thing at this time and conveyed this prophecy to refute the one who will question why she was left behind during the harvest she tried to commandeer. So, God reveals that she brought incarceration in She*owl upon herself. Yahowah isn't to be questioned or trifled with in this manner, especially not now or in this way. The 2,700 years between this prophecy and its fulfillment isn't to be seen as inaction. God cares.

Sometimes, when we witness someone fall all over themselves this precipitously, renouncing what they once claimed to esteem, we are inclined to wonder if every aspect of their life has been a fraud. And now Yahowah answers this question for us regarding the Whore of Babel. God says that the Zannah left behind on Shabuw^{ah} and estranged from Him has never been with Him. She has always placed her ambitions over His acclaim. And in this way, she is akin to Satan, which is why she was called a Sorceress.

Should anyone believe that I'm unfairly picking on a Dee Powers and her cast of malevolent malcontents just because they have striven to undermine everything Yahowah and I have achieved over the past twenty-four years, that isn't the case. I see them as ignorant and irrelevant. But since that isn't God's perspective, we will continue to go where His words lead.

I say this because of what we have read from Yasha^{yah} / Isaiah 56:1 through this point in 57:11. God identified His co-worker as the Nakar on the occasion of the Shabuw^{ah} Harvest. Then He went on the attack, specifically denouncing a singular woman along with her minions because she and they questioned why they had been left behind. The subject has not changed, as God remains disgusted by a uniquely deceptive and dishonorable woman at this time – as is confirmed by the way each condemnation has been presented in the feminine singular. And in particular, anah, Zannah, and Sheqer are the most demonic and duplicitous titles in God's arsenal, and He deployed all three to explain why He was justified in sending this woman to Hell. He is, thereby, warning those who believe her that they should reconsider their association with her. God has a long and flawless memory.

“I, Myself, will correctly recount and report, then declare (any nagad* – I will make known, even conspicuous, publishing and acknowledging (hifil imperfect first-person singular)) your sense of righteousness and justice, your means to decide what is right and acquitting, even your honesty (*tsadaqah ath – your (feminine singular) claim to accuracy and your justifications (feminine singular)) and that which pertains to your activities and endeavors, the things you have done (*wa *eth ma^{aseh} ath – in addition to your

(feminine singular) patterns of behavior and the result of your labors [from 1QIsa which corrects the MT's "their" to "your"]], but neither this nor those you have gathered to you will be of any benefit to you because there is nothing accomplished by you (*wa qibuwts ath lo ya*al ath – so that the others in your (feminine singular) community who share your beliefs and these things pertaining to you (feminine singular) are shown to be without merit or value and so that they do not prevail with you (hifil imperfect masculine plural) [from 1QIsa which adds those this woman has gathered unto herself]).” (Yasha ʿyah / Yahowah Liberates / Isaiah 57:12)

What God is saying here is that the Zanah and the Nakar are in opposite camps. While my commitment is to be right about Yahowah, accurately presenting His testimony, since she has not, God is recording and presenting what the Sorceress has claimed to the contrary. Then with this translation and subsequent Yahowah Vlog presentation of Yasha ʿyah / Isaiah 56 and 57, the prophecy is being fulfilled by correctly reporting what Yahowah revealed.

Our Father's assessment began by revealing that He would identify and deliver the Tsadaqah who is right about Him, using him as the means to redeem His people. This would occur prior to and in conjunction with the Shabuwaḥ Harvest. He proceeded to tell us that this asaph* | Ingathering of those who are right about Him will cause them to disappear as they are brought to Him in shalowm. And while most remain oblivious, there will be a contingent of those who are left behind, those known by their association with a Sorceress and Whore. They will have been aware of this Harvest, will have expected to have been included in it, but will be excluded not knowing why.

So, as we pondered the implications, we were left with a single object of Yahowah's ire. And that is why the entire diatribe has been rendered in second-person feminine singular – constantly criticizing the one who chose to disparage everything she had known.

Since God is always fair, it will be on account of what she has pontificated and propositioned that she will be judged. And the outcome is already predetermined and bleak. She will have accomplished nothing other than to impugn herself and destroy the lives of her accomplices.

While this is all very specific, from a more generic perspective, few things are more caustic to religious beliefs than Yahowah's testimony when it is accurately presented. Every rabbi, pope, cardinal, and bishop, every imam, pastor, and priest, along with many politicians and teachers will be exposed and condemned in this way – hanged by their own words and deeds. It is the strategy I took throughout Twistianity, God Damn Religion, and Babel because it is irrefutable. So from a broader sense, whether they taught that there was no God, or they spoke of a god by a different name, Yahowah has put them on notice that He will hold them accountable by correctly recounting their words and deeds.

This known, there may be a less damning fate awaiting those who have justified the unjustifiable without having become aware that their representations of God are inaccurate. They may be fortunate to have their souls destroyed at the end of their counterproductive lives. But it should be noted that it is unlikely that a person would reach the level of rabbi, pastor, preacher, imam, mentor, spokesperson, politician, or professor and have done so without realizing somewhere along the way that there were serious flaws and inconsistencies in the system they were advocating.

And yet, while not as bad as the *Anan Zanah, most continue pontificating their errant message when proven wrong. Some even seek to justify what they must suspect is unreliable. Nevertheless, they are not willing to surrender the status they have achieved, nor endure the indignity of being ostracized by their peers, to admit that they are promoting myths.

For the souls who will have waited too long to choose Yahowah over the anan* or of others perhaps beguiled by more popular influencers, who may have become too comfortable relying upon implausible notions, Yahowah says that, since He won't be saving them, maybe they'll have better luck with their followers. Methinks, not, but that's because me thinks.

“In crying out for you, summoning others on your behalf, or even when issuing a proclamation for you (ba zaʿaq ʾath – in assembling together with you (feminine singular) and speaking for you (qal infinitive construct masculine singular – as a verbal noun, the one continually congregating with while conveying the message of this woman)), have your community, those you assembled to share your beliefs (qibuwts ʾath – your (feminine singular) accumulation of notions and your companions who you have gathered for veneration; from qabal – to receive and accept assumptions which correspond to that which is actually the opposite), save you (natsal ʾath – deliver and rescue you (feminine singular) to a more favorable circumstance, sparing you (hifil imperfect)).

Therefore, with regard to all of them (wa ʾeth kol hem), the Ruwach | Spirit (ruwach – the influence and power of God), He will lift up and carry (nasaʾ – He will take (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)), grasping hold of and taking away (laqach – He will be collecting and capturing (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) the meaningless and valueless, those who are a waste of breath and their useless idolatry (hebel – futility and vanity, their conceit and false hopes).” (Yashaʿyah / Isaiah 57:13 in part)

According to God, it does not matter how loudly they cry on her behalf or how many followers she assembles in her brood, there will be no deliverance from She*owl. This isn't a popularity contest. Since their Spirit Mom can't save them, and God won't, Yahowah taunts them into trying to save themselves. While they won't be the first to attempt this feat, there has never been any chance of success.

Then demonstrating He has a sense of humor and that He knows how to foreclose an argument, Yahowah has His Ruwach | Spirit dispose of them. The very Ruwach they tried to turn into a Mother God will capture and collect what Yahowah perceives as valueless souls. They are a waste of breath because they promoted idolatrous notions regarding Him. And even more condemning, when deploying the Spirit, which is a feminine noun in Hebrew, Yahowah addressed both verbs, *nasa and laqach, in third-person masculine singular ~ as He. As such, the Mommy Goddesses are completely blown away in their devotion to a Spiritual Mother. It was pure genius on God's part to convey this as He did under the circumstances.

While this continues to be a specific assault on the Sheqer's Mother Goddess Cult, in a broader sense, those who believe that the popular appeal of their religion makes them right, will be proven wrong by the one who is right. Those who cling to the past as if the longevity of their religion makes it true, will be unheralded in the future. When believers claim that millions or billions cannot be wrong by virtue of their many proclamations and sheer size of their community, they are choosing men over God. And in all of human history, the majority have never been right. Moreover, God's not holding a referendum.

The use of qibuwts is clever, albeit biting. On the surface, it reveals that far too many expect their devotion to their counterfeit and replacement religious assemblies, to save them. They believe that customary delusions that have failed in the past will suddenly prevail after a millennium of anguishing results.

But frankly, nothing short of accepting what is right will deliver the misled from the Time of Ya'aqob's Troubles. Their great "qibuwts – accumulation of things, their many companions, their plethora of convocations, and the vast magnitude of what they have received from rabbis, pastors, priests, and social media influencers that they assumed to be true, will be as vapor ~ as worthless as they have made their souls. This is the myth of the social influencer.

Digging deeper, qibuwts forms the basis of kibbutz – the farming collectives in Israel which became the seed from which the Socialist dreams of Communism emerged. And as we have learned, while an individual can be good or bad, right or wrong, collectively, men and women are almost always wrong. Even worse, qibuwts is from “qabal – to receive and accept assumptions which correspond to that which is the opposite.” Qabal in the feminine is Qabalah – the spiritualism of the rabbis as proclaimed in their Zohar. Whether it is Socialism or Spiritualism – Yahowah described His people accurately – just as He said He would.

Religious pronouncements are all futile, holding no more weight with God than a fleeting breath and the residual vapor. The Ruwach will blow them all away, cleansing the Earth of these debilitating lies.

The answer, which is the antidote for religion, is to trust and rely upon Yahowah. Those who do will inherit the world – along with all the benefits of the Covenant. As God’s children, we will live in His presence atop His set-apart mountain during the one-thousand-year celebration of our return to the Garden during Sukah.

As such, hebel is “breath,” the symbol of mortal life and of spoken words. Yahowah’s Spirit will, therefore, seize mortal souls whose lifeless words misled others, carrying them away to an eternity in She*owl.

This is the conclusion of Yahowah’s overt rebuke of the anan* | Sorceress and Zanah | Whore who is a Sheqer | Vain Betrayer and Deceptive Fraud demeaning Yada, Yada Yahowah, the Yahowah Vlog, God’s Nakar, Choter, Basar, and Zarowa*, in addition to His beloved Son, our King and Savior Dowd, while claiming the Shabuwa*ah Harvest as her own. Yahowah’s condemnation is comprised of a dozen, detailed, comprehensive, and yet concise statements. It is the longest and most relentless denunciation of anyone found in the Towrah or prophets, worse than the dressing down of Satan in the Garden and of the Yisra*elites for their belligerence and antagonism throughout the Exodus. Moreover, the introduction, timing, and depiction is a perfect match for one particular woman and of none other.

So that it is fresh in our minds, Yahowah's denunciation of the Mother Goddess and her malcontent brood of vipers began with this pronouncement...

“Every Beast (kol chaythuw) of the country and open environs (saday), you will choose to come (bow) to devour and destroy (akal) every living thing (kol chaythuw) in the foliage of the tree (*ba ha ya*ar*). (Yasha Yah 56:9)

Those who are watchmen, assigned to be lookouts (tsaphah huw), are blind (iwer). All of them (kol hem) are ignorant and opposed to Yada*, without understanding, without revelation and unaware, unable to teach and thus clueless (*lo*yada).

They are universally (kol hem) contemptable, rife with emotion, akin to dumb dogs, incapable of intelligent speech (ilem keleb*). They are without the capacity to understand or the ability to prevail, and they will not succeed as they are unable even (*lo*yakol*) to bark (la nabach), panting while dreaming, and thus hallucinating (hazah), lying around smitten with their inactivity and lack of awareness (*shakab ahab la nuwm). (Yasha Yah 56:10)

And so, these overly emotional malcontents (wa ha keleb) have an intensely fierce soul, stubborn and self-willed (az nepesh*). They will not acknowledge that they have gone too far, never admitting that they are gluttonous and unrestrained, as they are insatiable and never satisfied (*lo*yada*saba*ah*).

Those acting as shepherds, clamoring for authorization to lead and feed the flock (*wa hem ra*ah*) are not Yada because they are ignorant and irrational, neither perceiving nor comprehending, and thus lacking the capacity to make intelligent connections (*lo*yada*byn*).

All of them have turned to their own way (kol hem la derek hem panah), every person after their own ill-gotten gain and dishonest advantage (ysh la betsa^o huw) without exception or restraint, doing so to the very end and their demise (*min qatseh huw). (*Yasha yah 56:11)

‘You should agree to join us, consenting to assemble together to change things around (atah*). I have decided to obtain (laqach) intoxication (yayn) so (wa), we can be habitually inebriated, constantly consuming alcohol and sundry liquors to the point of incapacitated judgment (*saba) through fermented libations (shekar).

Therefore (wa), it will be (hayah) like this day (ka zeh yowm) if the days to come are opposed and delayed (machar) to a significant extent (gadowl) for thousands of remnants (*yether ma*od*).’ (*Yasha yah 56:12)

It’s then that the right and vindicated (ha tsadyq) will vanish, disappearing such that those who remain will not know where they have gone (abad*). No one will give it any thought nor meaningfully ponder the implications (*wa *ayin *ysh sym al leb).

Loyal and devoted individuals who are steadfast (*wa ysh chesed) will be harvested, gathered together and taken away during the asaph* | Ingathering (asaph*) while no one makes the connection to comprehend why (*ba ayin byn).

For indeed (ky), away from (min) the presence (paneh) of this evil shepherding, this disastrous calamity caused by troublesome compatriots and miserable companions who are wickedly wrong (*ra*ah*), those who are correct, upright, and innocent (ha tsadyq) will be gathered in the harvest, removed and received (asaph*). (*Yasha yah 57:1)

They will arrive (*bow) reconciled and restored, intact and healthy, satisfied and content, blessed and prosperous, in favorable circumstances and saved (shalowm). They will be spiritually restored and comfortably settled (nuwach)

within (al*) His restful environs (*mishkab huw), moving about and walking around while conducting their lives in a manner (halak) which is right, honest, fitting, and proper (*nakoach huw). (Yasha ʿyah 57:2)

But as for all of you (*wa atem), those of you who are still present, wanting and expecting to approach (qarab) at this time (henah), you are children of false pretenses, under the spell of an anan* | Demonic Woman deliberately conjuring a false spirit to obscure reality and blow smoke as a Sorceress (*beny anan), the seed (zera ʿ) of *Na*uph* | the Adulterous One who is Unfaithful, Disloyal, and Unreliable (*na*aph*) and Zanah | the Despised Whore, the loathed woman prostituting her despicable nature by pandering to her partners for illicit favors and affection, even bribes (wa zanah). (Yasha ʿyah 57:3)

On what basis (al my*) have you, without any actual provocation, independently become effeminate and sensitive, whiny bitches, self-entitled crybabies, delighting in ridiculing and mocking because you are so easily swayed to incitement (anag*)?

Against what and whom (al my*) do you open your mouth and boast (rachab peh), sticking out your fangs and prolonging your tongue lashings (arak lashown*)?

Are you not (lo atem*) the children born (yeled) of revolting rebellion who rose up in clear defiance of the authority and relationship by holding a grudge and remaining stubbornly indignant (pesha ʿ), the seed (zera ʿ) of a Sheqer | Vain and Useless Liar who is a Betrayer, a deceptive fraud promoting a sham (sheqer)? (Yasha ʿyah 57:4)

Are you not those who burn with rage and are so intensely and acrimoniously riled up and boiling over in a cantankerous frenzy, steaming while spewing animosity (ha ha chamam) against *ha ayil | the most Prominent Tree and the Ram, the doorway and prolific source of leadership (ba

*ha ayil) in the orderly arrangement (tachath) of the spreading out of the entirety of the productive *ets | Tree (*kol *ets ra anan), thereby taking the lives of those who would be born (shachat ha yeled)) with an inheritance (ba ha nachal) from the *Sa yph | Branch and *ha Sela  | Rocky Crag (*tachath sa *yph ha sela )? (*Yasha yah 57:5)

Your fate, reward, and assigned (*chalaq ath) inheritance (nachal) is among (ba) the illegitimate and insulting flatterers who feign praise and adoration but are divisive (cheleq). Their sorrow (ham hem) is your lot (*gowral ath).

Afterall (gam), to them (la hem) You have poured out (shapak) a drink offering with a fusion of ideas (neseq). You have elevated, overstated, and offered up (alah*) grain offerings (minchah). So why (ha) should I change My mind and relent, ceasing to be concerned (nacham) about these things (al el-leh)? (*Yasha yah 57:6)

Over the exalted mount, arrogantly, through self-aggrandizement (al har gaboah*) and being carried away (*wa nasa ), you have made (sym) your bed (*mishkab ath). Additionally (gam), there (sham) you ascribed status to yourselves (alah*) while slaughtering the living (zabach zabach). (*Yasha yah 57:7)

Then, in the end, at the backside (*wa achar) of the door (ha deleth), at the doorframe and on the cusp of abundant life (wa ha mazuwzah), you set up and placed (sym) your own memorial along with your maxims (*zikarown ath) because, indeed (ky), separated and away from Me (*min *eth any), you are laid bare, revealing (galah) your death bier (*mishkab ath). And you have climbed up to your bed (*wa *alah mishkab ath), enlarging it opportunistically and greedily (rachab).

So (wa), all of you have made a covenant with her against them, cutting yourselves into her situation in opposition to them (*karath la ath min hem). You adore their bed (ahab mishkab hem*). You prefer and have inspected (chazah) phalluses (yad). (Yasha ʿyah 57:8)

You have consistently contended with, imposing yourselves over (wa suwr) the approach of the King (la ha melek), calloused, unresponsive, and fat (shamen), while you have increased and multiplied (wa rabah) your mixtures and compounds even as perfumes, ointments, and salves (*raquach ath).

Then you dispatched, sending out (wa shalach) your convoluted messengers and anguishing idolatrous envoys to cause distress and anxiety while you besiege on behalf of yourself in adversarial fashion (*tsyr ath) as witnesses, eternally (ad*) alienated and estranged, separated as much as is possible in space and time (min rachog), even (wa) as you are humiliated and cast down (shaphel) forever (ad*) to She*owl (*She*owl*). (Yasha ʿyah 57:9)

With the many variations of your way and prolonged path (*ba rob derek ath), you have become wearisome and tedious (yaga ʿ), but you are never willing to admit (lo amar) that the life of the beastly group (chayah) is hopeless, futile, and damning such that it must desist (yarash). Through your influence (*yad ath), you sought to be found sufficient and obtain (matsa ʿ) a reason to assert (al ken*) you were not diseased and afflicted (lo chalah*). (Yasha ʿyah 57:10)

And so by association, who is it and what (*wa eth my) are you so troubled over and riddled with anxiety, dreading to the point of being frantic and psychotic (*da*ag*) while you continue to be so intimidated and anxious, awestruck while horrified and afraid (yare ʿ) such that (ky) you are so deceptive with your outright lies, thereby promoting a pagan delusion which is contrary to reality (kazab)?

And, therefore, it's Me you no longer remember, such that you do not recall My most memorable of men (*wa *eth any lo zakar*). You have not considered these words judgmentally nor have you taken these statements to heart, examining this message relative to your motivations (*lo*sym *al dabar leb ath).

Don't question whether I (ha lo any) will take action, even after remaining silent for a long while (chashah). Continuously and from the very beginning (*wa min owlam) regarding Me (*wa *eth any), you have never shown any respect (*lo*yare). (*Yasha yah 57:11)

I, Myself, will correctly recount and report, then declare, conspicuously publishing and making known (any nagad*) your sense of righteousness and justice, your means to decide what is right and acquitting, even your honesty (*tsadaqah ath) and that which pertains to your activities and endeavors, the things you have done (*wa *eth ma*aseh ath). But neither this nor those you have gathered to you will be of any benefit to you because there is nothing worthwhile that has been accomplished by you (*wa qibuwts *ath lo*ya*al ath). (*Yasha yah 57:12)

In crying out for you, summoning others on your behalf, even when issuing a proclamation for you (*ba za*aq ath), have these others in your community you have assembled to share your beliefs (*qibuwts ath) save you (*natsal ath). With regard to all of them (*wa eth kol hem), the Ruwach | Spirit (ruwach), He will lift up and carry (*nasa), grasping hold of and taking away (laqach) the meaningless and valueless who are a waste of breath along with their useless idolatry (hebel).” (*Yasha yah 57:13)

Since sending the anan* | Demonic Woman and Zanah | Deceitful Whore who is Sheqer | the Betrayer to *She*owl* | Hell is a serious outcome, before Yahowah turns to the good guys in this story and moves on to address His coworkers and their collaboration, I'd like to preclude any confusion concerning the fate of souls. It is germane to know that there are three potential outcomes, not just the two proposed by religion. As we would expect, those who have come to know and trust Yahowah, relying upon Him by observing His testimony such that they engage in His Covenant, celebrate the Shabat, and appreciate His Son by attending His Mow^edym, will be greeted as Family and welcomed to Heaven by their Father. There will be no judgment, no bowing down, no review of our words and deeds. And while we will inherit everything and live forever, according to God this is a relatively small group of people, approximately one in a million individuals.

The second group of souls are identified in these words. God told us that the record of one's beliefs and deeds will be exposed and denounced should a person be deemed to have worked against God and His people. Such souls will be found guilty of misleading others through their cultural codes, societal edicts, political platitudes, conspiratorial misconceptions, and religious tomes. Their sentence will be to endure eternity with like-minded souls, incarcerated with demons to be forever separated from Yahowah in She^eowl. The ʿanan Zanah Sheqer and many of her associates are examples of those who will endure this penalty.

The third category of souls is the most numerous. They represent some 99.9% of humanity. These mortals will have died not knowing Yahowah and, therefore, God will not know them. They will have lived their lives uninterested or deceived as to His nature. They are the victims of man's religious, political, and cultural schemes, not their advocates. These mortals without any spiritual affiliation will simply cease to exist. There will be no punishment or reward. They lived their lives as they saw fit. There will be nothing more. Their souls will cease to exist, just as their bodies succumb and ultimately decompose.

Returning to the text of Yahowah's prophetic witness, the reason I separated the first two sentences from the third in the 13th statement of this chapter is because Yahowah is no longer addressing the malcontents. There is a better option that comes highly recommended, and therefore, this statement belongs with those which follow...

“However (wa), the one who takes refuge in Me (ha chasah ba *any – the one who seeks My protection by trusting and relying upon Me to keep him or her safe, comforting them (qal participle active masculine singular) [the one is from 1QIsa]), he will be allotted and will inherit (nahal – he will receive as an inheritance and thereby take possession of (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular – actually and without limitation)) the Material Realm, the Land, and the Earth (*erets – the world) and he will become an heir to (wa yarash – he will receive based upon the original agreement) My Set-Apart mountain (har qodesh *any).” (Yasha*yah / Yahowah Delivers / Isaiah 57:13)

This isn’t the case of bygones being bygones because this man represents Yahowah rather than Satan. He is tsadaq | right. He is afforded Yahowah’s protection because he, as the adamah Parah* on *Taruw*ah*, will restore the remnant of *Yisra*el*. They will not only have been brought back to Yaruwshalaim, and gathered around the Temple Mount on Mowryah, they will be allowed into God’s protective Garden on Sukah to live thereafter as a result of what Yahowah accomplishes in concert with His chosen implement.

I’m inspired to conclude Yahowah’s assessment of the conflict He foresaw 2,700 years ago between His Tsadaqah | Correct Nakar | Observant Foreigner and the Adversary’s anan* | Demonic Woman, the Zanah | Despicable Whore who is Sheqer | the Betrayer concurrent with the *Shabuw*ah Qatsyr*. While I’ve shared my thoughts along the way, quietly, and from the beginning, I’ve been struggling to determine why such an insignificant coterie of imbecilic contrarians would garner the most comprehensive and condemning rebuke found anywhere in the prophets. Why was it so specific and antagonistic? What had the Mother Goddess Dee done, or what would she do, that would deserve a confirmed ticket to She*owl?

There are a number of potential answers, but one stands out above the others. Previously, I shared that the anan* picked Yahowah’s chosen implement as time is running out, aggravating His plans to restore His relationship with His people in advance of His return. God is extremely protective of, even proud of, His Choter. And in fact, Yahowah and Yada are so inseparable, God not only affirmed this in Yasha^oyah 56, He revealed that He has given this man His seven ruwach through His testimony in Isaiah 11.

Previously, I surmised that the Seductive Whore earned this rebuke because she misrepresented Yahowah's nature and name, not only creating a Mother God, but then presenting them as a hermaphrodite. Equally condemning, she and her ilk have denied Dowd's fulfillment of Chag Matsah, which is grounds in and of itself for eternal banishment.

Also, after disparaging my wife, DP, as the Sheqer | Betrayer, claimed to speak for God, as was the ploy with Miryam ~ something that drew a vicious and graphic response from Yah. She would even follow in Chawah's footsteps, replicating her selfish misappropriation of Yahowah's instructions to become a goddess.

The Zanah tried to steal the next ingathering for herself while claiming that Yahowah's Zarowa^o | One Cultivating the Harvest was killing those he is actually saving, thereby potentially precluding thousands from capitalizing on God's generosity through her confabulations.

On another occasion, I revealed that God is particularly irritated when those who have been given access to the truth, return the favor by rebelling against Him and His testimony, becoming naysayers. There is also the issue of fracturing the family and breaking the Covenant, something Yahowah will not tolerate.

But in the end, I think it all comes down to this ~ Yahowah didn't want the lot of them in His Covenant Family. He didn't trust them, and for good reason. So, since I had shown them the way, He resolved this problem by letting them remove themselves from Heaven. Then to be certain that they would never return, and so that there would be no confusion, God inspired this prophecy pursuant to the Shabuw^{ah} Harvest, knowing that we'd find it at the right moment, come to understand it, and share it with you.

So, let it be known because God has stated it as such: this reprehensible Anan~Zanah~Sheqer* is She^{owl} bound. And DP will be taking her malignant malcontents with her. They will not be included in the Shabuw^{ah} Qatsyr. They will not be counted among those allowed to enter Eden during Sukah.

Fair is fair. Even with the aman* | truth tsadaqah | correctly presented by ha Nakar | the Observant Foreigner who is etsah Da^{ath}* | the Counsel of the Tree of Knowledge standing before them, they chose to be zanah | seduced and sheqer | betrayed by an anan* | demon and her na^{aph} | unreliable enabler and became anag* | effeminate and overly sensitive, whiny bitches, self-entitled crybabies, delighting in ridiculing and mocking because they are so easily swayed to incitement.

With so much at stake, and with this being the pivotal point in history where those seeking a relationship with Yahowah are forever separated from those who chose to be religious, Yahowah is sending His people a Herald, someone to blow His showphar, serving as a Witness...

“Then he will say as the one making the announcement (*wa ha amar – so one individual will declare at this moment in time (qal perfect active third-person masculine singular) [the depiction of this timing and the limitation to a single individual comes from 1QIsa]), ‘You should choose to value and highly regard (salal salal – you will want to lift up, esteem, and think positively of (twice scribed as qal imperative second-person masculine plural – volitionally and genuinely you should want to lift up and value)) your decision to pay attention and turn around, preparing to make ready (panah – your opportunity to clear the approach to (piel imperative second-person masculine plural)) the elevated path (masilah – the raised highway; from my – to ponder the implications of salal – being lifted up and exalted, becoming esteemed [from 1QIsa]) to be raised up and lifted on high, choosing to be empowered and enriched by removing (ruwm – for you to choose to travel to a higher location, exalted and honored, for carrying away (hifil imperative second-person masculine plural)) obstacles and stumbling blocks (mikshowl – impediments which impede progress and tripping and falling to a weaker position) from My People's way (*min derek *am any – from the path to My Family).’” (Yasha Yah / Yahowah Saves / Isaiah 57:14)

Yahowah is disclosing this about His Nakar who will be making this announcement. After all, he is known for being Tsadaqah | Right about the events now unfolding in Jerusalem. So, this is reminiscent of Yasha Yah / Isaiah 40:3, revealing that the Voice representing God will call out to those who are gathered in the last days, encouraging them to build a raised highway to Heaven ~ which is through the remaining Miqra^ey.

But there may be something slightly different this time and, if so, it could be important. If Yahowah is addressing the Nakar, and saying this about him, then it is the same, but should God be declaring that the Nakar will be the one encouraging others to act in preparing this raised highway to heaven, then he is addressing Covenant members and advising them to participate in the process. He is saying that, should they choose to value making God more accessible, their decision to pay attention at this time, to look at life from God's perspective rather than man's viewpoint, and then contribute to preparing the way, will serve them well, providing an enriching and empowering result. Collectively, we can remove the obstacles and impediments that have cluttered and concealed the path to God through the Mow^eedym. He wants His people to have unfettered access to Him and would like to see as many participating in the process as possible.

Yahowah is returning with His Son, our Savior, such that our work on Taruw^ah makes it possible for God's people to come back home. So, you can mark it on your calendar. The date is Yowm Kipurym | the Day of Reconciliations in year 6000 Yah – as the sun sets on October 2nd, 2033. Therefore, the time remaining to capitalize upon this announcement, to choose of your own volition to cherish and honor God's Way, and to do an about-face and prepare yourself for His appearance, is short. This is among the final notices Yahowah's people will be given to approach their Messiah and ender the Garden during Sukah. This is heralding the last blast of the showphar.

Join me in becoming part of the solution, removing the impediments blocking the way to Yah. Clear the path home of every religious and political obstacle. If you contribute, you will live alongside the One who made this pronouncement. We have Yahowah's word on it.

Now that Yahowah has buried the naysayers and has moved on to His solution, we find that God's next prophetic declaration is challenging to translate and process. It is filled with descriptive titles presented in the participle and then infinitive forms, making them verbal nouns. At issue initially is, since there are no quotation marks in Hebrew, and since a citation normally begins following amar* | said, this would either have Yahowah addressing the one He has been referring to in the preceding statements or the speaker is the Nakar who is extolling God's intent at this time. Therefore, the Ruwm | One who Raises and *Nasa | Carries Away, Shakan | Abiding and Remaining as an ad* | Restoring Witness is either describing Yahowah if the speaker is the Nakar, or God is lauding the contributions of His Nakar if He is the speaker.

Therefore, while Yahowah is all of these things, it's not only out of character for Him to present Himself as such, preferring to share credit and praise with His co-workers, there is no textual justification for initiating His quote after telling us that H/his name is set apart and special. Moreover, God has been addressing His Nakar, not Himself, and the last one to speak in the previous statement was the Nakar.

If this assessment of the Hebrew text is accurate up to this point based upon the many previous statements I've translated, there is still an additional challenge. We wouldn't normally think of any aspect of Yahowah's ruwach | spirit being shaphal | lowly or demeaned, and yet it is used twice in this circumstance. In both occurrences the phrase is deployed in association with someone who is Daka° | Slandered and then Brutally Assassinated. But even, that is unusual because the one who is crushed and killed is not only chayah | restored to life but he also renews life.

Therefore, my initial conclusion in this context, especially in conjunction with the Nakar who is Tsadaqah pursuing the Harvests, is that he is acknowledging that Yahowah will raise and support His people through his efforts. And, even though he will be maligned and murdered, in spite of his character being besmirched and his body bruised, then killed, yet he will live, and through him, so will others.

Next, as for the proper treatment of shaphal ruwach | a deeply embedded spirit who is lowered to be spiritually abused and abased, demeaned and belittled, we find that this shaphal ruwach is then chayah | revived and restored. So, I see this as one of the seven ruwach of Yahowah has given to the Choter who will not depart from him, even as his body is broken and bruised, crushed and slaughtered. The Spirit of Yahowah will protect Yada's soul. This is similar to how the ruwach never left Dowd, protecting his nepesh | soul so that he could endure the anguishing torture of crucifixion followed by the crushing abuse of She*owl.

In this way, the two men who offer to deliver the promised benefits of Pesach, Matsah, and Taruw*ah in collaboration with God, are protected by Yahowah through His Ruwach, just as we would expect of a loving Father. For the world watching, these fulfillments of Passover and the Day of the Herald are sufficiently brutal to grab everyone's attention while God quietly but surely comforts and protects His chosen. As such, it answers the question of why Yahowah would allow His Son to endure crucifixion followed by an excursion into Hell. It's the Ruwach who bears the blows, shielding the nepesh | souls who continue to live.

With this lengthy introduction, here is God's declaration...

“For, indeed (ky – by contrast), this is what (koh – therefore) he says (amar* – he claims and promises (third-person masculine singular and thus addressing the Nakar)), ‘Ruwm | the One who Raises and Elevates (ruwm – the One who lifts up to a lofty dimension on high (qal participle masculine singular)), (wa) Nasa | the One who Uplifts, Supports, and Carries Away (*nasa – the One who spares and bears, carrying (nifal participle masculine singular)), Shakan | the One who Abides and Remains (sakan – the one who dwells and stays (qal participle masculine singular)) ad | Forever as a Restoring Witness to the Eternal Testimony (ad* – for all eternity providing everlasting evidence), His name (*wa shem huw – such that His proper designation and renown) is set apart and special (qodesh – unique, and thus neither well-known nor commonly used).

He dwells and remains (sakan – He lives, abides, and stays, remaining (qal imperfect active third-person masculine singular – he will actually and continually live) [from 1QIsa and 4QIsa because the MT reads “I” not “He”]) in the heights of heaven (marowm – holding the esteemed and highest position; from mah – consider the implications of ruwm – lifting up on high) and is Set Apart (qodesh – special, separated, and unique, highly uncommon and thus unpopular).

In conjunction with (*wa eth) Daka° | the One who is Slandered and Crushed, Killed but Remains Alive (daka° – the one who is pressured and harmed, bruised and wounded, broken and turned to ash (singular masculine descriptive)), the deeply embedded spirit who is lowered to be spiritually abused and abased, demeaned and belittled (shaphal ruwach – the depth of the spirit who is sent down to be abused and humiliated (masculine singular and feminine singular)) will Chayah | Revive and Restore to Life (la chayah – will renew, returning to life, keeping alive, and raising to flourish (hifil infinitive)).

The deeply embedded spirit who is lowered to be spiritually abused and abased, demeaned and belittled (shaphal ruwach – the depth of the spirit who is sent down to be degraded and humiliated (masculine singular and feminine singular)) will Chayah | Revive and Restore Life (la chayah – will renew and return abundant life, keeping alive while nurturing and raising the flourishing (hifil infinitive)) on behalf of the inclinations, motivations, and judgement (leb – the thinking, reasoning, and emotional disposition, the heart, confidence, and character (masculine singular)) of the Daka° | One who will be Slandered and Crushed, Killed but Remains Alive (daka° – the one who will be pressured and harmed, bruised and wounded, broken and turned to ash (nifal participle masculine plural)).” (Yasha Yyah / Yahowah Delivers / Isaiah 57:15)

While you are free to interpret these words differently, be aware that at this time, in this context, regarding this man who is working with Yahowah to restore His people, this rendering is as accurate as it is inspiring and reassuring. It depicts what will transpire on Yowm Taruwah | the Day of the Herald, the Shabat observance of September 23rd and 24th, 2033 in year 6000 Yah to the backdrop of a full solar eclipse. This is descriptive of the sacrifice of the Man from Edom as the adamah Parah* | Bloody Man of the Earth who is a Productive Bull purging the mortal remnant of Yisra*el of their guilt prior to Dowd’s return with Yahowah.

This is the final solution to Yahowah’s Jewish problem as His people return and come clean, becoming Yahuwdym again. The quarrel has lasted thirty-four centuries and the time of contentiousness must end. Whether it is the accusatory goddess cult of the Demonic Woman, cantankerous rabbis, or argumentative Twistians, Yahowah has reached His limit. He will no longer entertain man’s proposed changes and critiques.

God is putting the world on notice that those who provoke Him religiously or politically, will not be rewarded with eternal life. Yahowah is furious, and for those enraging Him, there will be no reward.

This known, the follow-on statement was a head-scratcher initially. This is because ruwach | spirit is a feminine noun and the verb ataph* was spoken such that the subject in the third-person masculine singular, is a man. Moreover, there are two entirely different ways to render the verb, either as “to cover, immerse, clothe, and shroud” or “to become faint, feeble, and fade away.” I chose the former because it is consistent with the profoundly important message of the foregoing prophecy regarding the ruwach being lowered and deeply embedded such that the spirit is abused and abased to protect the Nakar’s soul. And while his body will falter, the ruwach will absorb the blows to minimize the suffering.

“For, surely (ky – by contrast to what has just been revealed), it won’t be much longer and it certainly will not be for an unlimited duration (*lo*la owlam), that I will quarrel and accept complaints, engaging in contentious debate (*lo*ryb* – that I will accuse, strive against, be in conflict with, prosecute, or defend, remaining in a hostile dispute (qal imperfect first-person singular)).

Therefore (wa la), there will be no eternal life (*lo*netsach* – no everlasting eminence or perpetual glory) while I’m provoked and furious (qatsaph – when I’m overwhelmingly displeased, incensed, and enraged (qal imperfect first-person singular)).

As a result (ky), he will be covered within, immersed, and clothed by (ataph* – he will be shrouded and absorbed in overwhelming fashion as he otherwise fades away adorned by (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) the Spirit (ruwach) from before My appearance (*min la paneh any – prior to the approach of My presence).

I, Myself, will act and engage with (any asah – I conceived, produced, and worked with, acting on behalf of and profiting from (qal perfect first-person singular)) this Neshamah | Conscience (neshamah – this cognitive, ethical, and moral ability to exercise good judgment, be intelligent and discerning, sufficiently thoughtful to distinguish between right and wrong, good and bad).” (Yasha ʿyah / Yahowah Liberates / Isaiah 57:16)

Time is running out. While God has never been tolerant of the religious or overtly political, we are nearing the point when they will no longer be allowed to live on this planet. They have annoyed the Almighty far too long. The exacerbating reigns of Judaism, Christianity, and Islam will soon be over. If you are counted among them, save your complaints for Hell’s warden.

Since nothing annoys God more than religion, and in particular those who either negate His son’s contributions or slander the one who is bringing them to light, both Christians and the Demonic Woman’s clan, are in for a harsh awakening. There will be no salvation or any prospect of eternal life for those who provoke Yahowah.

In all of human history, as troubling as mankind has been, the next seven years will be more aggravating to God than herding malcontent Yisra*elites through the Exodus. And sadly for Yahowah, since He will be reengaging at this time to garner the world’s attention, He will not be able to look away as His creation is systematically destroyed and his people are butchered by those in league with Satan. And so, during the seven years from the *Sabuw*ah Qatsyr* through the *Taruw*ah Laqat*, no one will be saved. There will be some who turn to Yahowah before the arrival of the two Witnesses based upon the library at YadaYah.com, and many more as a result of their message. But, God isn’t going to officially deliver their souls prior to the fulfillment of the fifth Miqra*.

Also, being among the mortal remnant purged by the *Adamah Parah and allowed into the Garden on Sukah does not guarantee eternal life. These souls will have to listen, learn, engage, make a contribution and earn God’s trust en route to becoming immortal.

With death lurking around every corner, and with His Witness the center of attention, Yahowah has promised to shield him. Otherwise, it would be impossible for him to do his job. But even beyond this, God is affirming that even as his body is mauled, so shall he live. In the fall of one, many will rise. And then, in the manner of the Nakar, the beneficiaries will be adorned in the Spirit in advance of Yahowah's return with King Dowd.

Up to this point, Yahowah has referred to His coworker as Tsadaqah, enowsh*, *Ben adam, ha Nakar, and as a Sarys, and even an ets*, before acknowledging that he is Yada, an ayil*, Sa'yph, and Sela°. And now, just five verses from concluding this narrative, at the point that I'm enveloped in His ruwach, God speaks of His engagement with me using the most endearing term ~ neshamah. I say this because our neshamah | conscience is the most appealing aspect of our nature to Yahowah. It is the part of us most like Him. Capitalizing upon our neshamah we prove our worth, that we can be trusted, and that we can engage and do marvelous things in collaboration with our Father. Our neshamah represents our ability to think rationally and morally, to be intelligent and discerning, opening the floodgates to understanding.

Given the option, I'd prefer by an infinite degree for Yahowah to choose to engage with my neshamah over my basar. It is here that we relate and have formed our relationship.

At this juncture, I think that this next statement should have been the beginning of a new chapter. And in this transition, we find that God has good reason to be disappointed with his people as well as the world at large. It is to such an extent, He has actually precluded access to immortality during the Time of Israel's Troubles. After all, the reason He will envelope the Neshamah | Conscience He is engaging through at this time with His ruwach | spirit is to protect him from what remains a largely antagonizing, embittered, and rebellious nation.

Therefore, with this statement, I think Yahowah is telescoping back in time to explain how Israel found itself in this horrible predicament...

“With the perversity and depravity associated with religious guilt (*ba awon – as a consequence of the error and wrongdoing of) of this covetous deception and immorality, this violence, greed, and profiteering that severs everything (*betsa*huw – this dishonesty and thievery), I will be provoked to anger (qatsaph – I will be enraged, becoming furious, exceedingly displeased (qal perfect first-person singular).

I will lash out at him (*nakah huw – I strike him), concealing Myself (wa sathar – vanishing), due to My displeasure (qatsaph – because I was antagonized and furious). Nonetheless (wa), he went on backsliding, walking in a rebellious fashion, remaining untrustworthy (halak showbab – he behaved like a self-assured and unreliable hypocrite), by way (ba derek) of his own thinking, personal judgment, and inclinations (*leb huw – his nature and motivations).”
(Yasha Yyah / Yahowah Delivers / Isaiah 57:17)

Even all the way back to Abraham and Lowt, then Yitschaq and Ya*aqob, particularly with his sons and throughout the Exodus, the Children of Yisra*el have been *awon | slathered in their own religious guilt, wrong far more often than right. Then, once in the Land, the most religious and political of them became covetous and violent tyrants, with rabbis profiteering to this very day. God is, therefore, angry. Provoked, He will lash out against the worst of them, especially as we near the end. Forty centuries of going in the wrong directing, disavowing Him, His name, His Covenant, and His Son has left Yahowah to see Jews as rebellious and untrustworthy. They have favored their judgment over His, their Talmud to the Towrah's Guidance.

Loving and supportive fathers tend to see their children as redeemable. And since a remnant of Yisra*elites and Yahuwym will disavow religion and politics en route to celebrating Sukah in Eden, there is hope...

“I have seen and considered (*ra*ah* – I have examined for a finite period (qal perfect first-person singular)) his ways

(*derek huw – paths and conduct [plural in 1QIsa]), but nonetheless (wa), I will heal him, restoring him forevermore (rapha huw – I will repair him to health, cure and renew him to the original state eternally (qal imperfect first-person singular)).

[I will guide him (*nachah huw – I will direct him (hifil imperfect)). (Omitted from 1QIsa)]

Therefore (wa), I will completely fulfill the promise to reconcile, providing recompense to restore (shalem – I will offer restitution, finishing this amicably), providing comfort and compassion for him (*nichuwmyim la huw – consoling him [1QIsa]) and to those who mourn him (*wa la *abel huw – as well as to those who weep over the calamity befallen him).” (Yasha ʿyah / Yahowah Liberates / Isaiah 57:18)

The restoration of Yisra*el commences with the fulfillment of Taruw*ah in year 6000 Yah with the sacrifice of the *Adamah Parah. It then progresses through Yowm Kipurym when the restored remnant is reconciled upon King Dowd’s return. These Mow*edym provide Yahowah’s prescribed resolution to cure the residual religious guilt of His people. This is when the promise is ultimately fulfilled and Yahuwdym find comfort in God’s presence.

As for the phrase “to those who mourn for him,” I suspect that this is best explained in Zakaryah 12. There, Yahowah reveals that He will be returning with Dowd and that Yisra*el will finally mourn for him, this one they pierced, as God’s begotten Son and their Savior.

This will end forty centuries of being bad. Yahowah’s wayward children will finally come home. For those who are responsive, willing to go where His words lead, God will heal them. This is the affirmation that He will restore His relationship with His people so that they can return to Eden.

Communicating through His Witnesses, Yahowah will lead Yisra*elits and Yahuwdym to reconciliation by walking them through His Towrah, addressing the Beryth conditions and Miqra^{ey} attendance along the way. Then upon their arrival, Father and Son will be escorting the Covenant's children through Pesach and Matsah to Bikuwrym, the Mow^{edym} which enabled the Shabuw^{ah} and Taruw^{ah} Ingatherings. They will attest to the significance of the sacrifice of the *Adamah Parah which has prepared them to celebrate Yowm Kipurym such that they are prepared to enjoy Sukah in the Garden.

With their relationship restored, our Father will comfort His Family – eliminating their anxiety and pain. In doing so, He will incorporate His Towrah | Guidance into their lives.

Today, on this side of the Shabuw^{ah} Harvest and Taruw^{ah} Gleaning, Jews are slowly awakening to Yahowah's best and final offer. They are doing what we have done, which is to accept what Yahowah is offering by becoming Towrah-observant and Covenant responsive.

Yahuwdym are on the verge of being restored to the ranks of Yahowah's Chosen People, the First Family. And they will be back on duty after a prolonged recess.

“The fruit born (nowb – words which are productive, cheerful, and abundant) of the lips (saphah – of speech) is conceived and brought into existence (bara^{*} – is created (qal participle masculine singular)) for reconciliation and restoration (shalowm shalowm – fellowship through redemption, friendship through relationship, and contentment through salvation [in 1QIsa^a there is one shalowm while in 1QIsa^b, LXX, and MT it is repeated]) from the one from a distant place and for the one who is estranged (la ha rachowq – from the foreigner from long ago and for the alienated and separated (masculine singular absolute)), therefore (wa), from the one who is now near and closely related and for the one whose approach is imminent (la ha qarowb – from the one in close proximity and to the one seeking an intimate relationship (masculine singular absolute)),’ says (amar* – He affirms, announces, and promises (qal perfect third-person masculine singular)) Yahowah (Yahowah – a transliteration of יהוה as directed in His towrah – teaching regarding His hayah – existence).

‘Then, at that time, I will heal him by promoting restoration (*wa rapha*huw – I will restore him to favor, repair him to full health, and I will renew him to his original state, mending the relationship with him (qal perfect first-person masculine singular)).’” (Yasha Yah / Yahowah Saves / Isaiah 57:19)

It was a year ago, in December of 2024, that, in the midst of the rebellion He has just censured, Yahowah asked me to migrate as quickly as I was capable from the written to the spoken word – the fruit born of the lips. This is the way He envisioned the fruit of the Tree of Knowledge being delivered to the world at this time. I complied, as is my custom, and a thousand hours of livestreaming later, God is delivering shalowm | reconciliation by way of the Yahowah Vlog.

It’s not that He told me to stop translating and composing my thoughts, because then I’d stop learning, but that the passion, spontaneity, and conviction of a streamed video presentation would outproduce the marginal utility of additional books. There were already more volumes on the shelf at YadaYah.com than time remaining before the Harvest to process their contents.

There were factors which no doubt convinced Yahowah that this would be a more effective approach. The world’s preference today is to watch social media videos rather than read, such that we engage more people this way. Speaking conveys more information than writing due to inflection and expression. With the advent of social media channels, the message is more readily available and accessible. And now, it is equally enduring because once something is posted, it is forever. Also beneficial, an insight deduced at sunrise can be presented before lunch, shortening the time between discovery and distribution. Additionally, corrections are essentially instantaneous, rather than taking months and years to reedit the books. And lastly, since I had become the living embodiment of the books, why not capitalize on this by revealing everything we have learned over the decades of working together.

In that our collaboration has been a long time in the making, conceived initially during *bara | creation with the Greater and Lesser Luminaries of Bare^osyth one and the Trees of Lives and Knowledge in Genesis two, Yahowah presents it as such. Then He underscored His ha Nakar | the Observant Foreigner metaphorical title with ha Rachowq | One from a Distant Place. While rachowq was presented in the masculine singular form, it is addressing both the foreigner from long ago who is delivering restoration and the one who has long been estranged and alienated who will be receiving it.

Similarly, ha qarowb speaks of the one Yahowah revealed was closely related to Him who is now close at hand and those seeking to approach God at this time. And, of course, our Father is prophetically depicting the events which will transpire on Taruw^oah and Kipurym with the purging of guilt provided by the ^{*}Adamah Parah and how they will enable Dowd's return on Yowm Kipurym | the Day of Reconciliations.

It will have been a long silence, one filled only with the voices of a score of men, since Yahowah last addressed His people at the base of Mount Choreb. But as we move through Taruw^oah and Kipurym toward Sukah in year 6000 Yah, God will eventually speak in His own voice as He last did 3,480 years ago.

The reason that I did not say that reconciliation will be extended to those afar and near is because it isn't true. By this time, the beneficiaries will be limited to those already gathered in Yaruwshalaim and those brought in by Yahowah for the occasion on Taruw^oah. So, this is reinforcing what we have read elsewhere in the prophets, including Yasha^oyah 17 and Zakaryah 6.

Yahowah's offer of restoration is not universal, however.

While all are invited, most will be swept away by the raging sea. For there to be shalowm | harmony and contentment, for there to be shalowm | peace and fulfillment, the religious and political must go.

“However (wa), the wickedly wrong and condemnable, those who remain guilty and unjustified (ha rasha° – those who are misleading), who are akin to the sea (ka ha yam – like the ocean, serving as a metaphor for gowym still estranged from Yisra*el), will be stirred up and driven out, as he causes himself to be demonstrably tossed aside and banished and removed (garash – will be cast off and expelled as they are driven away (nifal participle)) because (ky) being quiet and remaining silent (shaqat – being content and avoiding agitation) is something they cannot comprehend, grasp, or even process (lo yakol* – they cannot achieve or attain, even endure (hofal imperfect – they will never be able to get out of their own way long enough to understand)).

And so (wa), the foul muck and mire to be tread upon and swept away (rephesh wa tit – the sticky slime and malleable, pliable, and impressionable clay) of his waters (*maym huw) will be stirred up and tossed aside, forever expelled like the retreating tide (garash – will be cast off and expelled as they are driven away (qal imperfect)).” (Yasha Yah / Yahowah Delivers / Isaiah 57:20)

We discovered in Numbers 15 that Taruw°ah’s Bull is only able to purge crimes of omission, not commission. The sacrifice of the *Adamah Parah is designed to prepare those who have been misled by religion and politics rather than those who promote them. This is why there are two chariots designated to canvass the world in search of Yahuwdym. The black conveyance will be for the likes of the Haredim while the white spiritual chariot will bring the redeemable into Yaruwshalaim for the occasion.

Here, Yahowah is warning the wickedly wrong that they are condemnable. They will retain their guilt and will be driven away to She*owl on Taruw*ah. God must remove this foul stench and related muck before He can restore the Earth to Eden.

The reason that God used the metaphor of the sea is because those swept away will have associated themselves with the religious and political ways of the Gentiles to such an extent that they are being equated with them. And the reason for the reference to waters is to provide a contrast between those purged by the cleansing waters released from the Temple Mount and the filth that is too slimy to restore.

Renouncement of prior religious entanglements, sufficient to disassociate from them, is a precondition for admission into the Covenant – but also to qualify for the remedy being offered by the *Adamah Parah. Sadly, it is a bridge too far for most believers. But this would also be true of those who have had their brains scrambled by the thoughtless and immoral platitudes of Progressive politics or conspiracy theories.

“Therefore (wa – and so [from 1QIsa]), my God says (*amar *elohym *any), ‘There is no reconciliation, restoration, or salvation (ayin shalown – there is no peace, renewal, return to health, satisfaction, blessing, ransom, favor, fellowship, or redemption) for those who are wickedly wrong who retain their guilt by misleading (la ha rasha – those who are condemned for misdirecting).’” (Yasha*yah / Yahowah Saves / Isaiah 57:21)

This is a simple and direct statement from God to us through His prophet, *Yasha*yah* / Salvation is from Yahowah. Those who are so wrong about Yahowah that they mislead others cannot be saved.

Being right leads to vindication today. But tomorrow, wrong can be brought back to a neutral position for a new beginning and fresh start on Taruw*ah.

In fact, shalown conveys the dual implications of Taruw*ah and Kipurym because the surviving mortal remnant must be restored before they are reconciled. How they capitalize upon their opportunity during Sukah will be a product of how effectively we guide them and how well they respond.

We end this prophetic portrait God has painted where we began, with Shabats and Trumpets. During the *Migra*ey of Shabuwah and Taruwah, this is what we are asked to do...

“Choose to call out, issuing an invitation read aloud and announce the summons to meet (*qara – issue a proclamation to be called out, choosing to recite what is written about being received and welcomed by name (qal imperative second-person masculine singular)).

Do not spare your throat (ba garon al chasak* – do not withhold your speech (qal imperfect jussive second-person masculine singular). Lift up and raise (ruwm – proudly elevate, increasing the volume of (hifil imperative second-person masculine singular)) your voice (qowl atah*) as if it were a Showphar (ka ha Showphar – like the ram’s-horn trumpet symbol of the Migra of Shabuwah and Taruwah).

Choose to boldly declare this report openly and conspicuously in proximity (wa nagad – of your own volition, and because it is your desire, in a straightforward fashion, publicly inform by choosing to convey this as a warning near (hifil imperative second-person masculine singular)) to My people (la am* any* – to My family), making them aware of their rebellion and defiance (*pesha hem – their revolting offences and indignities) and to the House of Yaahqob (wa la beyth Yaahqob – to the Family of Yisra*el), their wayward nature and misleading ways (chataach hem – their guilt for having gone astray and missed the way).” (*Yasha*yah / Yahowah Delivers / Isaiah 58:1)

This message is sponsored by the letter Q | ♀. It speaks of the ending of one day and of the beginning of the next. It draws us to the horizon of new possibilities, of being done with the old and ready for a fresh start. With the light fading on some, it shines ever more brightly and clearly on others.

*Qara | arQ is at the center of it all. Those moving forward and experiencing this opportunity are looking forward to the ✡ | protective ram and bull shepherding the flock. They ♀ | see and perceive what the ♀ | sunset of Pesach and the ♀ | dawn of Taruw^oah bring. And since an ✡ | Aleph is the first letter in אב ✡ | *ab | Father and אלה ✡ | *el | God, on these ♀ | days the ♀ | observant are *qara | invited to come home.

*Qara is an invitation to be called out of man's world and encounter God. Those who *qara | read and recite His words are welcomed into His presence. It is our opportunity to be free of *rasha and enjoy shalown. *Qara also speaks of issuing a summons by calling out to our fellow man, making a public proclamation comprised of the information needed to capitalize upon it. Through *qara, God becomes known and accessible because it serves as the actionable root of *Miqra.

The Spring *Miqraey were fulfilled nearly forty Yowbel ago by the Messiah and Son of God, Dowd. Four remain. Two are Harvests. One denotes the Family Reunion and God's Homecoming. The last reveals that we are returning to *Eden.

Our proclamation to God's people is to be chazaq | bold and blunt, neither diplomatic nor politically correct. Our summons is to be straightforward and public, as if blasting away on a trumpet. There is nothing subtle about any of this. It is a warning – plain and simple. It is why there is a Showphar sitting behind my desk, serving as a constant reminder of what remains to be accomplished.

This is the final blast that will be directed toward Yisra*el, the House of Ya^oaqob. Yahowah wants His people to know in no uncertain terms that they have forfeited their opportunity to be included within the Covenant because of their *pasha | religious and political rebellion. Listen or be condemned. Change or die.

For Yisra*elites, Yahowah is providing the ultimate opportunity to join Him forevermore. And this is extraordinary considering all that the House of Ya^oaqob has done over the centuries to provoke Him. Shout for joy; signal an alarm.

The third time we find Dowd and Yada interacting, is in Bamidbar / Numbers. And while their relationship is developed throughout, it is particularly poignant in the 11th chapter following Yahowah's and then Moseh's meltdown – after both give up on the Yisra*elites. It's as if their interjection into the story is to say, “*Alright, Moseh, I agree with you, these Jews are impossible, so, let's drop them off in the Promised Land. I've got a couple of guys who can take it from there ~ eLdod and MyDod.”

“And it came to be that the people habitually and continually were (*wa hayah ha am) akin to (ka) miserable and immoral, distressing and undesirable, worthless, anxiety-ridden companions (ra) who were complaining and grumbling without reason (anan) in the ear of Yahowah (*ba ozen Yahowah). And so when (wa), Yahowah heard this (*Yahowah shama), He grieved as His resentment and anger were aroused over a prolonged period (*charah *aph huw).

Then the fire of Yahowah (*wa esh Yahowah) burned (*ba*ar*) among them (ba hem) and it consumed (*wa akal) that which was in the outskirts of the camp (ba qatseh ha machaneh). (Bamidbar / In the Wilderness / Numbers 11:1)

The people cried out in a raucous tone (*wa tsa*aq ha am) toward Moseh (el Moseh*). And Moseh (wa Moseh), without assistance from anyone, sought to arbitrate by intervening (palal) with Yahowah (el Yahowah*). Then the fire (*wa ha esh) subsided somewhat, dying down (*shaqa – was diminished). (Bamidbar 11:2) The name of the place (wa shem ha maqowm) was called (*qara) that which is *Taba*rah* | Kindled and Burning in Animosity (ha huw Taba*rah*) because the fire of Yahowah (*ky esh Yahowah) burned

(ba^{*ar}) among them (ba hem). (Bamidbar 11:3)

The annoying riff-raff that had been gathered on the threshold of the harvest (wa ha ^{*asaphsuph}), who were within their midst (^{asher ba qereb huw}), were overcome with selfish cravings and internalized yearnings, establishing parameters of their own choosing, having decided to act independently (^{*awah ta^oawah}).

In addition (gam), they turned away (wa) and wailed, complaining and moaning (wa bakah). The *Beny Yisra^{el} | the Offspring of those who Strive Contentiously Against God (beny Yisra^{*el}) said (^{*amar}), ‘What are we to consume such that we are nourished by (mah ^{*akal ^{*anachnuw}}) the flesh (basar). (Bamidbar 11:4)

We remember (zakar) the thing that grew (^{*eth ha dagah}) which we consumed (^{*asher ^{*akal}}) in Mitsraym | when Besieged and Confined (ba Mistraym) for nothing, gratuitously (chinam) with the mystery food (^{*eth ha qishu^oahym}), and with the other unknown item (wa ^{*eth ha ^{*abatyach}}), in addition to the green grass and hay (wa ^{*eth ha chatsyr}), even with the edible that has to be peeled (wa ^{*eth ha batsel}) and that which is exhaled (wa ^{*eth ha shuwm}). (Bamidbar 11:5)

But now (wa ^{*atah}), our soul (nepesh ^{*anachnuw}) has withered and is paralyzed (yabesh). Nothing exists (^{*ayin}) anywhere (kol) besides the negative association (bilthy) of whatever this man might be (^{*el ha man}) by our perceptions (^{*ayin ^{*anachnuw}}).’ (Bamidbar 11:6)

So, the Man (wa ha man) was similar to (ka) the seeds (zera^o) of that which is fortuitous and pleasing for them (gad huw^{*}). Its appearance (wa ^{ayin huw}) was like the sight of something set-apart, very different and uniquely distinctive (ha badalach). (Bamidbar 11:7)

The people roamed about (shuwt ha ^{*am}), gathering and gleaned it (wa laqat). And they ground it (wa tahan) within millstones (ba ha rechaym) to crush it (o duwk ba ha madokah*). Then they boiled it (wa bashal) in pots (ba ha paruwr), making cakes out of it (*wa *asah eth huw ugah). So the taste of it was (*wa hayah ta^{am} huw) like (ka) the taste (ta^{am}) of a moist cake (lashad) with olive oil (ha shemen). (Bamidbar 11:8) With the falling of the dew (wa ba yarad ha tal) upon the camp (al ha machaneh*) at night (laylah), the Man fell upon it (*yarad ha man *al huw).” (Bamidbar 11:9)

Lack of respect and appreciation noted, we reach the climax of this harrowing story...

“Moseh (Moseh) heard (*shama) the people (*ha am bakah) complaining and moaning (wa bakah) throughout their tribes (la mishpachah huw), with a man (iysh) approaching the entrance (la patach) of his tent (ohel huw). The resentment aroused (*wa charah aph) by Yahowah (Yahowah) was extreme (*ma*od*), and in plain view (*wa ba ayin). Moseh (Moseh) was distressed and troubled by having been mistreated by obnoxious countrymen to the point of being broken and shattered (ra^a).” (Bamidbar 11:10)

So far, so bad, but it was only going to get worse. Moseh was woefully mistreated by the Children of Yisra*el. The Jews of the Exodus were intolerable. And Moseh was miserable for having been mistreated – literally groaning into the ground.

To a significant extent, history has and will repeat itself. Their descendants led an insurrection against Dowd, and Israelis by the millions will be moaning and groaning over the message of the two Witnesses, Yada and *ElYah, as they herald the King’s return. And this leads us to an interesting realization ~ even with God’s help, one man cannot do this alone. The audience is far too belligerent and unreceptive – or in a word...religious. Therefore, Yahowah would achieve as much as could be contributed by someone of His choosing, only to pass the Manowrah to the next.

“Moseh said (amar Moseh*) to Yahowah (Yahowah), ‘So why have You been so egregious, distressing, and antagonizing, inflicting this suffering and anxiety (la mah ra^a) toward Your servant (la ^eebed ^aatah)? Why (wa la mah) haven't I obtained (masa^a) favor, even kindness or compassion (chen) in Your sight (ba ^aayin ^aatah)? You have laid (sym) the burden (masa^a) of all of these people on me (kol ha ^aam ha zeh ^aal ^aany). (Bamidbar 11:11)

Was it me (ha ^aanoky) who gave birth (harah) to all of these people (^aeth kol ha ^aam zeh)? Am I their mother (^aim ^aanoky) who conceived them (yalad huw^a) such that You would continually say to me (ky ^aamar ^eel ^aany), “Lift them up and carry them (nasa^a huw^a) in you bosom (chyq ^aatah) as one carries (ka ^aasher nasa^a) the legitimate (ha ^aaman) infant (^aeth ha yowneq) onto the land (^aal ha ^aadamah) that you swore to give to their fathers (^aasher shaba^a la nathan ^aaby huw^a)?” (Bamidbar 11:12)

From where (min ^aayin) is there a Basar | Corporeal Herald in the flesh to bring a message (basar) for me (la ^aany) to give (la nathan) to all of these people (la kol ha ^aam ha zeh)? Because (ky) they continually weep and wail, choosing to tear up and sob (bakah) over me (^aal ^aany) and say (wa la ^aamar), “We want you to give to us (nathan la ^aanachnuw) a Basar | Herald in the flesh (basar) that we can choose to devour (wa ^aakal).” (Bamidbar 11:13)

It's insightful that in the midst of his meltdown, he was inquiring about a Basar | Herald to convey the message. Turns out, he would play an important role in this unfolding drama. And this is because, no one can do this alone. It would take all of us working together with Yahowah to deliver the desired result.

I am not able to succeed or overcome this, nor do I understand (lo^a yakol) by myself, all alone, just me (^aanowky la bad ^aany) to carry and bear (la nasa^a) all of these people (^aeth kol ha ^aam ha zeh). It's obvious that it's too great a burden (ky kabed) for me (min ^aany). (Bamidbar 11:14)

If it is to be like this (wa ^aim kakah) that You intend to work with me and act toward me (*atah *asah la *any), You should kill me (harag *any). If I find (im matsa) favor (chen) in Your sight (ba *ayn *atah), I beg to be put to death (na harag) so I will not witness (wa *al ra*ah) my disastrous shepherding (ba ra*ah *any).” (Bamidbar 11:15)

While the relationship between Yahowah and His wayward people would not improve over the millennia, this was rock bottom. The Covenant was flatlined.

“Then (wa) Yahowah (Yahowah) said to Moseh (*amar *el Moseh), ‘You should gather for either a harvest or for removal (*asaph) concerning Me (la any) seventy individuals of the old men (sheba *iysh zaqen) of Yisra*el | those who struggle and contend with God (Yisra*el) whom, for the sake of the relationship, you know and can acknowledge (asher yada) that are indeed among the most mature of the people (ky hem zaqen ha am) and the literate who can write (wa shoter) of them (huw).

Grab hold of them and take them (wa laqach *eth hem) to the Tent of the Restoring Witness to the Eternal Testimony (*el *ohel mow*ed). Then, without any pressure, and solely on their own volition, let them stand, presenting themselves (wa yatsab) there with you (sham *im *atah). (Bamidbar 11:16)

And I will descend, diminishing an aspect of Myself (wa yarad) and talk with you there (wa dabar *im *atah sham). Then, I will take away and remove (wa *atsal) a portion of the Spirit (min ha ruwach) which, for the benefit of the relationship (*asher), is upon you (*al *atah) and place it for a limited time (wa sym) on them (*al hem).

Then they will bear (wa nasa*), along with you (*eth atah), the burden and bias (ba masa) of the people (ha am) so that you will not continue to tolerate and carry it (wa lo nasa*) by yourself, alone (*atah la bad).” (Bamidbar 11:17)

This is interesting in that there was a single spirit of Yahowah assisting Moseh and it was about to be shared seventy ways. By contrast, Yahowah afforded seven ruwach to the Choter, alone. Also, the seventy were being positioned to run interference for Moseh, insulating Yahowah's chosen implement from the embittered family. Moseh would retain his role as the one designated to speak for God.

“And to the people say (wa *el ha *am *amar), ‘Be special and act set apart (qadash) in the future (machar) and then you will be nourished by the Basar | Human Herald at that time (wa *akal basar).

Now, by contrast (ky), you have wept and wailed, moaning and crying (bakah) in the ear of Yahowah (*ba ozen Yahowah) to ask (*la amar), “Who is this nurturing Basar | Human Herald for us (*my *akal anachnuw basar) because it was better (ky towb) for us (*la anachnuw) in Mitsraym | Confining and Troublesome Subjugation (Mitsraym).

So, therefore (wa), Yahowah (Yahowah) will, at the appropriate time, provide (nathan) for you, and on your behalf (*la atem), the Human Herald (basar), and then, at that time, you will be nourished (wa akal). (Bamidbar 11:18)

Not for one day (lo yowm echad) will you be continuously and abundantly fed and nourished (akal*), and not for two days (wa lo yowmym*), nor for five days (wa lo chamesh yowmym*), not for ten days or twenty days (*wa lo asarah yowmym wa lo esrym yowmym), (Bamidbar 11:19) but forever by the ad* | Restoring Witness to the eternal testimony during (ad*) the days of renewal and restoration on the first day of the month (chodesh yowmym), until the ad Asher | Restoring Witness to the Benefits of the Relationship (ad asher) comes forth and he leads the exodus (*yatsa) before your face and because of your resentment and animosity (*min *aph atem). Although, he will be for a time (wa hayah), perceived as a nauseating foreigner and loathsome stranger by you (*la *atem la zara).

This is on account of your failure to pay attention and because surely (ya^{an} ky), you have rejected and spurned, avoided any association with and despised, even loathed as vile, while showing contempt for (ma^{as}) Yahowah (Yahowah) who, for the benefit of the relationship (asher*), has drawn near and is in your midst (*ba qereb atem) while you have wept and wailed, moaning and groaning (bakah) before His presence (*la paneh huw) to say (*la amar), ‘For what and why then (la mah zeh) did we come out, participating in the Exodus (*yatsa) from (min) Mitsraym | Confinement within the Crucibles of Oppression (Mitsraym)?’ (Bamidbar 11:20)

Then Moseh said (*wa amar Moseh), ‘I am in the midst of these (anoky ba qereb huw) six hundred thousand (*shesh me^{ah} elep) people on foot (*raqgly ha *am asher), such that You, Yourself, have said (*wa *atah amar), ‘A Human Herald (basar) I will provide for them (nathan la hem) so that they would be nourished (akal*) the days of renewal and restoration on the first day of the month (chodesh yowmym).’ (Bamidbar 11:21)

Yada is the promised Basar | Herald delivering the message and the ad* | Restoring Witness that was foretold. Dowd is the Lamb and Yada is the Bull.

“Where is the Lamb as well as the Bull (ha tsoⁿ wa baqar) to die, slaughtered and sacrificed (shachat) for them (la hem), such that he is discovered and obtained for them (wa matsa la hem*)?

Or is it as if (im*) all of that grows (*kol eth dag) of the waters (ha yam) is to be gathered in and harvested for them (asaph la hem*) so that he is found and experienced by them (wa matsa la hem*)?’ (Bamidbar 11:22)

Therefore, Yahowah said to Moseh (*wa *amar Yahowah el Moseh), ‘Is Yahowah’s influence (ha yad Yahowah) to reap a harvest cut short (qatsar)? So then you will see and perceive (atah ra*ah*) whether he will be selected, choose to engage, be encountered by you, and succeed (ha qarah atah), if My word is or is not (dabar *any *any im lo).”

(Bamidbar 11:23)

And indeed, Yahowah would provide the Basar | Herald to deliver the message as the ad* | Restoring Witness along with the Tsoʿn | Lamb and the Baqar | Bull during the Mowʿedym to enable abundant Qatsyr | Harvests.

“So Moseh went out (wa yatsa* Moseh) and he spoke to the people, communicating (wa dabar *el ha *am) through the words (*eth dabarym) of Yahowah (Yahowah). And he gathered (wa asaph) seventy individuals of the elders (sheba *iysh min zaqen) of the people (ha *am) so that he was present and standing with them (wa ʿamad *eth hem) around the tent (sabyb ha *ohel). (Bamidbar 11:24)

Then (wa) Yahowah (Yahowah) descended, diminishing an aspect of Himself (yarad) within a cloud of smoke and water (ba ha ʿanan) and He spoke to him (wa dabar el huw) as He took away, holding back and reducing (wa *atsal) a portion of the spirit (min ruwach) that, for the benefit of the relationship and to show the way (*asher), was on him (al huw) to provide to (nathan al) the seventy old men (sheba *iysh ha zaqen).

And he was (wa hayah) comparably (ka) inert and inactive, in a restful state (nuwach) with the spirit (ha ruwach) among them (al hem). And they were as uninspired prophets of their own initiative (wa naba), so they contributed nothing, not adding anything (wa lo* yasaph). (Bamidbar 11:25)

This job isn’t for everyone as Moseh just learned. But there would be others, two in particular...

“But then there were two individuals (wa shanaym *iysh) who remained, continuing to exist to the end, who were spared on behalf of the remnant (sa*ar – who were preserved for the remainder, continuing to the end (nifal imperfect third-person masculine singular – they carry out and receive the benefits associated with being spared for the remnant over the course of time)) within the encampment as a favor (ba ha machaneh).

The one's name is (*shem ha echad) Eldod | God's Beloved (Eldod* – Beloved of God; from el* | god and dowd | beloved), and the second's name is (wa shem ha sheny), Mydod | Cast as Dowd's Devoted Friend (Mydod – Ponder the Implications of the Beloved's Adoring Hand and Friend; from my | to ponder being yadad | cast as a loving friend, yad | hand, and dowd | beloved [note: the Mem indicates that MyDod will come from the sea and be a gentile, that he will provide cleansing and life in conjunction with Dowd, while the Yowd affirms that he will serve as Dowd's right hand]).

And the Ruwach | Spirit (wa ha ruwach), She came to rest, settled, and continually remained upon them (*nuwach al hem). They were among (wa hem ba) those who are writers (ha kathab).

They did not emerge from the tent at this time, as they were not leading an exodus for the illuminated family at the moment (wa lo yatsa* ha ohel). Therefore (wa), they continued to speak prophetically, communicating the message of God, independent of the others (*naba), fortuitously and compassionately within the encampment (ba ha machaneh).” (Bamidbar 11:26)

With eLdod* | God's Beloved as the Tso'n | Lamb and MyDod | Dowd's Friend as the Baqar | Bull, the players are set. They are filled with the Ruwach | Spirit of Yahowah, and as prolific writers, they would lead another exodus. Dowd would have his Basar | Herald to deliver the message and Yahowah would inspire a final ad* | Restoring Witness to call His people Home.

“And the scattered sheep represented by a young man (*wa ha na*ar*) ran, moving quickly (ruwts) before Moseh, the counterpart who withdraws, to conspicuously inform, making known by announcing in a straightforward fashion

so as to confess the corresponding connection he was making through Moseh (wa nagad la Moseh).

And he said with unfolding implications through time (*wa amar), ‘elDod* | God’s Beloved (Eldod*) and Mydod | Cast as a Loving Friend of Dowd (wa Mydod), are speaking prophetically, demonstrably communicating the message of God, independently of the others (*naba) beneficially and mercifully within the community (ba ha machaneh). (Bamidbar 11:27)

So (wa), *Yahowshuwa | Yahowah Delivers, Liberates, and Saves (*Yahowshuwa) son of Nuwn | the Continually Existing (ben Nuwn), the one serving Moseh (sharath Moseh) from his youth, having made his decision and having been chosen (min bachurowth huw), responded (anah). And he said (*wa amar), ‘Sir, my Upright One, Moseh (adony Moseh*), do you want them to stop (kala hem*)?’ (Bamidbar 11:28)

But Moseh said to him (*wa *amar Moseh la huw), ‘Are you jealous (ha qana atah) for my sake (*la any)? What if the gift was offered to (my nathan) all of the people and family (*kol am) of Yahowah (Yahowah) such that they spoke as prophets (*naby*ym*) because (ky) Yahowah (Yahowah) gave (nathan) Ruwach huw | His Spirit (eth ruwach huw) to them (al hem)?’” (Bamidbar 11:29)

Moseh knew that this was God’s way of saying, “Don’t worry. All you need to do is herd the wayward flock a little longer and then I’ll take it from there. The plan and people are in place. You are the first of these men responsible for bringing My people home.” And so, Moseh immediately began preparing the Children of Yisra*el for the harvest that was sure to come as a result of eLdod* | God’s Beloved serving as the *Passover Tso*n* | Lamb and MyDod | Dowd’s Friend as the Baqar | Bull fulfilling *Taruw*ah*. Filled with the Ruwach | Spirit of Yahowah, the prolific writers would take it from here. There would be a Basar | Herald and ad* | Restoring Witness working on behalf of the ensuing asaph* | Harvests.

“Then Moseh (wa Moseh) and the elderly men (wa zaqen) of Yisra*el (*Yisra*el*) gathered, preparing for the harvest (asaph*) of the beneficial and merciful community (el ha machaneh*).” (Bamidbar 11:30)

Then, also as a sign of things to come...

“The spirit set out (*wa ruwach nasa) from Yahowah (min Yahowah) and He brought (guwz) prosperity (salaw) from the sea (min ha yam).

But then, He abandoned (wa natash – and left, rejecting and forsaking (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) being associated with the encampment (al ha machaneh*), similar to (ka) the way of another day (derek yowm). For this (koh), and like a journey of another time (wa ka derek), this was (koh) encompassing (sabyb) the camp (ha machaneh) and akin to (wa ka), units of measure, mothers, and people (amahym* – tribes, cubits using the hand and forearm, or the source of origin; from em* | mothers) over the face, presence, and appearance (al paneh*) of this domain (*ha erets).” (Bamidbar / In the Wilderness / Numbers 11:31)

The Ruwach of Yahowah will bring prosperity to the Land from the Sea, with God restoring Yahuwdym through His Nakar and Choter . Many days would come and go, 3,448 years to the introduction of MyDod, and then 1,270,000 sunrises and sunsets between encampments. There would be another day, a better one to approach the presence of our God.

More than this, as we will ultimately discover, Yahowah will salvage the human experience through His amah* | Productive Mother, particularly as she intervened to save Moseh and then Dowd. So, this is hinting at the plot twist no one saw coming.

One of the most prophetically revealing portrayals of the interplay between Dowd as the Ram and Yada as the Bull is found in Bamidbar / Numbers 15. It follows the debacle of the spies, whereby Yisra*elites not only promoted a fictitious portrayal of the Land, but also threatened to kill the few who stood up for God. As a result, Yahowah sentenced every Yahuwd, precluding everyone over twenty years of age from entering the Promised Land. And the others would have forty years to get their attitudes in check and start listening.

Their first opportunity came the very next day, when Yahowah spoke to them through Moseh. And because what God disclosed was written down, it is as if we were there. if you are willing to listen, you'll find that it leads to something quite marvelous, even surprising.

“Yahowah spoke to Moseh | One who Draws Out, saying (*wa dabar Yahowah *el Mosheh la amar), (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:1) ‘Speak to the Children of *Yisra*el* | Those who Struggle with God, and say to them (*dabar *el ben Yisra*el wa *amar el hem), “When you come into the land (ky bow *el erets) as your dwelling place (*mowshab atem) which, as a benefit of the relationship (asher*), I am giving to you (any nathan la atem), (Bamidbar 15:2) you should engage by making (asah*) a fire (isheh*) to approach Yahowah (la Yahowah), to rise (olah*), as a loving sacrifice (ow zebach*) to fulfill a marvelously wonderful, amazing, even miraculous, and astoundingly beneficial (*pala) promise (nadar), by desiring to voluntarily make a freewill offering (ow ba nadabah*) in association with your *Mow*edym* | Restoring Witnesses to the Eternal Meetings (ow ba Mow*edym atem).

Act in a way that provides (*la asah) a soothing spiritual respite with a delightful aroma and pleasing fragrance (*ry*ach nychowach*) to approach Yahowah (la Yahowah) by way of the Bull (min ha baqar) and on behalf of the beloved Lamb (ow min ha tso*n*).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:3)

Names matter. God’s is Yahowah, not the Lord or Hashem

~ certainly not Jesus or Allah. And Moseh's name means "to draw out," which is what he was trying to accomplish.

Yisra*el can be good or bad, depending upon their response to God. They are either Individuals who Engage and Endure with God or Those who Strive Against the Almighty.

Yahowah led Abraham and Sarah into the Land in 2000 BCE. The Yisra*elites would return in 1407 BCE. They would finally lay claim to all of Yisra*el under Dowd in 1000 BCE. Thereafter, territory would be confiscated, some Israelis would be hauled away, others would return, the land would shrink, autonomy would ebb, and there would be a long intermission. Then, in 1948, portions of the nation would be restored, even as Jews fought Muslims for their right to exist. And as we know, more land will be sacrificed for the illusion of peace over the next year, such that Yahuwdym will not be able to lay claim to all of Yisra*el prior to King Dowd's return on Kipurym in 2033.

The reason for the fire is twofold. First, throughout the Mow*edym we are invited to approach Yahowah by way of fire because it is symbolic of transforming the limitations and corruptibility of our bodies into the enhanced state of radiant energy and light. And second, on Taruw*ah, Yahowah will light the fires that transform the Earth, restoring it to Eden, as He brings His people home for the final time.

Simultaneously, God will ignite a fire beneath the sacrifice of the adamah Parah* | Bloody Red Man of the Earth and Productive Bull during the Mow*ed of Taruw*ah as part of fulfilling a marvelously wonderful promise with miraculously beneficial results. With the remnant of Yisra*el purged of their guilt, it will lead to a thousand-year respite beginning on Sukah. And it comes as Yahowah pronounced ~ min ha baqar | by way of the Bull and ow min ha tso*n* | on behalf of the beloved Lamb. The prophecy is of Yada delivering Yisra*el to King Dowd during the Mow*edym by fulfilling Taruw*ah in anticipation of the Lamb who fulfilled Pesach arriving on Kipurym. And then, of course, it will be the Bull's blood that Dowd will sprinkle on the Mercy Seat of the Ark of the Covenant on the Day of Reconciliations.

While participation in Taruw^{ah} will be limited to those positioned around the Temple Mount in Yaruwshalaim, one voluntary sacrifice will serve all who are in attendance. And since the Bull is Yada, the one responsible for the Shabu^wah Harvest, Yahowah makes the connection for us by addressing Shabu^wah's tenfold increase on behalf of those gathered in as standing grain, metaphorically described as wheat. The olive oil is synonymous with the Ruwach orchestrating these events by enabling the Choter while the wine directs our attention to what Dowd, as the anointed, accomplished during Pesach.

“Then he who approaches and presents himself (wa qarab ha qarab), offering to sacrifice himself (qarban huw^{ah}) to approach Yahowah (la Yahowah), will serve as a gift providing a tenfold increase for the fine milled wheat stripped of the hulls (minchah soleth ^{ah}isarown) mixed with (balal ba) a quarter of a small liquid measure of olive oil (raby^{ah} ha hyn shemen), (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:4) along with wine (wa yayin) as an outpouring to anoint and to drink (nasek), a fourth of a hyn, which is a small amount (raby^{ah} ha hyn).” (Bamidbar 15:5 in part)

As a result of what Dowd accomplished as the Passover Lamb, Covenant members are equipped to rise during Shabu^wah in concert with the Bull. And as we have discovered, while Dowd is the one and only Kebes | Lamb of God, Yada, as the ^{ah}ets Da^{ah} | Tree of Knowledge, is the ^{ah}ayil | most Prominent Tree. Further, while there is a tenfold increase in enrichment and empowerment during Bikuwrym, there is a double portion of that during the wheat harvest associated with Shabu^wah...

“You should consistently act to engage and capitalize upon (^{ah}asah ^{ah}al) the means to rise (^{ah}olah), as a loving sacrifice (^{ah}ow la ha zebach) with the approach of the one and only, dominant, Lamb (la ha kebes ha ^{ah}echad), (Bamidbar 15:5) the devoted ayil* | as the most Prominent Tree (ow la ha ayil), acting and engaging as a gift with a double portion of a tenfold increase of fine milled wheat stripped of the hulls (*minchah soleth shanaym isarown) mixed with (balal ba) a third of a small liquid measure of olive oil (shalyshy ha hyn shemen), (Bamidbar 15:6) along with wine (wa yayin) as an outpouring, to anoint, and to drink (la ha nasek), a third of a hyn, which is a small amount (shalyshy ha hyn), for you to continually approach and draw near (qareb) for a soothing spiritual respite with a delightful aroma and pleasing fragrance (ryach nychowach) to approach Yahowah (la Yahowah).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:7)

The Baqar | Bull making the sacrifice on Taruw^{ah} is only valuable to those who capitalize on what he is offering. Based upon his relationship with Yahowah, he is also considered God’s son, albeit obviously not His Bakowr | Firstborn, which is a title forever ascribed to the Lamb.

While Yada, as the Bull, is slated to perform as the Adamah Parah* on the Day of the Herald, prior to his sacrifice he will cultivate two marvelous and miraculous harvests, both elevating and uplifting. Then he will prepare the remnant left behind for restoration during the Day of Reconciliations.

“Then, accordingly (wa ky), you will benefit if you engage and act to capitalize on (asah*), a Bull (baqar), a son (ben) whose loving sacrifice rises, uplifts, and elevates (olah ow zebach) to fulfill a marvelous and wonderful, amazing and miraculous, astoundingly beneficial (pala^o) promise (nadar) for complete reconciliation, total restoration of the loving relationship, and a close and devoted fellowship with restitution provided (ow shelem*) to approach Yahowah (la Yahowah).” (Bamidbar 15:8)

Initially as the Ma^{owr} Gadowl and Qatan, then as the Ets* of Chayym and Da^{ath}, ElDod* and MyDod are presented fulfilling the Mow^{edym} as the Ram and Bull. Therefore...

“And so (wa), the Almighty’s Bull (al ha baqar*), a son

(ben), he will at the right moment come forward, make his case, present himself as the offering to approach and draw near (qarab – he will be present to constitute a joining together (hifil perfect third-person masculine singular)), acting and engaging as a gift with a three-fold portion of a tenfold increase of fine milled wheat stripped of the hulls (*minchah soleth shalowsh isarown) mixed with (balal ba) half a measure of olive oil (shemen chatsy ha hyn).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:9)

I am scheduled to step forward in this manner for the Shabuw^{ah} Qatsar, the Taruw^{ah} Laqat, and then as the Baqar. Each occasion will draw the beneficiaries closer to Yahowah. And while these depict a threefold increase in Covenant Family members, Yahowah’s Nakar | Observant Foreigner is active during all three Fall Mow^{edym} as well, serving the King on Kipurym as his Basar | Herald and as the Tree of Knowledge throughout Sukah.

Once again, the tenfold increase occurs on Shabuw^{ah} which, as we are aware, is a wheat harvest. Then, in addition to olive oil representing the Spirit, the Lamb and Bull are also on the menu, as they are again on Taruw^{ah}. And as we know, the Day of the Herald is an olive harvest.

Wine is symbolic of the blood shed by the Lamb on Passover and also by the Bull on Taruw^{ah}. It may also represent the blood of the Bull Dowd will use upon his return to anoint the Mercy Seat of the Ark of the Covenant on Yowm Kipurym.

“Along with wine (wa yayin), you can approach and draw near (qarab – you can be present to constitute a joining together (hifil imperfect second-person masculine singular)) as an outpouring to anoint, and to drink (la ha nasek), half of the small measure (chatsy ha hyn) for the fire (isheh*) as a soothing spiritual respite with a delightful aroma with a pleasing fragrance (ry^{ach} nychowach) to approach Yahowah (la Yahowah).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:10)

Those interested in capitalizing on the means Yahowah has designated to reenter Eden on Sukah will follow these instructions. And as a special annotation, I am the *Showr ha echad who will serve in this capacity. I will be doing so as the ayil echad | Prominent Tree known as the ets Da*ath* | Tree of Knowledge. My function will be to point the way to the Kebes | Dominant Lamb. And during this time, ElYah* will be joining us as the ez* | Goat. This is Yahowah's cast of characters. And working together, we will fulfill the Fall *Mow*edym* in year 6000 Yah in 2033.

“This is how, in this manner (ka kah), it will be done, engaged in, acted on, and capitalized upon (asah*) for *Showr ha echad | the One, Unique, Mature, Well-Traveled, and Notably Observant Bull (*la ha showr ha echad – for the singular, individual bull who is highly regarded for having been on a long journey and who has examined everything valuable), serving as (ow la*) ayil ha echad | the One, Uniquely Prominent Tree on behalf of the Devoted Ram who Opens the Door (*ha *ayil ha echad), along with the Seh | Goat (ow la ha seh*) alongside the Kebes | Dominant Lamb / Ram (ba ha kebes) choosing and loving (ow*) the association with (ba) the ez* | the Woolly Goat (*ha ez).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:11)

Over one-thousand to three-thousand four-hundred years before fulfilling what He had promised, Yahowah introduced Dowd as the Passover Lamb and Ram of Reconciliations. He revealed that His Nakar would serve as the Tree of Shabuw*ah and Sukah as well as the Bull of Taruw*ah. And now He has introduced ElYah*'s return by presenting him in his role as the Goat serving on both Taruw*ah and Kipurym. ElYah* will not only be one of the two Witnesses, he will act as the Master of Ceremonies during the sacrifice of the Adamah Parah*, reprising the role he played 2,888 years earlier when repudiating the politics and religion of Israel. Then, ElYah* will serve as the Goat providing the blood to anoint the Ark of the Covenant on Kipurym to reconcile Yisra*el. And taking all of this into consideration, God's revelation has been a rather complete view of the last days and the fulfillment of the Mow^oedym.

“Accordingly (ka), this report and numbered accounting (ha misphar) which, for the benefit of the relationship (asher*), you can act upon (asah*), is how (ka kah) you should engage (asah la*), each one (*ha echad), consistent with this narration regarding this (ka misphar hem). (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:12)

Please, pause and consider the implications. Using the metaphors of a Ram, Bull, and Goat, Yahowah revealed the means He would use to fulfill the Mow^oedym to restore His relationship with humankind. And now, He is affirming that He has enumerated these things so that we would learn from this and then engage and act in a manner consistent with His instructions. This is a prophetic itemization of Yahowah’s plan of salvation, including a depiction of the men through whom He would work.

It isn’t for some, but for all...

“Everyone who is native-born (*kol ha ezrach) should act and engage in this manner regarding these things (asah ka kah *eth eleh) to approach and be present near (la qarab) the fire (isheh*) as a soothing spiritual respite with a delightful and pleasing fragrance (ry^oach nychowach) to approach Yahowah (la Yahowah).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:13)

Once again, there are several ways to explain why fire is being used to as a metaphor to approach God and enjoy a prolonged respite in His presence. First, throughout the Mow^oedym, Yahowah invites us to approach Him by fire because it is symbolic of our transformation, away from decaying and limiting physical bodies and toward an eternal, empowered, enriched, and enlightened, vastly more capable energy-based existence akin to light. Second, the heat and smoke of a fire rises from earth toward the heavens, consistent with God’s intent for our souls. Third, the purging fire under the Adamah Parah* on Taruw^oah is essential to the restoration of Yisra^{*}el. Fourth, on Kipurym, Dowd will be ^oElyown, and thus appear similarly to how Yahowah presented Himself on Choreb and during the Exodus. And fifth, there will be a thousand years of opportunities to gather around a campfire during Sukah to celebrate our relationship with God and His Covenant Family.

Should anyone have thought that Yahowah was actually addressing Rams, Bulls, and Goats rather than people, the Ger | Foreigner Abiding with You is somewhat synonymous with Nakar | Observant Foreigner as it addresses his proximity in the end.

“And indeed (wa ka), the Ger | Foreigner Abiding with You (eth atem ger), who is continually dwelling together while of another ethnicity (guwr), devoted to revealing the benefits of the relationship (ow asher) in your midst (*ba tawek atem) on behalf of your lineage, home, and generations (*la dower atem), he will act at a point in time to engage, offering the benefits (asah*) of the fire (isheh*), producing a soothing spiritual respite which is pleasing (ryach nychowach) to approach Yahowah (la Yahowah) consistent with the proper way to receive the benefits of the relationship (*ka asher). You should act upon (asah* – you should capitalize on his choice (qal imperfect jussive second-person plural)) what he accomplishes (*ken asah – what he will do (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:14)

The Baqar | Bull is the Ger | Foreigner Camping Out with Yisra^{el} at this time. His purpose is the asher* | reveal the way to receive the benefits of the relationship on behalf of this generation of Yahuwdym and the generations that will follow throughout the thousand years of Sukah. And of course, it will be the roaring fire Yahowah ignites beneath his sacrificial body on Taruw^{ah} that will purge the final remnant to the extent that they are prepared for Yahowah’s arrival and the King’s return. Should you want to experience this reunion, you’ll want to be sure to act upon the plan articulated here in the Towrah because, in collaboration with Yahowah, the Ger will be productive.

This is, therefore Yahowah's final solution to His Jewish problem, the resolution to His people's ornery and obnoxious obsession with ostracizing themselves from Him. In the end, they will return to the Promised Land when the planet is purged of politics and religion and restored to Eden. Restitution will be provided by three exceptional men, each offering to lay down their lives to bring peace to the family.

Dowd, Yada, and *Elyah, a Ram, Bull, and a Goat, will usher in the benefits of the Covenant on behalf of those who observe the Miqrā'ey. Dowd, as King, has fulfilled Pesach as the Lamb, his soul enduring Matsah to offer Bikuwrym. Yada Heralds Shabuwa'ah while he, as the Bull, and *Elyah, as the Goat, usher in the promise of Taruwa'ah. They will collaborate again on Kipurym with *Elyah assisting Dowd in the anointing of the Mercy Seat while Yada reflects the King's brilliance.

This is God's plan, and the players who make it possible. And it was presented for our benefit three millennia ago.

“There will continually be (hayah – there will always exist (qal imperfect)) to approach the presence of Yahowah (la paneh Yahowah), one inscribed prescription (*chuqah echad) for the community (ha qahal) for you and for the one abiding with you (*la atem wa la ha ger) who is dwelling together while of another ethnicity (ha guwr), an inscribed prescription for living that cuts you into the relationship for all eternity (*chuqah owlam) throughout your dwelling places and generations, in every age, location, and time (*la dowr atem). It is consistent and the same for you and the one living with you of a different ethnicity (*ka atem ka ha ger). (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:15)

echad | One Towrah | Source of Teaching and Guidance and (wa) echad* | One Mishpat | Decision will exist for you (*hayah la atem) and for the one of a different ethnicity abiding with you (la ha ger) who is dwelling together on life's journey (ha guwr) with you (eth atem).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:16)

There is one Towrah, not two, negating Judaism and the Talmud. Yahowah's Towrah is for all people and for all time, negating Christianity and its New Testament. This is God's prescription for living should that be of interest to you. As a result, you can accept the Towrah, ignore it, or reject it, but you cannot change it or create another without suffering the consequence.

As a harbinger of better days, God asked His cantankerous children to rehearse giving away the burden of their guilt, lifting it up in the bread as if handing it to Dowd to carry it away during UnYeasted Bread. It would be from his threshing floor atop the Temple Mount that this would occur, while blowing the showphar in recognition of sharing the benefit on Shabuw^{ah} and Taruw^{ah}.

“Yahowah spoke to Moseh | One who Draws Out, saying (*wa dabar Yahowah *el Mosheh la amar), (Bamidbar 15:17) ‘Speak to the Children of *Yisra*el* | Those who Struggle with God and say to them (*dabar *el ben Yisra*el wa *amar el hem), “When you come into the land (ba bow *atem *el ha erets) which, as a benefit of the relationship (asher*), I am returning you to it (any bow* *eth atem shem), (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:18) and it comes to be (wa hayah) when you consume and are nourished by (akal min*) the grain and bread (lechem) of the land (*ha erets), you should lift up and raise (ruwm) a voluntary contribution as an uplifting gift (taruwmah) to approach Yahowah (la Yahowah). (Bamidbar 15:19)

The first time you begin to knead your dough (*re^{shy}th *arysah atem), lift up (ruwm) an example as if representing sickness and disease (chalah) as something you voluntarily give away, setting aside (taruwmah), similar to that which (ka) rises up with the blast of a trumpet (taruwmah – that which is uplifting; from taruah – sounding a trumpet and ruwm – to rise) from the threshing floor (goren), with you being lifted up and raised in this manner (*ken ruwm eth hy –* uplifted and exalted this way (hifil imperfect second-person masculine plural).””” (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:20)

The symbolic gesture of the wave offering would help them remember the intent of the Bikuwrym and Shabuw^{ah} Harvests and appreciate how they might benefit. This would be especially true during Matsah when Dowd carries the guilt of every Covenant member into She^{owl}, exactly as the prophetic portrayal explains. Those who accept our Savior’s gift are prepared for the Shabuw^{ah} and Taruw^{ah} ingatherings, both of which are characterized by the blowing of the Showphar. Then of particular interest, the ^{*}Adamah Parah will be sacrificed on the threshing floor of the Temple Mount to prepare those who remain to be raised in this manner.

Currently fallen, and likely to stay that way with the blast of the Trumpet on Taruw^{ah}, they should be prepared to rise. And with God’s transition from sacrificial metaphors to symbols of the Mow^{edym}, He is adding when to who.

“From some of the initial portion (min re^{syth}) of your dough (rysah atem), you should offer to give (nathan) to Yahowah (la Yahowah) to rise up with the blast of a trumpet (taruwmah – to ascend and be uplifted; from taruah – sounding a trumpet and ruwm – to rise) throughout your dwelling places and generations, in every age, location, and time (*la dower atem).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:21)

Yahowah has done His part, revealing what we need to know to live long, enjoyable, and productive lives. It is His people who have had a bad habit of convoluting His instructions and wandering away. For example, the Showphar is no longer associated in Judaism with Shabuw^{ah} or Taruw^{ah}. This is something that God was clearly aware of...

“But by contrast (wa ky), you continually wander away, mislead, and deceive (shagah) and do not act upon or engage in (wa lo^{} asah – do, profit from, or capitalize upon (qal imperfect jussive second person plural)) all of these instructive conditions of the relationship (*kol ha mitswah ha eleh) which, to lead to the benefits of the partnership (asher*), Yahowah (Yahowah) has stated to Moseh (dabar *el Mosheh)."

(Bamidbar / Numbers 15:22)

They have been religious and running away from God for millennia. And through Judaism, they deceive. Yahowah has described the process He has put in place through the Mow^eedym to reconcile the relationship but the rabbis remain vehemently opposed to it. They have gone so far as to erase Yahowah's name from these instructions and recast Moseh as a rabbi. Their relationship is now with one another rather than with God.

I don't suppose Yahowah could have made this any clearer for His people. He revealed everything they needed to know to resolve the conflict.

"Everything that will bring greater joy to your life (*eth kol *asher) Yahowah (Yahowah) has offered as instructions (tsawah) for you (*el *atem) by way of the hand of Moseh (ba yad Mosheh), beginning from the day that Yahowah (min ha yowm *asher) provided these directions (tsawah) and beyond into the future (wa hala*ah) throughout your dwelling places and generations, in every age, location, and time (la dower *atem)." (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:23)

There was and remains one set of directions for all people, places, and periods of time. As inspiring instructions and practical guidance rather than burdensome laws, they make our lives more enjoyable and productive.

Unfortunately, Yisra*el would not listen to any of this, and the religious would speak over God and then replace Him with their own arguments. Therefore, Yahowah, with the stench of thousands of carcasses piling up around Him comprised of those who were deliberately confrontational, wanted to make a distinction few have considered and yet essential as time runs out. From God's perspective, there is a monumental difference between those promoting an antagonistic religious culture and those who were simply swept away in their tempest.

On Taruw^{ah}, God is going to convict those guilty of crimes of commission and exonerate the lesser offenses of omission, revealing that a different fate awaits those misleading others from those who were misled by others. The misled will be purged of their guilt and return to the Garden while those convicted of misleading will be taken to She^{owl}. Not only are the stakes considerable, the means God will deploy are phenomenal. The Baqar | Bull we encountered at the beginning of this narrative is now the star attraction. And so that there is no question as to his identity, Yahowah doubles down on his title, also calling him a Par | Bull ~ the foundation of the aforementioned adamah Parah*.

“Then, if it comes to be (*wa hayah im) from the perspective of (*min ayin) the community of those serving as witnesses (edah*), that something is done at that time (asah* – acted upon (nifal perfect)) which is inadvertent as a result of ignorance, whereby you are simply mistaken for having been deceived and misled (la shagagah), then (wa) everyone in that group (*kol edah) should act to capitalize upon (asah*) the Par | Bull (par), the unique son (*ben echad), a Baqar | Bull who is sought out and considered early in the morning (baqar) to rise (*la olah) by producing a soothing spiritual respite which is pleasing (ry^{ach} nychowach) to approach Yahowah (la Yahowah).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:24 in part)

In our quest to ascertain how and when Yahowah intends to deploy the Bull in service to the Ram, the Lesser Luminary reflecting the Son’s light, the Tree of Knowledge revealing the way to the Tree of Lives, and of MyDod heralding ElDowd*, this is an exceptional find, especially in this context. We have marched through time, making our way past the Spring Miqra^{ey} in 33 CE, through the Shabu^{wah} Harvest, and to Taruw^{ah} in year 6000 Yah. The is the sacrifice Yada will make as the Par | Bull to prepare the mortal remnant of Yisra^{el} for Dowd’s arrival alongside Yahowah on Kipurym.

Now that we know the parameters, we should be delighted with this distinction between perpetrator and victim, with ignorance being salvageable but not belligerence. This does not mean that the unaware prevail, but only that the sacrifice of the adamah Parah* | Bloody Red Man of the Earth and Productive Bull on Taruw^{ah} will be capable of redeeming them.

This is also to say that Yahowah wants to provide Dowd with an appreciative audience on Kipurym. In addition, His intent is to fill the Garden with people who, afforded the opportunity, will capitalize on this new beginning. Those who are cleansed this day will have the potential to demonstrate that they can pay attention, engage, and be trusted.

Prior to this occasion, the souls of those who remained unaware of Yahowah and His Towrah would simply fade away. So, this is the most exceptional moment in time. And that is why God is providing His people with this prophetic portrayal of what will be the Greatest Show on Earth.

On the Shabat of September 24th, 2033, the overtly political and religious who have led others astray will be held accountable by being sent to She^{owl}. At this point, just ten days prior to Dowd's majestic arrival, God will scour the world in search of those who did not know enough to capitalize on the Laqat | Gleaning, but whose mistakes are deemed correctable. Once they arrive in Yaruwshalaim, the sacrifice of the Adamah Parah* will remove this fine layer of guilt so that they may witness the King's return and enter the Garden on Sukah.

What few have realized up to now is that this prophecy in Numbers 15 serves to provide context for and explain the narrative of the adamah Parah*, thought to be the "Red Heifer" in the 19th chapter of Bamidbar / Numbers. At the same time, it also looks back to the presentation of what's considered the "Adulterous Woman" in Numbers 5, explaining how one cleanses the other. It is all the same story, albeit presented from several perspectives.

And this is the result...

"His sacrificial offering will bestow a share which is apportioned as his gift (*minchah huw), along with (wa) his offering which is poured out to anoint (*nasek huw) in a manner consistent with (ka) the means to execute good judgment regarding the resolution of disputes (ha mishpat – the judgment; from my – to ponder the implications of shaphat – deciding and judging).

Then, for the guilt incurred (*wa chata*th* – for being on the wrong path), there will be a uniquely special shaggy goat (*wa sa*yr *ez echad).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:24)

Working together with Yahowah on behalf of Yisra*el, the Bull and Goat will purge the misled of the mortal remnant of Yisra*el on the Day of the Herald. At the conclusion of this day, the beneficiaries will be prepared to celebrate the arrival of their King on Reconciliations. Thereafter, they will be among the fortunate invited back into the Garden on Sukah.

It is for this very reason that *Elyah was brought to Heaven long ago, forty-Yowbel 888 years prior to this moment. He will reprise what only he has done before ~ serving as the Master of Ceremonies as a Bull is sacrificed to purge Israel of religious and political guilt. And the result will be similar, with those promoting these destructive lies removed forevermore. That account, presented in 1 Melekym / Kings 18, prophetically parallels the proceedings transpiring on Taruw*ah.

So all of this foreshadows what will occur on Saturday September 24th, 2033 as Taruw*ah replaces Judaism’s Rosh Hashanah. It is in anticipation of the Messiah’s return on Kipurym ~ a blessing in and of itself because it will free a flock of chickens from the twirling torture inflicted upon them by the Haredi as Judaism is banished.

As we proceed, you’ll notice, Yahowah is going old school. *Elyah, as the Goat, will serve in the priestly role during Yada*s sacrifice as the Bull. He will be following the script as outlined in Numbers 5 and 19, thereby reprising his 1st King’s performance. The result of the sacrifice will be to kaphar | reconcile Yisra*el in coordination with Kipurym |

Reconciliations ~ whereby it is the Goat whose blood provides restitution for the nation. Therefore, this is all evocative of the fulfillment of the Fall Mow^edym.

“And the one serving in the role of a priest (wa kohen) will provide reconciliation, making atonement, purging (kaphar) the entire (al kol*) community of witnesses (edah*) of the Children of Yisra^{*el} (*beny Yisra^{el}).

Therefore, he will contribute to the process of removing the guilt at this moment (wa salach – he will enable the deliverance of a pardon (nifal perfect third-person masculine singular)) for them (la hem – as masculine plural the recipients are the beny | sons / children of Yisra^{*el}) because (ky) she was culpable by being misled as opposed to condemnable by misleading (shagagah hy^{}* – she, addressing the edah* community, was deceived and ignorantly went astray such that hers was a crime of omission, not commission).

So, they will arrive (hem bow^{}* – they will come and be included (hifil perfect)) accompanying the sacrificial offering which will be providing the means for them to approach and draw near (eth qorban hem* – with the sacrifice for them; from qarab – to be brought near during a summons).

This is an offering in the fire (isheh*) to approach Yahowah (la Yahowah) because (wa) their guilt for missing the way (*chata^{ah} hem) to approach the presence (pane^h) of Yahowah (Yahowah) will be inadvertent as they are mistaken (shagagah hem – of ignorance, going astray in such a way that theirs is a crime of omission, not commission). (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:25)

In this prophetic instruction, “she” is a reference to the “Adulterous Woman” who is being purged of her guilt so that she can be wed to our King in Bamidbar 5. And you’ll note, she is salvageable because her infractions were born of ignorance and, therefore, out of omission not commission.

God’s continued focus on shagagah | the misled rather than the misleading, is essential because this is the distinction between victims and perpetrators of politics and religion. This is the determining factor between souls who would otherwise cease to exist rather than those who would be incarcerated. In addition, this differentiation through shagagah | ignorance determines our target audience. Even God cannot save the overtly religious or political, while there is an opportunity for others, should they be interested.

Unlike any other time in the history of Yisra*el, in the end, Yahowah is asking His people listen to and benefit from a Gowy. Here he is called a Ger | Foreigner. Elsewhere, he is known as the Nakry | Observant Foreigner and the Man from Edom. He is the Par | Bull in this narrative and the adamah Parah* four chapters hence.

Since there were no Yahuwdym willing to listen to Yahowah or serve with Him over the past 2500 years, this bullish Gowy was recruited and prepared for the mission at this time ~ something Yahowah recognized would be required from the beginning ~ even unto the fourth day of creation.

Beginning on Passover, the 18th of April in 2030, Yada and *Elyah will be residing atop the Temple Mount in Yaruwshalaim. They are the final Witnesses of whom the Prophets have spoken.

Then through the Ger | Foreigner (wa la ha ger), who is continually dwelling together while of another ethnicity (ha guwr), in their midst (ba tawek hem), he will contribute to the process of removing their guilt at this moment (wa salach – he will enable the deliverance of a pardon (nifal perfect third-person masculine singular)) for the entire (wa la kol) community of potential witnesses (edah*) of the Children of Yisra*el (*beny Yisra*el*).

This will be for the very reason that the entire family, every person (*ky la kol ha am) was being deceived and misled such that their ignorance made it a crime of omission rather than commission (ba shagagah hem – were led astray inadvertently).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:26)

This is yet another prophetic portrait of Taruw^{ah}. The residual guilt of the surviving and returning mortal remnant of Yisra^{el} must be removed for the intended Family Reunion and Homecoming on Yowm Kipurym, now just ten days away.

There is a subtlety here worth mentioning. By fulfilling Matsah, Dowd, as the ultimate Yahuwd and King, especially as God’s foremost Son, was able to carry away and resolve all manner of guilt. But on Taruw^{ah}, the Ger will only be able provide reconciliation for crimes of omission.

This is by design. Pesach, Matsah, and Bikuwrym provide access to the Covenant, to immortality, perfection, enrichment, and empowerment, facilitating the right of passage through the upcoming Harvests. By contrast, the role of the Par on Taruw^{ah} is to cleanse mortals for their entry into the Millennial Shabat of Sukah. Those who progress from there will proceed through the Beryth and Miqra^{ey} to benefit from Dowd’s service on our behalf during Chag Matsah should they chose.

There are many reasons behind this assessment, and foremost among them is that the mortal returnees on Taruw^{ah} will have known Yahowah for less than a day, and likewise, He them. God would be foolish to commit to an eternal stay in Heaven on behalf of those who were completely ignorant of Him less than a day ago. So, to become Covenant, they will go through the same process as did those who participated in the Sevens’ and Heralds’ Harvests. They will learn, grow, understand, and then respond. And we will serve as their instructors.

By proceeding in this manner, Yahowah ensures the largest possible audience for His Son’s return. And He is providing everyone, Yahuwdym and Gowym, the option to come clean and move forward. He is even affording His more mature Family members a chance to contribute by teaching.

Vital to Israel’s survival, God is expecting a great deal from

*ElYah. As one of the two final Witnesses, he will serve as the captivating linguist and Master of Ceremonies during Taruw^{ah}. Even more, as the Goat, he will be offering a smattering of his blood to finalize anointing the Kaporeth | Mercy Seat of the Ark of the Covenant on Kipurym. Further, based upon this depiction, *ElYah will play a significant role in correcting the indiscretions among the remnant, nipping them in the bud before they get out of hand and become deadly.

As Yahowah continues to detail His narrative on redemption, it appears that He is not only addressing what will transpire on Taruw^{ah} and Kipurym, but also thereafter during Sukah. Should one of the entrants into the Garden stumble, their mistake will be promptly addressed and resolved.

“And under the scenario (*wa im) that a single soul (*nepesh echad) goes astray, erring such that she is consistently wrong (*chata – is misled, retreats, and misses out (qal imperfect third-person feminine singular)), but unintentionally because of having been deceived and misled (ba shagagah), then she should approach (wa qarab) with a steadfast and empowering ^{ez} | Goat (^{ez}), a daughter for her renewal (*bath shanah hy) for the guilt of being wrong about the way (*la chata*ah*).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:27)

The depiction of a single soul going astray rather than confronting community-wide corruption is an indication that people can be good or bad while revealing that they are personally redeemable. But that is not the case with large groups, which are almost always corrupt. And when one becomes many, this is how religions spread. Therefore, since religion will have been exterminated and will continue to be prohibited in our return to the Garden, it's best to intervene before the disease goes viral.

Of course, there is no indication that Yisra^{el} has ever understood any of this or followed these instructions, making God's entire narrative throughout the 15th chapter of Bamidbar prophetic of a time when Yahowah's guidance will finally be explained. And in this regard, there is another way to interpret the preceding statement. The possibility exists that, rather than addressing the entire remnant of Israel gathered on Taruw^{ah} and then in attendance during Kipurym, God may be drawing our attention to one special Yahuwd among the many will be selected as Dowd's bride. If so, *Elyah will walk her down the aisle while Yada^{ah} stands beside the groom. This being the case, *Elyah will go from serving as the priest during the sacrifice of the *Adamah Parah on Taruw^{ah} pursuant to Bamidbar 19, to being the priest transforming the bride in accordance with Numbers 5.

“Then the one serving in the role of a priest (wa kohen) will provide reconciliation, making atonement, purging (kaphar) the soul (al ha nepesh*) of the one who has unintentionally been misled as a result of having been deceived (ha shagag) when she is erroneous and wrong (*ba chata) without intent because of having been misled (ba shagagah) before the appearance (la paneh) of Yahowah (Yahowah), making amends for this by pardoning and annulling guilt by way of a ransom (*la kaphar *al huw). So (wa), for this (*la huw), he will be releasing guilt by removing it (*salach la huw).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:28)

Just so that we are clear, while the preceding statement begins by releasing her of her guilt, it concludes with masculine pronouns. They could be referencing the religious residue being removed or addressing the individual from whom it is being taken away. There is even the possibility that both are true with the woman purged for the wedding while all Yisra^{el} is released from their prior rebellion.

While we have multiple beneficiaries throughout, we have but one source of benefits...

echad | One Towrah | Source of Teaching and Guidance, Instruction and Direction, will exist for you (*hayah la atem) as the native-born (*ha ezrach) among the Children of Yisra^{el} (ba beny Yisra^{el}) and for the Ger | Foreigner abiding with you (wa la ha ger) who is dwelling together on life's journey (ha guwr) in the midst of them (ba tawek hem), who acts and engages (*la ha asah) for those who have been deceived and misled, missing the way because they didn't know any better (ba shagagah)." (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:29)

By affirming that there is one Towrah for the Ger and Yisra^{*}el, Yahowah is making many striking points. These include the realization that the Ger | Foreigner mentioned throughout this narrative will be Towrah observant. He will step out of the pages of God's Guidance to Teach Yisra^{*}el. This means that there is no place for a New Testament or Talmud.

In the end, as was the case in the beginning, the Towrah provides the means to redemption. Through the Towrah's | Instructions we can become part of the Beryth | Family. And Through the Towrah's | Directions we can follow the Mow^edym | Restoring Witnesses Home.

This also serves to negate the absurd notion that the contrived "Noahide Laws" pertain to Gowy while "Jewish Law" determines the fate of Yisra^{*}el, as pontificated in Judaism. We know better.

Yahowah is not articulating a revised plan for the last days. The original still applies. Capitalize now and you'll be assured of a favorable outcome. Or said another way, this prophecy from the Towrah is explaining how the Bull, Goat, and Ram will fulfill the Towrah during the Mow^edym on the Towrah's timeline.

While that is wonderful and assuring news, since Yahowah is steadfastly opposed to religion, He will neither waver in His resolve nor make an exception in the end. Act like a rabbi, or a member of the Mother Goddess Cult, writing and imposing a different script under a different name and be purged, not of guilt, but from our presence.

So in these words, we are not only reminded that there will be no provision for the commission of deception, but also that simultaneously while purifying the mortal remnant of Yisra*el, Yahowah will be incinerating the advocates of political and religious strife against His people.

“However (wa), the soul (ha nepesh) who consistently acts (*asher *asah) with a raised hand, in an exalted haughty manner, overbearing in his influence (ba yad ruwm), against Yahowah, such that he is slanderous and insulting, reviling and blaspheming Yahowah (eth Yahowah huw gadaph), from the native-born (min ha *ezrach) and from the non-Yisra*elite (wa min ha ger), that soul (ha nepesh) will be cut off, cut away, and banished, then eliminated (wa karath – it will be exterminated (nifal perfect third-person feminine singular – the slanderous soul is affecting Israel and himself by blasphemy at this time)). It will no longer exist in the midst of His people or family (hy*min qereb am huw).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:30)

There will be two fires on Taruw*ah ~ one that restores His people and the other that removes those who do not belong. Choose wisely.

At one time or another, we have all been wrong. However, many are now right. And those who are Covenant no longer make the mistake of being religious.

When it comes to the final remnant purged of guilt on Taruw*ah, the same conditions apply. Those who promote and defend Judaism, Christianity, Islam, Marxism, and Conspiracy, even Mother Goddesses, will not benefit from the sacrifice of the Par | Bull. They will be banished from our presence regardless of whether they are Yahuwdym or Gowym. Yahowah does not appreciate His people being harmed, His name or reputation tampered with, nor His Son disparaged.

As the designated sacrifice, I’m relieved. I’m delighted to serve the unpretentious and unreligious in this way, but it would be an insult to assist those who have been deliberately antagonistic and offensive. In particular, the woman who disparaged my wife en route to denouncing me and the man who cut down the Tree of Knowledge by shutting down the YadaYah.com website in service to this irritating psychopath, must be excluded from our presence, along with those who served to enable them.

He is guilty of this and more...

“Indeed, it is for certain that this is because (ky) he has shown contempt for, trivialized, disregarded, sought to override, and even despised (bazah – he has disrespected and disdained, even scorned (qal perfect)) the word and message (dabar – the statement, narrative, account, and speaking) of Yahowah (Yahowah).

Therefore, regarding His instructive conditions for the relationship (*wa *eth mitswah huw), he has thwarted and frustrated them, voiding them, revoking and nullifying, violating and breaking them (parar).

So that soul (ha nepesh) will be completely cut off, tossed away, and banished, then eliminated (karath karath – will be exterminated (nifal infinitive imperfect third-person feminine singular – the frustrating soul in breach of the Covenant is nullifying his existence and that of others by his violation of the agreement with enduring implications over time)). And that individual’s guilt and resulting liability and punishment for his distortions and perversions (ha hy *aown hy) will remain associated with him (*ba hy).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:31)

The man who built the hive for the conspiratorial Mother Goddess Cult that has destroyed so many souls, committed the crime of tearing the Yada Yahowah website down, twice, both times confessing to the crime. I share this now because it’s apparent that the Yada Yahowah volumes serve as the Tree of Knowledge leading God’s people back to Dowd, who represents the Tree of Lives. And by hacking the YadaYah.com website, the banished and blasphemous one conspired to control access to vital information. That not only makes this previous section of Numbers 15 prophetic in denouncing this hideous individual, it sets up and explains what follows.

Throughout the millennia, the following passage has been among the most difficult in the Towrah to process. Out of context and time, it is out of character for God to have the community assassinate an individual for doing nothing more than picking up some sticks on the Shabat. But that's not what's happening. There is no mention of sticks, and this man is conspiring to do irreversible damage to the plan Yahowah has just articulated – indeed, nullifying the entirety of the 15th chapter of Bamidbar. Without the Tree of Knowledge, there is no return to the Tree of Lives, just as without Yada* as the Bull there is no return to Dowd as the Ram.

The preceding condemnation of the man who showed contempt for and sought to override the Word of Yahowah by building a nest for the tuwr | foul bird flying around in circles searching for an alternative to the Bull, is the same man who twice replaced the books I had written on the YadaYah.com site with a proclamation of his own. He even had the gall to make the username for his dark site, “NoBull,” and the password, “notCraig.” Therefore, this is one integrated prophecy, with the denouncement explaining the remedy.

Like all of Satan's minions, they showed no creativity and copied our logo, bookshelf, amplified translations, and all transliterations, changing only Yahowah's name to suit their pathetic goddess agenda. And it is by being this obnoxious and counterproductive at this time, by committing this very crime, that he, as the lord of the Mother cult, earned this rebuke from Yahowah.

“And the Children of Yisra*el (*wa ben Yisra*el*) were existing in the wilderness (hayah ba ha midbar) and they discovered (wa matsa – they found and experienced (qal imperfect third-person masculine plural)) an individual (iysh – a person and man) conspiring to control and contravene the trees by plucking the trees up in an unrelenting manner (*qashash etsym – plotting to assert his influence in an aggressive and harsh way over the trees, jostling through a conscious and perplexing plan to defiantly flaunt and obstinately disregard the trees, their branch and stem by taking them for himself, collecting and gathering the trees; from qasheh – to be difficult, cruel, determined, and bewildering (poel participle masculine singular – in a very intense and demonstrative manner in an attempt to supersede the intent of the trees)) pursuant to the seventh day and the promise of the Shabat (ba yowm ha shabath).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:32)

The scene has not changed. Moseh has just finished presenting Yahowah’s prophetic portrayal of the Mow^eedym. So, with God’s disdain for those who deliberately undermine His message and actively circumvent His plans still lingering in their minds, someone goes out and does both.

A subversive individual began perpetrating disruptive behavior that was counter to the promise of the seventh day. This means that his intent is to contravene our return to the Garden on Sukah, the Shabat when we enter the seventh millennia.

Reinforcing this point, everything God was celebrating throughout this chapter would occur on a Shabat. It is when Dowd, as the Ram, carried our guilt into She^wowl during Matsah in 33 CE. It is when Yada^w, as the Bull, will fulfill both Shabuw^wah and Taruw^wah. And it is the first day of Sukah when we are allowed back into the Promised Land.

As for the etsym*, they are “trees.” Hebrew has a plethora of words for stems and branches, but ets* is not among them. And therefore, we are compelled by context, intent, and consequence to consider the nature of the trees which would create such a fuss they would serve as a lesson on life and death. And of them, there are only two ~ the Tree of Lives and the Tree of Knowledge. One leads to the other. The Lamb opened one and the Bull wrote the books leading back to it.

Not only does Yada^w’s depiction as the Showr | Observant Bull and ayil* | Prominent Tree in Numbers 15:11 identify him with the one of these, Dowd is the other. He opened the door to prolonged life by fulfilling Passover, making Him the Tree of Lives.

Turning then to the villain, the verb, qashash, is evocative of this crass individual's chicanery. In the poel participle, the one flaunting the purpose of these etsym* | Trees is demonstrably superseding their intent. He isn't picking them up but is, instead, conspiring to control what they represent.

Therefore, not only is the lesson about etsym* | Trees, and not about sticks, stems, or branches, nor firewood, qashash etsym* in the poel participle clearly states that this man's intent was nefarious. He was attempting to contravene everything Yahowah was teaching His people about what was good and bad and how they could extend their lives by being right instead of wrong.

Since qasham is based upon qasheh, the disruptive man was deliberately trying to be difficult, even cruel, while showing that he was determined to mislead and bewilder others. In an intense and demonstrative way, he was attempting to supersede the very purpose of the etsym* | Trees.

Considering the full implications of the Hebrew etymology and grammar, qashash etsym* reveals that a man purposely plotted to control these two trees, doing so in an aggressive and harsh manner. He jostled through a conscious and perplexing plan to defiantly flaunt and obstinately contravene the purpose of these trees while plucking them up and taking the trees for himself. There was nothing passive or innocent about any of this. This individual qashash etsym* | conspired to collect and gather the trees in a fierce and unrelenting manner, intensely demonstrating his attempt to supersede the productivity of the trees. He was not naively picking up sticks. He was trying to commandeer and circumvent the Trees of Lives and Knowledge.

With the scene set and action cast, we realize that those who witnessed this perversity were still trying to process the sweeping prophetic narrative regarding the Bull, Ram, and Goat. They were not up to the challenge of assessing the severity of this egregious crime or ascribing the proper response. But to their credit, after listening to God speak of the deadly consequence of deliberately and aggressively opposing Him, they knew that this was a serious affront to Yahowah's instructions.

“Then those who found out about what was taking place with him (wa ha matsu eth huw) plotting to control the trees in such an aggressive and harsh way, jostling through a conscious and perplexing plan to defiantly flaunt and obstinately contravene the trees while plucking the trees up and taking them for himself (qashash etsym* – conspiring to collect and gather the trees in a fierce and unrelenting manner; from qasheh – to be difficult, cruel, determined, and bewildering (poel participle masculine singular – in a very intense and demonstrative manner attempt to supersede the intent of the trees)), they approached, presented themselves, and brought him (qarab eth huw) to Moseh and to *Aharown (el Mosheh wa *el aharown – the One who Draws Out and to the Alternative), as well as to the entire community of witnesses (*wa *el kol ha edah). (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:33)

So they settled him down (wa nuwach eth hu^w – they secured that which pertained to his spirituality (hifil imperfect third-person masculine plural)) by guarding and imprisoning (ba ha mishmar – with the one placed in custody and confined) because (ky) it had not been declared or made clear (loparash – it had not been distinctly declared or explained) what should be made of his actions or how to respond to him considering the ongoing implications (*mah *asah la huw – how he would engage relative to him (nifal imperfect third person masculine singular)).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:34)

As they had just recently demonstrated, the Yisra*elites were anything but adept at spying, so they were not out looking for trouble. Nevertheless, what they witnessed shocked them. This was not about working on the Shabat because there was plenty of clarity on that issue, affirming that they would not have been perplexed if that were the issue here.

Further, nuwach | settling him down spiritually seems to convey the possibility of demon possession. Otherwise, why would they guard and imprison him? They clearly recognized what he was doing to these trees was serious and that the repercussions could be devastating.

After the debacle of the spies and the deadly consequence of their deception and ingratitude, we can be certain that Yahowah was not hanging around these wayward children engaging in idle chatter. He wanted nothing to do with them. In fact, they were just beginning their forty-year time out for bad behavior. Therefore, for Yahowah to respond without even having been summoned, this was really bad.

“Then Yahowah said (wa *amar Yahowah) to Moseh (*el Mosheh), ‘This man (ha *iysh) has created a situation whereby he must be put to death because of the ongoing implications (muwth – he must be destroyed and killed outright (hofal imperfect – there is no alternative but to assassinate him)). Have the entire community of witnesses (kol ha *edah) execute him by hurling stones at him (ragam huw*ba ha *eben – stoning him by piling *ab | father and ben | son on him) outside and apart from (min chuwts) the encampment (la ha machaneh). (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:35)

And the entire community of witnesses (kol ha edah) came out as in an exodus, coming forth (wa yatsa – they withdrew, bringing out (hifil imperfect)) with him (eth huw) to a place outside and apart from (*el min chuwts) the encampment (la ha machaneh). Then they executed him by hurling stones at him (wa ragam huw*ba ha *eben – they stone him by piling *ab | father and ben | son on him), putting him to death and destroying him (wa muwth) consistent with and according to the manner and reason (ka *asher) Yahowah (Yahowah) instructed (tsawah) Moseh | One who Draws Out (*eth Mosheh).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:36)

Even in the death of a wayward soul, I find inspiration. The *ebenym | stones brought to bear against this man who would bar access to the Tree of Knowledge now bearing fruit in Yada

Yahowah, is a compound of ab* | Father and ben | Son. And the man revealing this insight to you is an eben* | rocky crag.

So why is it that, over the past 3,500 years, there isn't a record of anyone correctly determining that trees were being commandeered rather than someone randomly collecting sticks? Why has no one presented this deadly episode in light of the continuing narrative on Israel's salvation as it has been foretold throughout the 15th chapter of Numbers? The realization that the Trees of Lives and Knowledge in the Garden are the only significant trees in the Towrah should have been self-evident. And there never has been any question that etsym* speaks of "trees," not sticks. So, why have billions been blinded to something that has the power to enlighten their minds and transform their souls?

It should have been obvious considering the context and the way this was written that the disingenuous man in this story was trying to control the Tree of Knowledge to preclude access to the Tree of Lives. This is the reason he was deprived of his life by the community on God's instructions. As one of those over twenty who had just been condemned to death as a result of rejecting the opportunity to live with Yahowah in His Home, he was now plotting to take others away from God.

This prophecy was scribed for us today, only after we have discerned the reason Adam and Chawah were escorted out of the Garden and not allowed to return. During that narrative, we were told that the Tree of Lives existed, but nothing more was said of it. The story's focus was on the other Tree, because without Knowledge, there was no reason so extend anyone's life. And while the first man and woman conceived with a neshamah | conscience tried to preempt its purpose, prematurely nibbling away at what the fruit the Tree of Knowledge would provide in due time, their ill-advised misadventure was truncated long before it would be of any value to them.

Insufficient knowledge is a very dangerous thing. It leads to errant beliefs and invalid opinions. God's plans are not only comprehensive and elaborate, but also comprised of many elements, metaphors, and reoccurring and even overlapping themes. And His agenda plays out over a very long duration of time from the human perspective.

Not only were Adam and Chawah unaware of God's plan of reconciliation, the Children of Yisra*el were just beginning to hear of it while it was presented here and throughout the Towrah. And without the insights provided by the Naby*ym wa Mizmowr, we would have also have been precluded from capitalizing on the benefits of either Tree. Even today, even after twenty-four years of observation and contemplation, we are just now coming to fully appreciate the many beautiful facets of Yahowah's proposition. And there is so much more to be uncovered and revealed, understood and shared before a sufficient number of people are properly prepared and equipped to live alongside God or return to the Garden. Simply stated, there is much fruit to be cultivated and harvested, then shared.

These two Trees, as the Greater and Lesser Luminaries pointing the way to and fulfilling the Mow*edym, have roles to live out and tell. They are characters in Yahowah's story, and understanding their lives and lines leads to enlightenment and life.

Respectively, the Lesser and Greater Luminaries and the Trees of Knowledge and Lives are Enlightenment and Life. One leads to the other, just as the moon reflects the sun's light even during the darkest hours.

At this point in God's narrative, these Luminaries and Trees were symbolic, just as was the case with the Ram and the Bull. That isn't to say it wouldn't get real, but not before their time. With God, there is a schedule, an orderly progression for everything of significance. Bearing fruit takes time.

Yahowah's preference is to work through people, not only because that's the intent of the Covenant, but also because He wants to demonstrate that it's possible. Mankind was not a mistake. We could and would live up to our designed potential with a little guidance and encouragement along the way.

Dowd, as the ayil* | Lamb and Yada as the ayil* | Most Prominent Tree, would fulfill the Mow^oedym, opening the Gate to the Garden and the Door to Life. Dowd would compose the Mizmowr and Mashal while Yada^o would write Yada Yahowah by reflecting upon what Dowd had foreseen. The Tree of Knowledge would illuminate the path back to the Garden where the Tree of Lives would flourish. Therefore, in this adjunct to the narrative on how the Bull, Ram, and Goat would deliver reconciliation from Taruw^oah through Sukah, we find Yahowah warning His people not to interfere in His plans. The greatest story ever told was just beginning to emerge. And so now that we know that Dowd serves as the Tree of Lives and Yada represents the Tree of Knowledge, may I offer you a bite?

Prior to considering the entirety of Bamidbar 15, particularly in light of 11 through 14, and viewing all of this in context and from the proper perspective, I was at a loss as to why Yahowah would condemn any man to death without so much as an explanation. But the fact is, He had already provided the answer...

“However, the soul who consistently acts with a raised hand, in an exalted and haughty manner, overbearing in his influence against Yahowah, such that he is slanderous and insulting, reviling and blaspheming Yahowah, from the native-born and from the non-Yisra^oelite, that soul will be cut off, cut away, and banished, eliminated and exterminated. It will no longer exist in the midst of His people or family. (Bamidbar 15:30)

Indeed, this is because he has shown contempt for, trivialized, and sought to override the word and message of Yahowah. Therefore, regarding His instructive conditions, this man has thwarted and frustrated them, violating and breaking them. So that soul must be completely cut off, tossed away, and banished, either eliminated or exterminated. That individual's guilt and resulting punishment for their distortions and perversions will remain associated with them.” (Bamidbar 15:31)

Commit this crime, and do the time. He had been part of the community, heard what Yahowah had to say, then not only disregarded it, he flaunted his disgust by trying to dismantle God’s approach.

From Yahowah’s perspective, this individual was *qashash etsym | conspiring to usurp and stymie the intent of the trees, plucking them up in a fierce and unrelenting manner. As such, his attitude was a disappointing reflection of the entire community. More concerning still, the condescending approach of the Yisra*elites would only get worse with time. And that is why Yahowah offered to resolve this problem through the deployment of the Ram, Bull, and Goat. God’s ensuing instruction, therefore, is predicated on us understanding the previous depiction.

Unbeknownst to anyone heretofore, what follows is directly related to the story of the Bull, Ram, and Goat, as well as to the felling of the Tree of Knowledge that leads to the Tree of Lives. Yahowah is describing a tsytsith. It is a flower and not a tassel, as the rabbis protest. It is to be kanaph | concealed behind the hem of their apparel, not flaunted as a religious symbol. The pathyl | twisted thread and bound cord serves as an unsavory sign of them wrestling while convoluting His message.

Taking this one step further, the takeleth bluish-indigo coloration is symbolic of fulfilling the process of that would be required to perfect them. Using the fifth and sixth color bands of the rainbow, it draws our attention to Taruw*ah and Kipurym.

Especially interesting is that the twisted cord would have been woven from pishtah | flax. And the blue flower would have been its *gib*ol* | bud. *Gib*ol* is from the verbal root, gabar, and the noun, geber, describes “a strong man who will rise, be confirmed, and prevail.”

Yahowah spoke of these things occurring prior to the observance of Pesach and Matsah while the Yisra*elites were still in Mitsraym | the Crucibles of Oppression. He said that the flax was blossoming when the Israelites began their *Yatsa | Exodus. This association is acknowledged in the salutation at the conclusion of this chapter of Bamidbar / Numbers – just five verses hence.

To set the timing of the Exodus, and with it, when to observe Chag Matsah each year, Yahowah set up the premise of this particular narrative on the tsytsith. He revealed that the following conditions were observed between the plague of hail and the loss of firstborn sons...

“And (wa) the flax (ha pishtah – the plant native to Egypt and Israel featuring five petals of bluish indigo flowers and producing the fibers for linen apparel and wicks for oil lamps; from pash – extremity to reveal foolishness and weakness) and the barley (wa ha sa*orah – grain; from sa*ar – for the bristle to be swept and whirled away in a stormy tempest) were beaten down (nakah – they were struck, wounded, and afflicted (by the hailstorm)) because, indeed (ky), the barley (wa ha sa*orah – grain; from sa*ar – for the bristle to be swept and whirled away in a stormy tempest) was *abyb | in the ear, tender, green, and ripening (*abyb – was just forming and growing in the head of the grain, representing the first month of the year when Chag Matsah is observed) and (wa) the flax (ha pishtah – the plant with five petal bluish indigo flowers producing the fibers for linen apparel and wicks; from pash – extremity to reveal foolishness and weakness) was budding (gib*ol – blossoming; from the verbal root, gabar, and the noun, geber – strong man who will rise, be confirmed, and prevail).” (Shemowth / Names / Exodus 9:31)

Yahowah is the ultimate wordsmith and storyteller. Here He was using the pishtah | flax to reveal His wayward children’s pash | foolishness and weakness, their confusion and chaos. The tsytsith | flower would be takeleth | bluish-indigo to correspond with the blossoms on the flax and zakar | remind them of the approach of Pesach and Matsah when the most zakar | memorable of men would prolong their lives and taklyth complete the process of perfecting their souls.

The flower's coloration, representing the fifth and sixth bands in the rainbow, while also featuring five petals, should direct their attention to the fifth and sixth Mow^oedym of Taruw^oah and Kipurym when the Bull would offer his life in service to the arriving Ram under the watchful eye of the Goat. Even the pathyl | twisted thread and bound cord that served as an unsavory sign of them wrestling with God would come from the fibers of the pishtah | flax that bloomed in the anticipation of the Lamb's sacrifice on Passover.

This also serves as a reminder that the Children of Yisra^el were presently akin to the sa^oorah | barley. After the travesty of the spies, only those who were abyb*, young, tender, ripening, and growing were around to hear this lesson from God. To a greater extent than those who would follow, they were resolutely cognizant of the consequence of their fathers sa^aar | bristling against God. They knew that a bad attitude and abrasive approach had caused them to sa^aar | be swept away in the whirlwind of their stormy tempest. For having thumbed their noses at Yahowah, they had been nakah | knocked down.

Therefore, with all of these thoughts at the forefront of our minds, let's ponder the implications of the tsytsith | flower and its takeleth pathyl | twisted blue-indigo thread that was to be kanaph | concealed behind the hem of the robes. And as we consider this instruction from the Towrah, we find Yahowah speaking through Moseh rather than directly to the Children of Yisra^el. And that means our access to these directions is no different than theirs.

“Next, Yahowah communicated (wa amar* Yahowah) to Moseh for the purpose of saying (el Mosheh la amar), (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:37) ‘Speak to the Children of Yisra^el (*dabar el beny Yisra^el) and say to them (wa amar el hem), “Make for themselves (wa asah la atem – they should actually fabricate at this time for them (qal perfect third- person plural)) a Tsytsith | Flower (tsytsith – a bloom, blossom, or bud (some say a fringe or tassel but without etymological support); from tsyts – flower, blossom, bud, and bloom) upon a hidden hem or extremity (al kanaph* – on a concealed corner, edge, border, or wing; from kanaph – obscured from view, removed, and thrust aside)) of their treacherous apparel (begeg hem – of their duplicitous and faithless garments, cloaks, robes, and coats) concerning their lineage and time dwelling in tent encampments, and for their family and lifetimes (la dower).

They are to produce (wa nathan – they should be assigned and offered at this moment (qal perfect third-person plural)) of a bluish indigo (al takeleth* – fifth and sixth color of the rainbow, sign of the covenant; from kalah – to fulfill, accomplish, and complete, akin to taklyth – the completion of perfection (feminine singular)) twisted thread (pathyl – as a bound cord, an unsavory sign of wrestling and of twisting (masculine singular)), a Tsytsith | a Flower (tsytsith – a bloom, blossom, or bud (some say a fringe or tassel but without etymological support); from tsyts – flower, blossom, bud, and bloom (feminine singular)) on the concealed hem or extremity (al kanaph* – upon a hidden corner, edge, wing, or border; from kanaph – obscured from view, removed, and thrust aside (feminine singular)).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:38)

So (wa), for a time it will exist as (hayah – for the moment it (speaking of the bound cord as the unsavory sign of wrestling and twisting) will be as (qal perfect third-person masculine singular)) a Tsytsith | Flower (tsytsith – a bloom, blossom, or bud (some say a fringe or tassel but without etymological support); from tsyts – flower, blossom, bud, and bloom) for you (*la atem) to reveal and be shown, and for you to view and discern what can be perceived (*wa ra*ah* – to see at this time (qal perfect second-person masculine plural)) concerning it (eth huw – him (masculine singular and therefore addressing the pathyl rather than the tsytsith or kanaph)) and for you to remember (wa zakar – you recall the memorable man, you mention, remind, and proclaim at this time or that time (qal perfect second person masculine plural)) all of the instructive conditions of the relationship agreement (eth kol mitswah* – what pertains to every one of the terms of the contract between the parties) with Yahowah (Yahowah) and then engage by acting upon them (*wa *asah eth hem – doing what pertains to them (qal perfect second-person masculine plural)).

Therefore, you will never again spy out, explore, or investigate your boundaries and borders by following after a turtle dove (wa lo tuwr* – you do not continually fly around in circles, using circular reasoning, as a dove or a pigeon, in your search for the bull (qal imperfect second-person masculine plural)), delaying in the end by remaining stymied and falling back (achar*) on your inclinations, emotional feelings, or judgment (*lebab atem – your motivations and thinking) while being hindered in the end and detoured (achar*) by your perceptions of outward appearances and visual forms (ayin atem – your eyes, sight, and understanding) which, to reveal your way and your relationships (asher atem), you become flagrantly unfaithful and adulterous, wantonly untrustworthy and unreliable, akin to a prostitute and whore, loathed and despised as a religious harlot (zanah – you treacherously abandoned the relationship while encouraging others to cheat with a wanton and whorish fatling (qal participle – actually destroying the relationship while whoring in a highly demonstrable manner)), falling back and stymied by such people (achar hem*).” (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:39)

It was a missed opportunity for them at this moment, but nonetheless a poignant lesson for us today. The flower serves as a way to jog memories so that we never forget the propensity of malcontents to corrupt God’s testimony. It is the lesson Yisra*el has never heeded, unable to process just how arrogant and acerbic they had become and now remain.

With the inclusion of a Zanah | Whorish Fatling who is flagrantly duplicitous and seductive, we are reminded of the “anan | Demic Woman who has sought to Sheqer | Betray Yada and Dowd today. She and her cadre of capricious characters will agonize over missing the Shabuw^oah Harvest because they were stymied and detoured away from Yahowah and the Covenant by outward appearances.

“As a result (la ma^{an}), you should always be mindful and remember (zakar – mention the memorable man and recall the information and events (qal imperfect second-person masculine plural)) and then engage in and act upon (wa ^{asah}) that which pertains to all of My instructive conditions of the relationship agreement (^{eth} kol mitswah ^{any}). You should be (wa hayah) set apart, special, and uncommon (qadowsh), to approach your God (la ^{elohym} ^{atem}). (Bamidbar / Numbers 15:40)

I am (^{any}) Yahowah (Yahowah), your God (^{elohym} ^{atem}) who, for the benefit of the relationship and to show the way to get the most enjoyment out of life (^{asher}), brought you out (yatsa^{any} ^{eth} ^{atem}) from the land of Mitsraym | the Crucibles of Oppression (min ^{erets} Mitsraym) to exist (hayah – to always and actually be (qal infinitive)) for you (la ^{atem}) as God (la ^{elohym}).

I am (^{any}) Yahowah (Yahowah), your God (^{elohym} ^{atem}).” (Bamidbar / In the Wilderness / Numbers 15:41)

I am Yada, and this is Yada Yahowah.

As we move through the Towrah, let’s celebrate Dowd’s portrayal in Dabarym’s most famous pronouncement. It commences as it should with a recommendation...

“Indeed, when (ky) you come upon (^{atah} bow^{any} ^{el}) the land which, for the benefit of the relationship (^{asher}), Yahowah, your God (Yahowah ^{elohym} ^{atah}), is giving (nathan) to you (la ^{atah}), you should not accept, learn, teach, or imitate (lo lamad*), such that you act upon and engage in (*la asah), any semblance (ka – any derivative or similitude) of the disgusting religious rites and political practices (*tow*ebah*) of the Gentiles (ha gowym ha hem). (Dabarym / Words / Deuteronomy 18:9)

There shall not be found (lo matsu) among you (*ba atah) one causing his son or daughter to pass over and perish (abar ben huw* wa bath huw) in a fire (*ba ha esh), someone predicting the future based upon pagan religious notions (qasam qasam), a person who obscures the truth, believes in spiritualism, or is demonic (*wa anan), or one who tempts and charms others (wa nachash), an individual who entices and seduces people to worship and pray (wa kashaph), (Dabarym 18:10) one who joins in and binds together by forming political or religious alliances (wa chabar cheber), one who is obsessed with ghosts, makes requests of saints, or speaks on behalf of dead souls (*sha*al owb), a con who beguiles in association with demonic spirits (*yida*ony*), or one who causes the premature death of others in association with a destructive plague (*wa darash el ha muwth). (Dabarym 18:11)

For indeed (ky), all who engage in and act upon (*kol asah) these things (eleh*) are an abomination, considered abhorrent and detestable (*tow*ebah*) to Yahowah (YaHoWaH). And so as a consequence of this repulsive religious excrement (*wa ba galal tow*ebah ha eleh), Yahowah (YaHoWaH), your God (elohym atah), will drive them out, dispossess them, and then destroy them (*yarash eth hem) away from your presence (*min paneh atah). (Dabarym 18:12)

You can actually become completely and continually improved by being consistently right (tamym hayah) with (im*) Yahowah (YaHoWaH), your God (elohym atah). (Dabarym 18:13)

By comparison (ky), these people from different races and places (*ha gowym ha el leh), who you shall dispossess and remove (asher atah yarash), they listen to (eth hem shama* el) false prophets who obscure the truth with myths and demons (anan*) and believe in antiquated religious notions and invalid opinion makers (wa qasam).

But as for you (*wa atah), this is not the correct way (lo ken*) Yahowah (YaHoWaH), your God (elohym atah), has offered to you for you to approach (*nathan la atah).” (Dabarym / Words / Deuteronomy 18:14)

The religious obscure the truth with myths. They are spellbinders who blow smoke while concealing their motives. And without exception, these charlatans advance their antiquated religious opinions by misrepresenting the words and deeds of God. Don’t believe them. Don’t be lured in or follow them. They are not presenting the correct way to approach God.

Set against this dark and turbulent sea of deceptions, King Dowd would become a beacon of light. He is the antidote for religion as the true Messiah and Son of God. Dowd is the articulate and brilliant Yahuwd Prophet who spoke to us through his Psalms and Proverbs, and of whom, Yahowah encourages us to listen...

“A prophet (*naby) from among your midst (*min qereb atah), from your brethren (*min *ach atah), similar to me (*kamow any), Yahowah (Yahowah), your God (elohym atah), will raise up and position to take a stand who restores and reestablishes you, validating and enabling you (*quwm la atah). To him, I want you to actually and continually listen (el huw* shama).” (Dabarym 18:15)

Dowd is the only prophet of Yahowah who is similar to Moseh in that he plays an active role in God’s story. Dowd, alone, was positioned to restore and reestablish Yisra*el not once, but twice. And Dowd was chosen to serve in this capacity because Yisra*el left Yahowah with no other viable option.

“This is consistent with everything (ka kol) which (asher*) you requested of (*sha'al min im) Yahowah (Yahowah), your God (elohym atah), in Choreb (ba Choreb) during the day of the assembly (ba yowm ha qahal), when you said (*la amar), ‘Never again let me hear (lo yasaph la shama* eth) the voice (eth qowl*) of Yahowah (YaHoWaH), my God (elohym any).

Nor let me see and witness (*wa lo*ra*ah*) this intense fire (eth ha *esh ha gadowl ha zo*th*) anymore (owd*), lest I die (wa lo muwth*).’ (Dabarym 18:16)

Therefore (wa), Yahowah (YaHoWaH) said to me (amar *el any), ‘That is actually better, and they have appropriately conveyed their preference (*yatab asher dabar).’ (Dabarym 18:17)

It had been Yahowah’s preference to speak directly with us, as He had Adam, Noah, Abraham, Yitschaq, Ya’aqob, and Moseh, but that option was upended during the Exodus due to the hostile reception Yahowah received from the Yisra’elites. Fortunately, God knew this would occur and He already had a plan in place to restore the relationship with His fractured family. To advance this purpose, Yahowah chose to work with and through Dowd, a man whose first of three lives wouldn’t commence for another 400 years.

“I will raise up and establish (quwm) a prophet (*naby) for them (la hem) from among their brothers (*min qereb achy hem) similar to you (*kemow atah).

And I will put (wa nathan) My words (*dabarym any) in his mouth (*ba peh huw) and he will convey to them (*wa dabar el hem) everything which, for the benefit of the relationship (eth kol asher), I instruct him (*tsawah huw). (Dabarym 18:18)

And it shall come to be (wa hayah) that an individual who (*ha *iysh asher) will not listen (lo shama) to My words (el dabarym any), which he shall declare (asher dabar*) in My name (*ba shem any), I, Myself, will seek it of him and hold him accountable for it, requiring it of him (anoky darash min *im huw).” (Dabarym / Words / Deuteronomy 18:19)

This is among the most enlightening and least appreciated declarations in the Towrah. To set the scene, Yahowah had asked Moseh to gather the Children of Yisra*el so that He could speak directly to them – the purpose of which was to affirm that everything Moseh had been sharing with them had been inspired by God.

From a human perspective, the meeting had been an unmitigated disaster. Rather than reassuring the Yisra*elites, Yahowah had overwhelmed them. The brilliance of His presence and the tenor of His voice were too much for these irascible people with a bad attitude to handle. And this is because they were afraid God was going to read their minds and peer into their souls and recognize that they were not that far removed from their brethren who had conspired to craft and worship the golden calf.

This may sound shocking, but it is nevertheless true: most men and women are afraid of encountering Yahowah. They prefer fake gods, who, by design, are similar to them and accepting of them. They rather like a god that they can influence with their prayers and donations. Most men and women prefer them as puny and pathetic, as malleable and contradictory, as are they. And by hiding from God, they become like Adam and Chawah in the Garden, desperate to cover up what they had become. This is largely the impetus for erasing Yahowah’s name, distancing themselves from His voice, fleeing his enlightenment, and even for conservative religious apparel.

A god befitting the people is easy enough to make. Humankind has devised millions of them. Get enough people to believe based upon the monumental edifices erected to them and the scriptures attributed to them, and a god is born. They grow in stature by building religions around them, by telling the skeptics that they are going to be tortured in hell and the compliant that they will be rewarded in heaven. The more popular they become, the more godly they appear. Case and point, in Christianity a counterfeit became a god, one no bigger than a man, and one so pathetic, men were able to kill him.

Throughout human history, in every race and place, men and women have shaped their culture and lives around the gods they have fabricated – with the most prevalent being Jesus Christ, Allah, and Hashem. And where there is a false god, the real God is not welcome because He threatens to undermine the faith of believers.

The Yisra*elites of the Exodus, like Christians, Muslims, and Haredim today, wanted a god they could fashion to accommodate them, one who would listen to their prayers, justify their horrid behavior, support their politics, and tell them that they were the only ones who were righteous. The religious have had no interest in learning what pleases Yahowah, listening to Him, or allowing God to make them more like Him by becoming acceptable to Him. Nearly 3,500 years later, nothing has changed.

As a result, the people pleaded with Moseh to intervene, to silence the voice of God and dispatch His fiery light. While that would normally be considered a giant stride back into Mitsraym, even a return to Babel, it is what Yahowah had anticipated. It is the reason He asked Moseh to engage with Him to liberate His people. It is the reason God was revealing the Towrah through this lone individual rather than to 70 or 700,000 people. It is why Dowd was chosen. It is why I am here.

Individuals are few and far between who listen to Yahowah and accept Him on His terms. Fewer still engage, doing as God has instructed. Even over the last score of years, while there are many Covenant members who work with me to publish and promote Yahowah's message, when it comes to the insights derived from these translations, there are only two names on these books ~ Yahowah's and mine. With very few exceptions, this is consistent with the way Yahowah has engaged since these words were spoken 3,470 years ago.

The difference today is that we have a much larger potential audience with billions of eyes and ears rather than hundreds of thousands. The result may, however, be better. For example, if those over 20 represented one third of the 600,000 who left Egypt, the two allowed into the Promised Land after 40 years, is just 1 in 100,000. Given the same forty-year duration, which would include the Shabuw^{ah} and Taruw^{ah} Harvests and the first eight years of the Sukah celebration after our return to the Garden, we will exceed the prior result a hundredfold with a thousand Covenant Members from each of the twelve tribes.

Our goal, of course, will be to achieve this result in collaboration with Yahowah by Taruw^{ah} in 2033, with even greater opportunities provided thereafter. After all, we are representing God, and He is offering His personal guarantee on eternal life, perfection, adoption, and 2×10^{10} enrichment and empowerment. So, it shouldn't require a salesman to give this away.

Nevertheless, Yahowah isn't taking any undue risks. Therefore, the distinction in the way God is communicating today is attributable to the realization that there is so little time remaining for Jews to respond prior to the purification event scheduled for Taruw^{ah} in anticipation of His return with Dowd on Kipurym in 6000 Yah / 2033. Without time for a backup plan should we fail, as the Choter and Nakry, the final Zarowa^{ah} pursuing this harvest has the benefit of the counsel, comprehension, and confidence of the Seven Spirits of Yahowah.

Also interesting, this close to the fulfillment of Shabuw^{ah}, Taruw^{ah}, Kipurym, and Sukah in year 6000 Yah, new prophecy is no longer an option because we are too close to the events that would be disclosed. Therefore, God has chosen to convey what His prior prophets have revealed through this Witness of His choosing. This has the advantage of demonstrating to His people that the answers have been available all along. Further, this approach not only makes Yada's every claim on behalf of Yahowah and Dowd verifiable, and thus credible, this approach provides the opportunity to announce the Nakry's arrival and purpose while at the same time, elucidating his situation by making the Towrah's narratives prophetic of his mission at this time.

Since Ha Nakar is an Observant Foreigner, Yahowah would have to make certain that His Witness is better informed, accurate, and more convincing than the rabbis to prevail with skeptical Yahuwdym. Jews have been trained to distrust gowym and we must flip the tables and explain why it is the rabbis Jews should disavow. Therefore, the evidence must be irrefutable and overwhelming. This is why I have come to understand the Towrah and prophets and they remain blinded, but also why I began by correctly condemning the rabbis for their role in the conception of Christianity, the Diaspora, and Islam.

The vast preponderance of what I'm revealing by analyzing the Towrah wa Nabyym is contrary to accepted religious beliefs. Indeed, most of the insights and conclusions I am sharing are unheralded. This is relevant because there is a prevailing myth stabilizing societies insisting that the popularity of something which is universally upheld must make it true while the conclusions of a lone contrarian are wrong. This is largely how Artificial Intelligence is programed, exacerbating this problem. Therefore, advocating Dowd's role as the Messiah and Son of God fulfilling the Miqraey is challenging, even when it is confirmed by God.

To overcome societal recalcitrance, Yahowah had to intervene, so that for the first time, the central thrust of His message might be understood. Therefore, there are many hundreds of prophetic references to what Yahowah and I are achieving together on behalf of Dowd and Yisrael.

God knows that should we not prevail, neither Israel nor the Earth would survive. Without a meaningful return of Yahuwdym to Yahowah as a result of Yada Yahowah, there would be no way to fulfill any of the remaining Miqra^{ey}, thereby nullifying God's intent and negating the human experience.

Whether it was ^{}Adam or Noach, ^{}Abraham or Ya^aaqob, Shamuw^{el} or Dowd, Zakaryah and then Mal^{aky}, or now with Yada as Ha Nakry, Yahowah has been consistent. With very rare exceptions, He has chosen one or two individuals with whom to engage and through whom to communicate with Yisra^{el} and the world. And He seldom, if ever, works alone.

Yahowah is desirous of reestablishing His Family. He does not want to intimidate us or have anyone worship Him. He is an advocate of freewill and wants nothing more than to be our Father. We approach Him through evidence and reason and by choice, not because He is so visible and loud that He cannot be denied. It is the reason we were created in the first place.

We would be wise to listen to Yahowsha^a ben Nuwn, to Shamuw^{el} and Yasha^{yah}, to Yirma^{yah}, and Howsha^a, as we are to Dowd, but they are not actually comparable. Dowd's life and lyrics go well beyond providing a prophetic narrative regarding the future of Yisra^{el} because he is Yisra^{el} and the living embodiment of the Covenant. He is the Son of God. He is the Shepherd we are afforded the opportunity to follow into the Promised Land. He is our King, once there.

Without Moseh, Yisra^{el} would have become extinct in Mitsraym. Without Dowd, they would have been overcome by their enemies 3,000 years ago and would cease to exist once again should he not return to fulfill Yowm Kipurym.

Dowd is our guide, our mentor, our counselor, and our brother, our Messiah, Shepherd, and King. His words are more prolific than any other. But more than this, Dowd is Yahowah's answer to mankind's problem – the preference of listening to man speak of God rather than directly to God. As the man Yahowah chose and anointed to inspire and enlighten His people, Dowd, is Yahowah's retort to Yisra^{el}'s rejection of His direct intervention. He would interact with and address the wayward nation through the best of them.

Yahowah brought Dowd out of obscurity, raised him above all Yisra*el, and established him as the Mashyach, Ra*ah, Ben, and Melek as well as His *Naby. God placed His words in his mouth – evidence of which we find throughout the Mizmowr and Mashal as he sang these lyrics for our benefit. God's Son followed in his Father's footsteps, doing as Yahowah instructed. And because of this, God is expecting us to know what he wrote for us to read. His words, after all, define the relationship Yahowah wants to achieve.

According to the prophecy, it is essential that we come to recognize and accept Dowd's unique position in the heart of Yahowah's story. The Messiah whose first life became the most meaningful in human history by year 3000 Yah, returned a millennium later to open the door to life and to perfect us in year 4000 Yah. And he will return in year 6000 Yah as our King. He is our Shepherd and has served as the Lamb.

Finding the answer to Moseh's prophecy in Dabarym 18 is not only the most important discovery in the past three millennia, but it was perfectly timed and specifically found for the purpose of calling Yisra*el home through Yada Yahowah while eradicating the plagues of Judaism, Christianity, and Islam. And heretofore, the truth which opens Heaven's Door to enable the Harvests and Homecoming had remained hidden in plain sight – everyone was oblivious to it because the religious had piled centuries of crap over it. The counterfeit Iesou Christou even claims Moseh's prophecy regarding Dowd for himself, becoming part of the con.

Those who do not recognize the Messiah, will not be recognized or accepted by Father and Son. And that is the moral of this story. It is why Yada Yahowah leads through Observations to Coming Home where Dowd's Mashal and Mizmowr are king. It is why I was tasked with clearing away the clutter of the Talmud, New Testament, and Quran in Babel, Twistianity, and God Damn Religion, making straight a raised highway through a lifeless world to Yahowah.

What follows may sound harsh, but these are words the world needs to hear. They are directed at the likes of Peter and Paul, Akiba and Maimonides, Muhammad and Joseph Smith, and even today at the Mother Goddesses, influencers, and conspiratorial types, giving us the means to identify and disregard false prophets.

This is the means I have deployed, and that we should all use, to differentiate between truth and deception. It is why I have such confidence reintroducing Yahowah while heralding Dowd. And it explains why I am so bold in condemning the Talmud, New Testament, and Quran.

“With absolute certainty (ak* – nevertheless, emphasizing the point, and to establish a contrast, notwithstanding this fact), the person who proclaims a message on behalf of a deity (ha naby – a prophet) who deliberately oversteps their bounds and speaks arrogantly and presumptuously, defiantly concocting a rebellious scheme (asher zyd – who has an inflated sense of self-worth, insolently demonstrating self-reliance while being insubordinate, who conceitedly pretends to know, insults others and is disrespectful, displaying pride in the pursuit of personal recognition and acclaim while despising rivals, who intentionally rebels against that which is established and is prone to rage, who seethes with anger and is repeatedly furious, overbearing and rude while insolently promoting their plans (hifil imperfect)) for the express purpose of conveying words (la dabar dabar – for the intent of communicating a message, stating it verbally or in writing (piel infinitive – continually and deliberately, actively and intensely speaking)) under My reputation and designation (*ba shem any – in My renown and name) which (asher eth – implying access and relationship) I have not expressly appointed, taught, authorized, or directed him (lo tsawah huw – I have not provided the instruction to him, I have not assigned, constituted, decreed, prescribed, or ordained this for him, deliberately and demonstrably making him My understudy and sending him out as My messenger (piel perfect)) to (la) convey (dabar – to speak and communicate), or (wa) who (asher*) speaks (dabar – conveys a message) in the name (ba shem – in the designation or reputation) of other and additional (acher* – different and subsequent) gods (elohym*), then (wa) that prophet (ha naby ha huw – that individual who proclaims a message on behalf of that presumed deity) is actually deadly (muwth – he is literally devoid of life and is genuinely destructive, he is murderous, and while he will die, his death will not be permanent (qal perfect – the meaning is not nuanced or hypothetical, but real, and while his death will not be the end of his existence, there will be a cure for his plague)).” (Dabarym / Words / Deuteronomy 18:20)

When I began this mission with Yahowah on *Yowm Taruw*ah* | Day of the Herald in 2001, other than recognizing God wanted me to engage with Him and write these books, I had no idea of what lay ahead. I had thought I’d be anonymous and that it would be triumph enough to discern and reintroduce

Yahowah's name to the people who had erased it twenty-five centuries ago. Little did I know that we would compose forty books and spend over one-hundred thousand hours together advancing what can be known about God.

We had collaborated over a decade before it became apparent that Yahowah had no interest in me remaining anonymous. And that transition, which began with the realization that I was the Choter of Proverbs 14 and Isaiah 11 as well as the Nakry of Deuteronomy 29 and 2 Chronicles 6, was difficult to swallow. It meant that I would be thrust into the spotlight and have a target on my head. Nothing would ever be the same. But, as I have learned, when we commit our lives to Yahowah, we do as He requests – not out of obedience, but out of desire. I was committed to going where His words lead – even if that were to a place no one had been before.

Then it happened. I had sensed it almost a decade earlier. I had even mentioned it to my wife, and ever so quietly to Yahowah. Could it be that Dowd was the Passover Lamb?

Up to this point, realizing that there were serious issues with the Gospels, and even more with Paul's letters, I had tried to resolve the problem of Jesus being God and of men killing God, by renaming Mr. Christ ha Mashyach Yahowsha[®]. I envisioned Yahowah animating his body with His soul, much like an avatar. But why would Yahowah consent to allowing those He created torture the body His soul occupied? How could God's nepesh be associated with our guilt when He is perfect or go to the place of separation from Himself? Even then, the notion that the Father became His own son to fulfill Firstborn Children was incomprehensible and disconcerting. Equally as troubling, changing names from Greek to Hebrew did nothing to change the realization the New Testament was rotten from inception to conclusion.

None of these issues remain, however, if Dowd is the Son of God and Messiah who fulfilled the Spring Miqra[®]ey. And at that point, it was perfectly acceptable, even highly recommended, that I continue my irrefutable assault on the Christian New Testament ~ a systematic denunciation of the text now presented in the five volumes of Twistianity.

If I were right about Dowd, wouldn't that mean he would have been crucified on Passover as is depicted in the 22nd Psalm, making it autobiographical? Under this circumstance he would have fulfilled the Miqra* of Matsah, carrying our guilt into She*owl. And as the one God declared as His Firstborn Son, he was the perfect choice to facilitate the promise of Firstborn Children.

Even though it all fit, I still couldn't bring myself to say so publicly because I didn't understand why God would allow His beloved to endure such a thing. And there is no way for it to have occurred without Dowd volunteering. How was that even possible, I wondered.

On the cusp of the greatest of all discoveries, it was while completing the 3rd volume of Coming Home that I saw something no one had seen before. Dowd had volunteered. He was the one who convinced Yahowah that it was right decision for everyone involved. And God agreed.

It was all there, hidden in the moods which express volition in Hebrew, both in first and second person. Dowd chose to endure crucifixion and a journey into She*owl. But why?

If I could answer that question, it would become the single greatest discovery of my life, of any life actually. But to get from where I was, where the world is still ensnared, to where I am, indeed, where Father and Son are, I would have to determine how Dowd managed to come to the realization that he was the right person to make these sacrifices. Even more, I would need to know why, considering the agony he would suffer, that he wanted to go through with it.

I found the first of those answers in the Towrah as Abraham and Yitschaq met with Yahowah during what served as the harbinger for Passover. Dowd's place in God's story was not only reconfirmed in Dabarym 18, but also in the great prophecy of 2 Shamuw^el 7, where Dowd, as God's Son, returns as King of Forever. Then, considering what Dowd had read of Moseh's struggles, and assessing his own, he knew that apart from something extraordinary, his people were impossible to lead. So, by fulfilling the Spring Miqra^ey and facilitating the benefits of the Covenant, he realized that he would garner their respect forevermore. Well, that is, if they became aware of what he had done. And that is where my role suddenly becomes paramount.

I had discovered and even proven that it was in his second of three lives that the Messiah and Son of God served as the Passover Lamb. He had been crucified just as he had explained in the 22nd Psalm a thousand years in advance of enduring the pain. Then he carried our guilt into She^{*}owl on Matsah to enable our adoption into the Covenant on Bikuwrym.

Of course, this meant that there was no Jesus, and that Mr. Christ was nothing more than a crude counterfeit of the actual Messiah and Son of God. Oh my. Imagine being aware that the religion of 2.5 billion people bore no resemblance to reality. I was sure to be perceived as their enemy, even as I sought to save them from an obvious lie.

Could any man endure the wrath of billions? Moseh and Dowd crumbled under the assault of their kin. This message would be as popular as it was for Yahowah when He spoke directly to the Children of Yisra^{*}el at the base of Choreb and they told Him to shut up and go away ~ they never wanted to see Him again. So, how would a Gowy survive an even more menacing gauntlet?

Evidently with a sense of humor, and wanting to prove it could be done, even with unskilled labor, had become the reason Yahowah had not only asked me to work with Him a score and four years ago, it was why I could not be anonymous anymore. God would prove His point. Making He and His Son known prior to the harvests would facilitate their return. The Covenant could be restored and Yisra^{*}el would be reconciled. Our return to the Garden was now possible, even inevitable.

I suspect that this was the reason Dowd had spoken of the Choter, introducing him, three-thousand years ago. He even set the context, reveling in the details. He had been shown that the most diabolical plot that would be deployed to thwart the restoration of his role as our Savior would come from an exceptionally stupid woman who would rise to prominence by ruthlessly attacking his Herald's wife who is exceptionally chakamowth. Dowd will take it from there...

“The wisest and most astute (chakamowth – the thoughtful and prudent, properly instructed and learned, the most knowledgeable and perceptive (a plural adjective)) of women (ishahym* – of females (plural)), she builds up and establishes (banah – she creates and constructs, she restores and reestablishes, she perpetuates and fortifies, she makes abundantly prosperous (qal perfect third-person feminine singular)) her home and family (*beyth hy – her house and household, extended family and tribe (both singular)).

While (wa) the foolishly conniving woman (iweleth* – the impious seeking preeminence who is averse to understanding and thoughtlessly quarrelsome, being evil and stupid (feminine singular)), she tears it down and is ousted from it (*haras hy – she tries to break it apart to destroy it (qal imperfect energetic nun third-person feminine singular)) by her own hands (*ba yad hy – through her influence (singular feminine individual)).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:1)

Dowd's introduction not only paints a prophetic picture of our current situation, it reinforces the value of chakamowth | being thoughtful and astute, discerning and perceptive. He contrasts these productive attributes which serve to reestablish and build up Yahowah's Covenant Family with the destructive nature of being iweleth* | thoughtlessly quarrelsome and conniving, leading to haras | breaking apart and ousting family members.

The reason that I have concluded that Bamidbar and Dabarym 12 and Mashal 14 and Mizmowr 35 are prophetic of our situation is not only are they completely analogous, they all include an ode to a contentious and embittered woman threatening the wife of Yahowah's chosen implement – the one conveying His message to His people. And yet, after this ploy is introduced in Numbers 12 and here in the 14th Proverb, nothing more is said regarding the wives or the nature of their disagreement. The narratives turn immediately to Yahowah's instructions regarding the conveyors of His Qowl | Voice and why it is imprudent to quarrel or compete with them.

This is important because Yahowah wants those speaking for Him to have some empathy for what Israel has done to Him – with the ultimate insiders to the Covenant turning against Him and slandering Him. Therefore, Abraham, Ya^aaqob, Moseh, Dowd, and now Yada, have all experienced the nasty antagonism and unfathomable vitriol that comes from fractured families. But beyond being in a position to appreciate the consequence of embittered insider rebellions, without the emergence of the psychotic Mother Goddess Cult, I never would have seen the narrative in Numbers as prophetic nor fully understood so many other prophecies pertaining to our situation. So, even in upheaval, there are valuable lessons to learn.

Here we are afforded another affirmation of the synergy between the two presentations of the Choter because, immediately after revealing that the Ruwach of Yahowah would support him, we find that he would be given the Spirit of Chakmah | Wisdom. So here, chakamowth addresses that the many things associated with chakmah are germane to building up and restoring the Covenant Family because without chakmah | considerable intelligence, there is no Yada Yahowah, which is the product of an inquisitive and thoughtful mind.

Turns out, many of those who perceived that they were Covenant based upon a shallow interpretation of what Yada had written, were overcome by jealousy and beguiled into rebellion. And according to haras, they have written themselves out of God's story and are no longer part of the Covenant Family. As the Children of Yisra^{*}el have demonstrated and Miryam proved, once Covenant, not always Covenant. The door swings both ways. And whereas intelligent analysis is welcome, conniving foolishness shuts the door.

With the stage set and Family instructed, Dowd turns to the man of the hour...

“He who walks (huw^{} halak* – the one who moves (masculine singular)) with integrity in what he knows to be right (ba yosher huw^{}* – with credibility in a straightforward and honest manner, never wavering), respects and reveres (yare^{}* – admires and appreciates) Yahowah (Yahowah).

But the devious one, having departed by misleading others along an errant path (wa luwz huw^{} derek huw^{} – those who are lost, those whose way is perverted and corrupt with their own twists and turns) disregards and shows contempt for H/him (bazah huw^{}*).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:2)

In Yasha^{*}yah’s subsequent testimony, the Choter would be afforded the Spirit of Wisdom, he was prescribed the Spirit of Understanding and of Knowledge so that he would be discerning, knowing right from wrong – as is the case here. In addition, the Choter is offered the Spirit of Reverence for Yahowah in Isaiah 11, serving as the final ruwach ascribed to the author of the Nes | Banner. As a result, he would be the one who would reintroduce Yahowah to His people, telling them the truth about their God.

Yasha^{*}yah had a lot to say regarding the overall disregard and disdain God’s chosen implement would suffer at the hands of those who oppose him – especially those who disrespect the wise woman who shares his home. My wife has been the object of repulsive ire, far worse than Miryam perpetrated against Moseh’s wife when she was rebuked and ostracized from the community for claiming to speak for God. Therefore, this remains an auspicious and prophetic beginning to Dowd’s ode to the Choter.

My wife is not only a Yahuwd, but, as I have shared, a particularly wise one. We exchanged studious emails once or twice a week on Towrah topics for ten years before we met. And so, ours was a meeting of the minds, an arranged marriage of intellect, one that a devious woman has used to assail the Choter's credibility, just as did her counterparts in Miryam and Aharown to Moseh as recorded in Numbers 12. And frankly, the hideousness of these verbal assaults, and the frequency of them, is so vociferous and shrill that it's easy to see why they have earned numerous prophetic rebukes.

Should this rebellion by a woman who falsely claims that she also speaks for God be disturbing to you, I would encourage the opposite response. Human families are typically fractured, and so we should expect the same with many of those seeking the prestige and benefits of the Covenant. This is why the Towrah prophetically presents the embittered rebellion against Moseh in this manner, forearming the Choter so that he knows how to handle the situation and use it as a teaching opportunity to expose and condemn the foolish and quarrelsome individual trying to tear it down with her own hands. Dowd received the same treatment from his family, from wives to sons.

Noting that it goes with the territory since Moseh, Dowd, and Yada have been wrongly renounced by insiders who should have known better, it is possible, even likely, that the one being disrespected by the conniving woman seeking preeminence is the Choter. This conclusion is reinforced by the fact that she and her malevolent gang give lip service to their Mommy God while relentlessly and ruthlessly disparaging me.

This leads us to the intent of the Choter...

“Against the mouths and pronouncements (ba peh – upon the speech in the here and now at the end) of the foolishly stupid, the belligerently stubborn, and irrationally corrupt (ewyl* – of the simpleton who beguiles a group of idiots who fail to comprehend, of the ignorant and irrational mocking the truth by promoting deceptions, of the argumentative and licentious who are averse to understanding, as well as against unethical governments, citizenry, and institutions), a Choter | the Rod of Divine Justice, the Stem off the Main Branch, a Productive Sucker from the Fallen Stump (Choter – a sucker growing out of the rootstock or stump of an abandoned olive tree, giving it new life) will rise and roar majestically from the surging waters, triumphantly opposing and agitating (*ga*awah* – will arise to become a highly exalted and excellent counterbalance, an effective influence, performing magnificently on behalf of the Almighty).

And so, the language (wa saphah – the lips) of the one who learns, who comes to understand, and then teaches (chakam) will focus on what he observes (shamar hem).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:3)

Dowd presents the Choter rising up against the pronouncements of the stubbornly corrupt and those they beguile. He is a tool to be wielded against the ignorant and irrational of his day, and particularly in opposition to the political and religious, the conspiratorial and antisemitic. His style is to roar rather than whimper or whine. He will rise to the occasion rather than shirk responsibility. He is an agitator, not a conciliator. And in these ways, he will triumph according to his King.

There are insights associated with *ga*awah* | rising and roaring majestically from the surging waters that I am just now able to absorb. This means that Dowd knew my fate a few thousand years before I would endure it. I say this because in my preferred lexicon, the primary definition of *ga*awah* is “surging water,” followed by “majestically, gloriously, and triumphantly,” while others lead with “roaring” and “rising.” The related *ga*al* speaks of a “redeemer” and *ga*aul* denotes “redemption and restoration.”

I am pointing this out to not only reveal how Dowd had used this word in his Mizmowr (Psalm 46:3 and 68:35), but also to demonstrate something of great significance. The Choter, who serves as the Bull in the 14th Proverb and in the 11th chapter of Isaiah, will have a torrent of cleansing waters rise up and roar beneath his sacrifice on the Temple Mount on Taruw^oah to purge the final remnant of their guilt. When combined with ElYah's oratory and the soaring flames Yahowah will ignite for the occasion, these dancing waters will comprise the Greatest Show on Earth.

Dowd would elaborate, saying...

As a direct result, it is assured that (al ken) we will not be anxious or frightened (lo yare*) by the terrorizing of the Earth (ba muwr *erets), with the toppling (wa ba mowth) of the mountains (harym), nor the judgment of the sea (ba leb yam). (Mizmowr 46:2)

They will roar like the sound of crashing waves (hamah), these warm waters boiling up and bubbling (chamar mayim huw*) as the mountains flourish with an abundant harvest (ra^oash harym) in conjunction with the majestic and triumphant rise of his surging waters (ba ga^oawah huw*). Pause and reflect on the implications (selah). (Mizmowr 46:3)

A river of light (nahar) whose outpouring is channeled and whose route flows (pheleg huw*) is cause to rejoice (samach) for the City of God (*iy^o *elohym), this set-apart (qodesh) Tabernacle (mishkan) for *elyown | the Manifestation of the Hand and Influence of God (*elyown). (Mizmowr 46:4)

God is in her midst (elohym ba qereb hy). Never will she [the City of God] be shaken or moved (mowt). God (*elohym),

He will come to her aid and will support her (azar hy) in the presence of the caring and attentive Bull when he is sacrificed as the morning dawns (la paneh boqer). (Mizmowr 46:5)

People of the nations, these Gentiles (gowym), groan loudly and lament tumultuously, snarling and angry (hamah). The kingdoms and empires (mamlakah) are staggered and shaken as they fail and fall (mowt). He offers as a gift (nathan) with His Qowl | Voice (ba qowl huw*) to melt the Earth (muwg *erets). (Mizmowr 46:6)

Yahowah of the vast array of spiritual implements (Yahowah tsaba*) is with us (*im *anachnuw). A secure shelter for us (misgab la *anachnuw) is the God of Ya*aqob (*elohym Ya*aqob). Pause and reflect on this (selah). (Mizmowr 46:7)

You should choose to walk (halak) and of your own volition behold, gazing upon and observing (chazah) the work accomplished by Yahowah (mipha*al Yahowah).

For the benefit of the relationship (*asher), He has caused (sym) devastating desolations (shamah) on the Earth (ba ha *erets). (Mizmowr 46:8)

He will bring an end to wars on the Shabat (shabat milchamah) throughout the ends of the Earth (*ad qaseh ha *erets).

He will forever break the bow (qeshet shabar) and He will take away the spear (wa qatsats chanyth). Mobile vehicles of war, He will burn with fire (*agalah saraph ba ha *esh). (Mizmowr 46:9)

You should choose to relax and relent, and let it sink in (raphah), and of your own volition decide, knowing, realizing, and understanding (yada*), that indeed, as a sign of allegiance and by comparison (ky), I am God (*anoky *elohym). I will be on high, exalted, and honored (ruwm) by the Gowym | non-Yisra*elites (ba ha gowym). I will always be raised up and honored (ruwm) throughout the Earth (ba ha

erets*). (Mizmowr 46:10)

Yahowah of the vast array of spiritual implements (*Yahowah tsaba) is with us (im anachnuw). A secure shelter for us (*misgab la anachnuw) is the God of Ya*aqob (elohym Ya*aqob*). Pause and reflect on the implications (selah)." (Mizmowr / Psalm 46:11)

I am typically reluctant to venture this deeply into supporting texts, especially when reviewing a prophecy of such importance as found in Dowd's 14th Mashal | Word Picture. But in this case, it proved essential to our appreciation of what our King was conveying, particularly with the Choter *ga*awah* – rising to roar majestically from the surging waters, triumphantly opposing and agitating to become an esteemed and excellent counterbalance, an effective influence who will perform magnificently on behalf of the Almighty.

This one word led us to an extraordinary prophetic narration of the fulfillment of Chag Sukah, beginning with the Taruw*ah Gleaning. In the end, Yahowah will be our shelter as we celebrate our return to the protected and sheltered Garden of Eden on Sukah | Shelters in year 6000 Yah / the Shabat of October 7th, 2033. It is then that God will engage to enable this result, as He and His Son return on Kipurym. This realization turns the 46th Mizmowr | Song into a portrait reflecting our future. It is a summation of what will occur over the next seven years.

Our King and prophet revealed that Israel will endure a time of unfathomable tsarah | troubles. The most anguishing and horrifying seven years in human history will, however, serve a purpose, because this is when Yahuwdym will rediscover Yahowah, experiencing God for the first time in several millennia. Many, as a result, will be reaped in the Taruw*ah Laqat, an event scheduled for the Friday evening of September 23rd, 2033.

Knowing in advance that this will occur, receptive Yisra*elites can rest assured that they will survive a period when all the Earth is terrorized. These religious and political militants will claim even the mountains of God – Moriah and Olives – as they flood into Yaruwshalaim as a raging sea of gowym. But Yahowah has a plan, and it is about to unfold.

His waters will also roar, drowning out the screaming terrorists. And they will be warm and caressing as they bubble up from beneath the Temple Mount. Olives and Moriah will flourish again, producing an abundant harvest. And this is in conjunction with the *ga*awah* | majestic roar of the surging waters, triumphantly opposing and agitating to become an esteemed and excellent counterbalance. The scene will be so awe-inspiring, the returning King encourages us to pause and contemplate the implications.

Then addressing what he witnessed on the eve of Taruw*ah as the sun sets on a Friday evening, Dowd describes a nahar pheleg | river of light channeled in a way that causes those in the City of God – Yaruwshalaim – to rejoice at long last. He is addressing the Taruw*ah Gleaning of Yisra*elites. Also visible in the scene is the mishkan | Tabernacle which has been erected for the Witnesses and to protect the Ark of the Covenant. Along with Dowd, they project the Elyown* | Influence of God at this moment in time.

So let it be known ~ our God will dispatch His elyown* to His Set-Apart City. He will come to help His people. And as usual, God is not alone. At this moment, the sunrise on the Shabat of the 24th of September in 2033, Father and Son will share their stage with a Boqer | Bull, one considered sufficiently caring and attentive to sacrifice his body on this auspicious day for the benefit of the Shepherd's Flock. And that's particularly noteworthy since Dowd is about to reintroduce this same Bull into his presentation of the Choter in the 14th Mashal | Word Picture.

The fulfillment of Taruw*ah will be the most extraordinary event in human history. After the final Gleaning of the Covenant Family on Friday evening, Yahowah will dispatch four chariots, two of which will bring a remnant of receptive Yisra^{*}elites into Yaruwshalaim along with selected Gowym. And as they bathe in the warm waters surging from beneath the Tabernacle, the people of the nations who have come to plunder Israel will lament the turn of events. The religious, political, conspiratorial, and militant opposition will snarl angrily as they are staggered and fall before God. His Qowl | Voice will incinerate all traces of them and their equipment as the earth melts around them.

All the while, Yahowah will protect His people, preparing them to celebrate Sukah by reestablishing the conditions of the Garden as the Earth is transformed into Eden. If ever there was a time to behold the work of our God and to walk to Him and with Him, this is that day.

Unknown to most, but not to Dowd, Yahowah must eliminate all traces of religion, politics, conspiracy, militarism, antisemitism, and antagonism from the Earth for us be joyful in His Garden – and He will. Therefore, at this moment, anyone not cleansed by the waters flowing off of Mowryah during the sacrifice of the Bull will be expunged from the Earth. This day, the Shabat of Taruw^{*}ah in year 6000 Yah, will bring an end to war. The bow and spear will be no more. Weapons will be incinerated.

As this is occurring, the Messiah who is looking on and anticipating his return in ten days, is encouraging his people to relax and let God prepare His people for the ensuing Family Reunion. This will be the Greatest Show on Earth, and he wants that to sink in. And in particular, the King wants everyone to relent regarding Yada because he has been the one most devoted to sharing an awareness and knowledge of God and of His work on this day.

What's especially interesting at this point is that since Yahowah specifically equates Dowd with elyown* | all things pertaining to the influence of God upon his return on Kipurym, it is apparent to me that our King, representing Yahowah, is the one who we will exalt and honor upon his arrival. Extraordinary, indeed.

This, my friends, is how we learn and grow with God. We make the connections between things, in this case facilitated by ga^aawah, to transition from knowing to understanding. It is only now that we have a more complete understanding as to why Dowd and Yasha^ayah devoted entire chapters to the Choter and why both equated him with the Bull sacrificed for the wellbeing of the people on Taruw^aah to usher in the King's triumphant return.

With such a profoundly impactful prophetic message deduced from Dowd's accompanying lyrics elucidating his Word Picture regarding the Choter, I'd like to reinforce my conclusions by representing the King's lyrics for your consideration...

“God is for us, a shelter (elohym la anachnuw machseh), an empowering fortification (*wa oz), a helpful influence (ezrah*) in trouble, the most calamitous and anguishing of circumstances (ba tsarah). (Mizmowr 46:10)

Yahowah of the vast array of spiritual implements (Yahowah tsaba ♫) is with us (im anachnuw). A secure shelter for us (*misgab la anachnuw) is the God of Ya*aqob (elohym Ya*aqob*). Pause and reflect on the implications (selah).” (Mizmowr / Psalm 46:11)

We have witnessed Future History play out before our eyes. The stage is now properly set to more fully appreciate the King’s ode to his Herald, the Choter. And since this has been quite the adventure into tomorrow, let’s return to where Dowd commenced, and pick up the trail of the Choter from the outset before we move on...

“The wisest and most astute, properly instructed and intelligent (chakamowth) of women (ishahym*), she builds up, restores, and establishes (banah) her home and family (*beyth hy). While (wa) the foolishly conniving woman seeking preeminence who is averse to understanding and thoughtlessly quarrelsome, being evil and stupid (iweleth*), she tears it down and is ousted from it (*haras hy) by her own influence (*ba yad hy). (Mashal 14:1)

He who walks (huw halak*) with integrity in what he knows to be right, credible and honest, never wavering (*ba yosher huw), respects and reveres (*yare) Yahowah (Yahowah). But the devious one, having departed by misleading others along an errant path (wa luwz huw derek huw) disregards and shows contempt for him (*bazah huw). (Mashal 14:2)

Against the mouths and pronouncements (ba peh) of the foolishly stupid, the belligerently stubborn, and irrationally

corrupt, these simpletons who beguile a group of idiots (*ewyl), a Choter | the Rod of Divine Justice, the Stem off the Main Branch, a Productive Sucker from the Fallen Stump (Choter) will rise and roar majestically from the surging waters, triumphantly opposing and agitating to become an esteemed and excellent counterbalance, an effective influence performing magnificently on behalf of the Almighty (ga*awah).

And so, the language (wa saphah) of the one who learns, who comes to understand, and then teaches (chakam) will focus on what he observes (shamar hem).” (Mashal / Proverbs 14:3)

Digging deeper, it is worth noting that when combatting corrupting influences, the Choter is not only a rod of divine justice, he becomes a productive branch off of the Tree of Knowledge when sharing what he has learned. His forte will be the spoken word, which are jewels to be examined and shared, affirming that Yahowah was serious about the transition from writing to speaking.

As this portrait implies, the Choter would learn at a formidable pace, come to understand more than most, and then teach with a passion for educating, freely sharing what he has discovered. And in this regard, before turning on the studio lights, looking into the cameras, and roaring into the surrounding microphones, I would come to embody all we had discovered along the way. After two decades of study, I had become the embodiment of the books we had composed.

In Dowd’s Mashal | Word Picture, we see the Choter following in the footsteps of the Prophets. They would enlighten and motivate him such that he would learn their lessons and follow their example in condemning what is wrong while revealing and affirming what is right. He would excoriate the immorality and irrationality so pervasive in social media while at the same time, being fruitful by calling God’s people home.

It was expected for the Choter to oppose the religious and political, just as I'm doing today. My weapons would be words wisely wielded. And in this way, Dowd leads us right back to chakam – the primary attribute that sets the Choter apart from those he must oppose. Reinforcing Yada's Nakar | Observant Foreigner depiction, Dowd reveals that the Choter will be especially observant.

Although initially, I missed a lot of the subtleties along the way. I remained largely unaware of my role as the eleph* | Productive and Showr | Observant Bull prior to the introduction to the Parah by Yasha'yah in conjunction with the Choter and again with Taruw'ah in the 11th and 17th chapters of Isaiah as well as in Numbers 15 and 19. But now that we know, we can better appreciate Dowd's transition from Choter | Branch to eleph* | Bull...

“Without the eleph* | Learned and Productive Bull who increases a thousandfold (*ba *ayn eleph – an abundantly prolific and industrious bovine; from alaph* – to learn, becoming so familiar with the lesson the student owns the material and can teach it without hesitation or equivocation when prompted), the manger and crib (ebuws* – the nursery where the flock is fed) would be empty (bar).

And yet (wa), a large, great, productive, and abundant (rab – a widespread and plentiful, even impressive) Tabuw'ah | Harvest will be Derived and Produced (tabuw'ah – yielded and gained of great value to provide a tremendous increase through a very productive ingathering) by the authority and capability, the empowerment and effort (ba koach – through the qualifications and resources) of this Showr | Observant Bull (shuwr – of the thoughtful and responsive bovine on this journey who processes what he sees to comprehend and then cares enough to help others).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:4)

This is wonderful because the Choter is the adamah Parah* | the Bloody Red Man of the Earth who is a Productive Bull on Taruw'ah to purge the remnant of Yisra'el for Dowd's Kipurym

return. Also, as the *Zarowa, he is responsible for cultivating the Shabuw*ah and Taruw*ah Harvests bringing the Covenant Family Home. And here we find Dowd affirming that the Bull will be successful, even prolific, producing a harvest that is a thousandfold what would have occurred otherwise. Further, he will do as I have done, which is to alaph* | learn, becoming so familiar with the instructions that he comes to own the material, then teaching it without hesitation or equivocation when prompted.

Immensely intimidating while also tremendously reassuring, in these words, the Son of God was inspired to reveal that without our collaboration, the crib containing the Children of God, and manger for Dowd's flock, would be empty. That is to say, there would be no Shabuw*ah Qatsyr or Taruw*ah Laqat, nor would there be a Family Reunion on Kipurym without the Choter – this tenacious Bull of Yah. This, therefore, ranks high among the most vital prophecies regarding our purpose that we have read. It's little wonder God is so protective of His coworker and so insistent in revealing his identity to the world at this time.

Therefore, there should be no question that this Mashal | Word Picture was written to reinforce the essential nature of our collaboration. Without the Choter, there would be no harvests, no Covenant Family, no reason for Yahowah to return. There would be no Kingdom of Dowd, no restoration of the mortal remnant, and no celebrating Sukah in Eden. As big deals go, this rivals the most important in the human experience.

I realize that the translation of “manger” and “crib” from ebuws*, while accurate, was inappropriately usurped by Twistians to dramatize their holiday pageants. Nevertheless, it is the Choter, acting in the role of a Bull, who is responsible for this one-thousandfold increase in the quantity and quality of newborn babes in the Covenant's crib, especially as a result of him cultivating the harvests and then providing the sacrifice on Taruw*ah.

Even recognizing that King Dowd just stated that without the Bullish Choter, the Covenant's Crib would be barren, and that there would be no sheep in his Manger, we must not overly credit the Messiah's Herald. Apart from what Yahowah does with him and through him, Yada is just a flawed fellow, an inadequate gentleman striving to fulfill his purpose.

And yet, even though Yahowah does His best work using flawed implements, in the Choter's case, God gave me every advantage. Such is the purpose of the Seven Spirits and of chakmah in particular. It is only by working together that we produce rab tabuw^{ah} | an abundant harvest, both widespread and plentiful, even of great value.

In this regard, Dowd is speaking of the Mow^{edym} | Restoring Witnesses of the Promise of the Shabuw^{ah} | Seven Shabat and Yowm Taruw^{ah} | the Day of the Herald. Therefore, we are reminded that the Choter is operating on Yahowah's authority, empowered and enabled by His Spirit. And that notwithstanding, Yada the Bull will be industrious, putting in the effort to prevail.

Making sure we wouldn't miss the connection between the Adamah Parah and the eleph | Learned and Productive Bull who increases a thousandfold, our King speaks of a Showr | Observant Bull, who is thoughtful and responsive. He knew these things because Dowd, as a prophet, saw the events as foretold by Yasha^{yah} and Zakaryah in advance of the others. The Choter has been afforded two additional titles – and there would be more.

Speaking of these titles, I'd like to nip another nonsensical notion in the bud. The Mother Goddess cult is now featuring on their We-Hate-Craig-and-Trash-YadaYahowah sites a Chat Bot review of Isaiah 11. It / they claim that I cannot be the Choter because he's the Messiah or Christ. But how is that possible when Christ never existed and the Messiah is writing about him serving as a Bull who increases the cradle of the Covenant a thousandfold? Dowd is the Tsemach | Main Branch, not a Choter | Stem, and he's a Ram and a Lamb, but never a Bull.

The intent of this mission is to serve as an ed* | Restoring Witness to the Eternal Testimony...

“As a trustworthy and reliable (emuwn* – a dependable and honest, a steadfast and credible) ed* | Restoring Witness to the Eternal Testimony (ed* – source of reestablishing evidence), he will never intentionally communicate that which is not true (lo kazab* – he will not be proven a liar nor will he deceive, he will not engage in or encourage worship of any kind and he will curtail the devotion to false gods, religious delusions, and errant opinions).

And yet (wa) a false and misleading (sheqer – a deceptive and irrational, mistaken and useless) witness (ed* – person who testifies) pours out a torrent (puwach – speaks as a blowhard) of lies and delusions (kazab – of false information and pagan deceptions, encouraging the worship of and devotion to false gods).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:5)

Speaking from experience, it has been this way from the beginning. Over the course of 24 years and 25,000 pages of translations, explanations, commentary, insights, and revelations, the overwhelming preponderance have been accurate from the outset, while some have been refined over time. As I have learned more from Yah, I have reliably conveyed what He has communicated, gradually putting the entire picture together from beginning to end.

This review of Mashal | Proverbs 14 is a perfect example of that process. My previous translations and conclusions were accurate, but incomplete. And that is because I had not yet discovered some of the interwoven prophecies Yahowah has layered into His script, particularly regarding the many titles and designations He has chosen for the key players such as the King and his Herald. I simply had no idea of the extent the Prophets had foretold of the role God would ask the Choter and Nakry to play in the awakening and redemption of His people.

It was not until recently that, while updating and augmenting the Qatsyr ~ Harvests volume of Yada Yahowah that I came to more fully understand the process and timing associated with Shabuw^oah and particularly Taruw^oah, where the Bull is the star attraction with *EiYah serving as the Master of Ceremonies for what will be the Greatest Show on Earth. And now, after my more recent and thorough investigation into the words Yasha^oyah was inspired to convey, I can more accurately convey the intent of Proverbs 14 from Dowd's perspective. This is not only the Messiah's introduction to Isaiah 11, it is specifically prophetic of what will occur in the years leading up to his arrival.

Recognizing that there were two olive trees depicted in the Zakaryah 4, one on either side of Yahowah's Luminary, we discover that one of those olives was identified in Mal^oaky. As one of the two Witnesses, *EiYah would have completed the first phase of his work 400 years prior to Mal^oaky's accounting of him. The other witness, however, wouldn't arrive for a couple of millennia. By contrast, Dowd's Mashal was written a century prior to *EiYah's sarcastic anti-religious soliloquy. So, the Messiah's focus wasn't on the Goat, but instead the Bull.

And as it would transpire, there would be only one of him, pitting the Choter against many naysayers. That appears why the reference to the emuwn* | credible and truthful ed* | Restoring Witness is masculine singular while his foes are many. He is here to challenge a vast armada of false and misleading influencers pouring out a torrent of lies and delusions, false information, religious deceptions, and political misconceptions. So once again, it appears as if someone else has been peering over my shoulder as I fight for what is right in social media, particularly on X, Facebook, and YouTube as we build an audience for the Yahowah Vlog.

As we move forward, there is a difference between telling the truth supported by God's testimony and engaging in babel | where fact and fiction are deliberately intermingled to confuse. The disparity is considerable, quite literally, life and death. But the whole truth, that which is by design, reliable, requires diligence and judgment – things that scoffers and babblers seldom deploy. Those who are derisive regarding Yahowah and Yahuwdym quote-mine, as do conspiratorialists. They lack chakmah, which is a systematic and rational pursuit of the truth by knowing how to deduce right from wrong, fact from fiction.

“A scoffer (lets – a derisive and babbling ridiculer and a boastful speaker) intermittently seeks (baqash) expertise and erudition (chakmah – wisdom and the technical skills perceived necessary to comprehend religious affairs) but there is none (*wa ayn).

Understanding based upon knowledge (*wa da*ath* – perceptiveness and discernment) is not burdensome (qalal – is relatively swift and easy) for the Byn | One who Derives the Proper Connections to Understand (la byn – for the one who gives his full attention to the process and then seeks to teach what he has learned, all with a sense of joy).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:6)

Deriding is easy, as is ridiculing. Any babbler can do it. Some even have followings in the millions in the largely perverted realm of social media where stupid is exceedingly popular. However, the distance between expertise leading to erudition and the delusions of derisive opinions is galactic. They are like garbage trucks and beams of light headed in opposite directions.

Regarding the ease of understanding, if that was the intent of Dowd’s message, we may differ somewhat. Either that, or I’m a slow study. And should that be the case, by comparison, the religious and political have never made it past kindergarten.

In our situation, a torrent of profoundly important and previously unheralded insights were derived, some right at the outset of these investigations, but most were the result of a relentless pursuit of knowledge and understanding. And there has been very little that I would categorize as qalal | swift and easy. That said, my King and I concur that nothing has been qalal | burdensome. I would even go so far as to agree that once the byn | proper connections are made, understanding is the direct result.

From this perspective, I would surmise that the three Zarowa® – Moseh, Dowd, and Yada – are quite similar in that our minds naturally seek to find and assess the common denominators which enable comprehension, using probability and statistical analysis as tools in this quest. These are contributing factors in God choosing us, allowing us to show others that, with effort, understanding is possible.

And speaking of seeking the common denominator, this is the third of what will be four occurrences where Dowd refers to chakmah in his linguistic portrait of the Choter. Turns out, it was an essential attribution and prophetic warning. Our King was not only privy to the introductory term deployed in Yasha®yah's presentation written three centuries thereafter, with both prophets depicting the Choter as unusually intelligent and discerning, Dowd was foreshadowing the transitional moment in my life when I would go from writer to speaker at Yahowah's behest.

It was a misinterpretation of chakmah as a “Spiritual Mother” in Dowd's 8th Mashal | Proverb that prompted the inception of the YAHOWAH BLOG as my social media manager, publisher, and webmaster all bolted to pursue such nonsense. While their chakmah | erudition was sorely lacking, this is the word which charted a new course – one that will serve Dowd's interests.

Confronted with mental madness from people who had previously appeared sober, I turned to Yahowah for elucidation, recognizing that He epitomized chakmah. I asked Him for advice and His response was to change everything but the message as portrayed through the translations throughout the books. Going forward, He asked me to replace the prior players with a new team, changing the stylized lion to the modern Manowrah logo. We would proceed with YAHOWAH branding, new covers, a new website, and we would start over in social media, which would now feature livestreamed videos as He requested.

After 23 years of writing sunrise to sunset, and without having produced a single video or posted a word edgewise in social media, I went from neophyte to maven at Yahowah's behest. Within days, our audience had grown a hundred, then thousandfold. The content would be compelling and extensive.

Per Yahowah's request, His Covenant Family walked away from, severing all ties with, those who were now working contrary to His instructions...

“You should choose to walk away from (halak min) the presence of (neged la – being associated with or being receptive to) the ignorant and irrational (kasyl la ʻysh), because otherwise (wa), you will not come to know or appreciate Yadaʻs (bal yadaʻ – you will never become aware, acknowledge, or understand the teaching associated with Yadaʻs) understanding of the language providing informed insights deduced from these words (saphah daʻath – this skillful and systematic approach to discerning the meaning of what has been communicated along with understanding the vocalization of the words themselves).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:7)

And we did. We stand apart from those wallowing in kasyl | irrationality while we pursue chakmah | wisdom. We live to learn, know, understand, and share, celebrating language as the catalyst of informed deductions.

The volumes we have composed and the videos produced are celebrations of words. I cherish them as much as I disdain the promotion of ignorance and irrationality surrounding them on social media. Language is the most empowering and enlightening tool ever wielded by God or man. It is the connection between us, the very thing which brings us together.

But even more than this, after revealing that the Choter would receive the Spirit of Chakmah, Dowd acknowledges that he will have an abundance of Daʻath | Knowledge, which is yet another of the Ruwach | Spirits afforded to the Choter in Yasha Yah | Isaiah 11. And it is another reference to the Tree of Knowledge being reconstituted on behalf of the Tree of Lives.

Yet again, we find the Choter's most revealing friend...

“The capacity to understand and intelligently deduce insights by being discerning (chakmah – wisdom and the technical skills perceived necessary to comprehend) for the prudent and sensible (aruwm* – of the discriminating person who is aware of subtleties) comes by way of him making intelligent connections (*by derek huw – is facilitated by him judiciously relating information to deduce a greater meaning and by taking a path where being perceptive and knowledgeable leads him to understanding when he embarks on this journey with his full attention).

However (wa), the foolishness of corrupt leadership (iweleth* – the stupidity, stubbornness and folly of a nation of idiots who fail to comprehend, the moronic governmental systems perverting and mocking the truth by promoting shams and ruses) deceives and misleads (mirmah – dishonestly betrays and beguiles) the ignorant and irrational (kasyl – the unthinking dullards who are simpletons).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:8)

We must think our way to God. This process begins with *yada | knowing and progresses through byn | understanding by chakmah | rationally processing what we discover. This does not mean that every Covenant member will be intellectually brilliant, only that they will have the desire to learn, the ability to think, and the determination to understand what Yahowah is offering and expects in return. What we all share in common is an affinity to comprehend the things of God and respond appropriately.

Yahowah has less of an issue with foolishness, particularly if the affected individuals are misled, than with deceit. God's concern is with iweleth* | corrupt leadership, with people in positions of responsibility who promote political platitudes and religious shams. While it is a shame to be misled; it is a crime to mislead.

Half of my time, and half of every prophet's as well, is spent exposing and condemning religious, political, conspiratorial, economic, academic, and militaristic malfeasance. It is a prerequisite because man's rubbish must be pushed aside for the truth to be seen. This is because religious schemes are typically replacements, substitutions, and counterfeits piled on top of the truth to conceal it.

As we read Dowd's ongoing assessment of the Choter and his work on behalf of Yahowah and for Yahuwdaym, we find his rhetoric serves as a treatise on chotering – just as does Isaiah 11. This is what God's Witness must perceive and excoriate to be effective...

“Beguiled by corrupt leadership, those incapable of thinking judiciously, the simple minded without overall understanding (ewyl*), mock in a derisive, arrogant, and scornful fashion, constantly boasting in their disrespect for (lyts), the compensation provided to remove guilt by way of the atoning sacrifice (asham* – the offer to resolve errant and misleading ways and the consequence and penalty for being wrong).

Alternatively (wa), those who are right, on the level, and straightforward (yashar – those who are upright and correct, who are in accord with the proper standard, who agree with and accept its guidance and direction) observe the connections between things and come to understand (bayn – pay attention and realize the relationships which connect such things, associating them appropriately so that they comprehend) the choices which lead to being approved and accepted (ratsown – the decisions which are pleasing, satisfactory and satisfying, enabling the individual to be favorably received).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:9)

It is the sign of our times, with far too few thinking judiciously. The human condition has degraded to the extent that evidence and reason no longer resonate with the overtly political and religious. Those spewing the most rotten trash are even arrogant in their offensive ignorance.

These days, much of my message focuses on what Dowd has done to fulfill Pesach, Matsah, and Bikuwrym and will do on Kipurym upon his return, set alongside what I will achieve on Shabuwa^h and Taruwa^h to make his Homecoming as joyous as possible. And within this context, both of us are providing atoning sacrifices, offering compensation to purge the guilt of God's people.

One of the great joys I've experienced is watching Yahowah assemble His alternative to the beguiled with a level of competency and support that is as endearing as it is uplifting. His new and formidable team is straightforward and on the level, guided by His instructions. They are all steadfastly observant and exceedingly knowledgeable, so that as a result, the YAHOWAH BLOG is favorably received.

What follows is quite profound, setting the Choter apart from all but a handful of people, at least in Dowd's eyes. Of Yada, our King declares...

“The locus of judgment and inclination, motivation and inspiration, even emotion and disposition (leb – thinking and feelings) of Yada is cognizant of, concerned about, and acknowledges (yada^o – is familiar with and knows, is aware of and understands) the conscious capacity of his soul to observe and respond to (nepesh huw^{*} – his uniquely personal aptitude and ability to perceive and pursue, his attitude and ambition of his conscience and consciousness to perceive what surrounds him and answer) morah | bitterness and hostility, resentment and acrimony, rebellion and defiance (morah – insubordination and recalcitrance) as well as experiencing genuine jubilation as a result of him overcoming adversity (wa ba simchah huw^{*} – even when he is delightfully stimulated and entertained, momentarily transcending that which is so unpleasant to be remarkably positive and cheerful).

He is largely alone, never influenced by others, while avoiding any association with the pledges and vows (arab* – he never bargains or negotiates, never compromises, nor ever mortgages his reputation to those willing to intermingle and interfere (hitpael imperfect third-person masculine singular)) of those who are illegitimate and unauthorized (zar – disallowed and wrong, foreign, estranged, and disassociated).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:10)

Should we be lured into the false impression that the heart was credited for feelings rather than determination, Dowd is giving Yada’s leb, which is actually the seat of judgment, more credit than I have done since in the debate between head and heart, I’m considerably more lopsided than our King, who I perceive as balanced emotionally and cerebrally. Although, when we perceive this reference to leb in a manner consistent with the day, Dowd is actually saying that I’m sufficiently judgmental to correctly evaluate and answer the onslaught of morah | antagonism and acrimony. And in this regard, he is likely right. I am more astute and accomplished than either Moseh or Dowd in this one area. On numerous occasions, they both buckled under the pressure of embittered rebellions when I bow my back and become more determined and defiant. It may be the only area, however, where I am more confident and resolute than the prior Zarowa®, but it being true in this case, the Messiah called it to our attention.

This considered, morah is the common denominator between Moseh and myself, and likely Dowd as well. We have been assaulted by those displaying an overriding propensity to be morah | resentful and acrimonious, rebellious and defiant. Teaching us how to respond, is why the Towrah conveys these prophetic portrayals of Miryam’s revolt against Moseh’s authorization to singularly speak for God. It is also why Yahowah shared the embarrassing narrative pertaining to the meltdown at the Waters of Morah shortly thereafter.

Knowing what had been, would be, and that Yada would endure what Moseh experienced, Dowd wanted his Herald forewarned and prepared. And aware that His Son had provided this warning in his ode to the Choter, it is little wonder why Yahowah was a bit put off by the fact that I asked Him for advice on how to respond to the current rendition of the morah | rebellion when He had already provided it, thrice over.

In my defense, I translated Mashal 14 many years ago, back when I was first hearing of the Choter | Rod of Divine Judgment and Branch of Life from Yasha^oyah. At the time, I used the name Yada | the One who Knows, but I was unaware of Yahowah's call to be a Basar | Human Herald, Nakar | Observant Foreigner, ed* | Restoring Witness, Zarowa^o | One Cultivating the Harvests, as a *Mal*ak* | Spiritual Messenger, Qowl | Voice of God, and His Peh | Mouth with Byn | Understanding, much less serving as an eleph* and Showr | Learned and Observant Bull, adamah Parah* | Bloody Man of the Earth who is a Productive Bovine, or Zeh Bow Min edowm | One Coming Out of Edom to save a great many Yisra^oelites.

The morah | embittered rebellion was many years into my future then, and behind me now. I was, at the time, unaware of my role pursuant to the Shabuw^oah Qatsyr | Seven Shabat Harvest and the Taruw^oah Laqat | Herald's Gleaning. Back then I would not have known how to handle the subsequent revelation that I would be sacrificed as the Bull to save the remaining mortal remnant of Yisra^oel prior to the Messiah's return. Nor was I aware that chakmah would play such a pivotal role in the reenactment of Morah.

So yes, Dowd foreshadowed these events, but I was still in grade school when he was offering a post graduate dissertation. Chakmah is the pursuit of understanding, something that, while it isn't giftwrapped, is opened up and revealed over time.

And speaking of gifts, I am appreciative of Yahowah recording and sharing all of this with us. It is as if He is displaying empathy, saying that He has endured the same treatment and can relate. That is the most reasonable conclusion because the attack on Moseh's wife in Numbers 12 (and the related one against mine in Proverbs 14), was otherwise extraneous to the point of the story. And yet by including the introductory narratives, we are able to perceive the connection between them, and by scrutinizing both, discover the proper response.

By communicating this way, Yahowah has the pleasure of teaching and supporting His associates and we have the satisfaction that comes from discovery and learning. We even find that God isn't asking us to endure anything He hasn't previously experienced and overcome.

In the end, we prevail and they fail...

“The house (beyth – the home and family, but also the lineage and related institutions) of the revolting rebellion (*rasha – of those who are insubordinate and wrong in their violation of the acceptable standard) will be decimated and destroyed (shamad – will be overthrown and perish, then be exterminated).

The shining shelter and radiant household (ohel*) of those who are right (yashar) will flourish and thrive (parach – will sprout and grow, with stems that bud and blossom, becoming productive).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:11)

In this case, the victory is over more than those who unsuccessfully challenged the first and final Zarowa*. This ode to right over wrong pertains to more than overcoming morah | insubordinate and acrimonious attitudes among the Children of Yisra*el during their meltdown at the Waters of Marybah | Rebelliousness and Contention. When *Yowm Taruw*ah* | the Day of the Herald is fulfilled, the rebellion will be over and only the ohel Yashar* | Shining and Radiant Home of those who are Right will remain to parach | grow, flourish, and thrive.

The Choter, having been wielded as the Rod of Divine Judgment will bear fruit as the Stem of Life. And while serving in this capacity, he and his fellow witness, ElYah, will reside in an ohel Yashar Parach, which will be a replica of the Tent of the Restoring Witness. It will be erected on the Temple Mount and serve as our home.

In that this is a life lesson for all of us, our King surmised...

“There is the substantive and enriching way (yesh derek – there exists an affirmed path to stand out and be noticed) which is straightforward and right (yashar – which is correct and acceptable, on the level and in accord with the Upright One) unto the appearance and presence (la paneh – concerning the approach of the head, face, and mouth) of an individual man (iysh* – of a specific person), but her outcome in the end (*wa *acharyth hy – however, her issue and future) is the path to the realm of death (derek maweth – is the way and conduct of the plague).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:12)

The Way to Yahowah is straightforward but narrow. His Path is accommodating but restrictive. The Route Home is substantially enriching, and it stands out to those who stand up and notice.

In this regard, Dowd recognized that yesh was the actionable root of his father’s name, Yeshay, meaning “to stand out and be noticed as the substance of existence.” He also realized that the Choter would be grafted into this stump and his rootstock by referencing Yeshay in Yashayah*’s presentation of the Choter three centuries thereafter, tying the prophecies together in this way. This is yet another correlation to advance our chakmah | comprehension.

The insights that the Choter would derive from Moseh and Dowd, as well as Yashayah*, convey the Way to Yahowah. The path is comprised of seven steps, none of which can be ignored, misinterpreted, or replaced without annulling the intent, misdirecting the wayfarer, and yielding catastrophic consequences. Dowd enabled the promised benefits of the first three, offering eternal life, the perfection of our soul, adoption into his Father’s Family, along with tenfold enrichment and empowerment. Then, by recognizing what our King had achieved, the Choter would cultivate the Shabuw^oah and Taruw^oah Ingatherings, facilitating the Messiah's return on the Day of Reconciliations, enabling our reentry into Eden on Sukah.

Therefore, God's Son is being remarkably chakmah by alluding to Pesach, Matsah, and Bikuwrym, which he fulfilled, which facilitate the events for which the Choter is responsible, so that we can all celebrate forevermore as one big happy family. This is the way of those who are straightforward and right regarding the *pane*h | appearance and presence of the iysh* | individual man of whom the Messiah is addressing.

However, there will be an entirely different acharyth hy | outcome for the adversarial woman in the end. Her's derek maweth | is the path to the realm of death. And as was the case previously, this woman's deadly way could be addressing Miryam's, her recent rebellious incarnation, or the Adulterous Woman of Yisra^lel who first went rogue at Marybah and now must be cleansed to meet her groom, Melek Dowd, or more likely, all three.

There are, of course, many ways that appear right and still are wrong, all leading to the same place. These include religion, politics, conspiracy, militancy, caste-system economics, and antisemitism. The most damaging of these has become the grossly immoral fusion of Progressive politics and the Islamic religion. What they have in common is that they are all morah and result in maweth – millions and billions of them.

A decade ago, when I first drew the connection between the presentation of the Choter in Mashal 14 and Yasha^oyah 11, I stopped translating the Word Picture at this point, but clearly Dowd was not finished with his prophetic portrayal. In fact, we are just one-third of the way through his treatise on chotering.

As was the case with Moseh and Dowd, there would be tears and cheers along the way...

“While (gam – in addition), in joyful laughter as well as in mocking derision (ba sachowq – in sport and scorn, ridicule and humor), he may be anguished and grieved (ka^oab – he may be pained and stricken, may be sore and sorrowful (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) judgmentally and emotionally (leb – in thought and inclination).

While with her future in the end (wa ^{}acharyth hy^{} – at last for her), jubilation and celebration (simchah – what appears transcendently favorable) will become anguish and affliction (tuwgah – grief and sorrow, sadness and distress).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:13)

Since I’m more cerebral than emotional, I’m not often grieved. However, Israel is such a tough customer and those opposing her are so vindictive, frustration is common. It’s hard to fathom how a God so generous, uplifting, and kind can be so unpopular.

As for the reaffirmation that the likes of those who rebelled against me will be anguished and afflicted in the end, this is not because of me in that we have a new and improved team and have moved well past them. I suspect that this is because of Yahowah and Dowd. Our collaboration is so essential to the rehabilitation of their relationship with Yisra^{*}el that any disruption by someone who should know better is greeted with extreme disdain. Frankly, the disposition of the Covenant and the planet are riding on our success, so Father and Son are not inclined to overlook any obstacle thrown in our way.

What follows is absolutely true, and it has been so from the beginning...

“Because of his conduct and path (min derek huw^{}* – from his journey and way of life), he will be continually satisfied (saba^{}* – he will enjoy contentment with an overflowing abundance) turning away (suwg – retreating and recoiling) in judgment, disposition, and determination (leb).

Because concerning him (wa min ^{}al huw^{}), ^{}iysh Towb | He is a Proper, Productive, and Good Man (^{}iysh towb* – is a generous and good individual, a pleasing and desirable person).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:14)

It has taken over a score of years and some 100,000 hours to translate the text, add the commentary, deduce the insights, scribe the results, and ultimately figure all of this out from beginning to end. But I’ve stayed the course and not only am I satisfied that I’ve had the right disposition, shown the proper determination, and have been appropriately judgmental, Yahowah and Dowd agree. Together, we have been productive, and that pleases God.

To be serviceable to Yahowah, we begin with more than just an open and receptive mind. There must be a willingness to purge the culture of religion and politics and then go where the facts lead.

“The open minded (pethy – the readily persuaded with the capacity for changing his mind and situation), he is trustworthy and reliable, dependable and true (aman* – he is loyal and unfailing (hifil imperfect third-person masculine singular)) with every word and statement (la kol dabar – throughout the entire message).

And so, aruwm* | the Prudent and Discerning, Sensible and Disciplined, Perceptive and Judicious (*wa aruwm) makes the proper connections to understand (byn – he consistently perceives by distinguishing the relevant associations to comprehend) the direction of his steps and stance (*la *ashur huw – of his path and conduct).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:15)

Throughout it all, I have tried to remain consistent in my approach to Yahowah’s testimony such that the result is trustworthy and reliable. That does not mean that all 400,000 statements I’ve made over the years are perfect, complete, and unalterable, but as I’ve learned, they become ever more so. I trust the process and the witness, always trying to be prudent and discerning while seeking the connections which lead from knowing to understanding.

Earlier, I had correctly stated that we were evaluating the third of four times that chakmah, chakam, and chakmoth appeared in the text of the Mashal I had previously contemplated. There would, however, be several more...

“The Chakam | Wise and Circumspect One (chakam – the one who knows and is discerning with intellectual discipline who learns and then teaches wisely), he is respectful and inspiring (*yare – he is awesome but can be intimidating).

Therefore (wa), he turns away from (suwr min – he forsakes, removes, and abolishes) that which is troubling and wrong (*ra – evil, that which is inaccurate and immoral, disagreeable and malignant, vexing and for naught).

But the foolishly rebellious, ignorant, and irrational simpleton (wa kasyt – the stupid and shameless) is passed over for independently going to the other side (abar* – is intoxicated and is passed by alienated and estranged for transgressing on his own initiative (hitpaal participle)) and stumbling (wa batach – tripping and falling by losing control and mis-stepping).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:16)

In Yasha^oyah 11, chakmah is a spiritual accoutrement, while here in Mashal 14, Chakam is being presented as a title. According to Dowd, the Choter is Chakam | the Circumspect One who is intellectually disciplined. So, while he may be a stick, he is a very clever one. And as a result, I have become a wellspring of insights, sharing thousands of previously unknown revelations about God and His story.

For the first ten years I served Yah in this capacity, I was unlearning Christian, political, and conspiratorial platitudes at the same pace that I was absorbing new information. Every year thereafter, there was less and less to scrub from my memory banks as the insights from Yahowah flooded in to take their place. And today, there is very little left to turn away from while divine knowledge and understanding is well entrenched and cataloged.

It should be obvious to all who study the lives and lyrics of Dowd as they are presented throughout the Mizmowr and Mashal like this that he was a quick study with the capacity for profound revelation and articulate presentation. And this may be why he suffers fools poorly. He sees them as stumbling blocks to progress in our relationship with his Father. And in this regard, abar* is an insightful term because it is the verbal root of Pesach | Passover, which is the first of four Miqra^ey he would fulfill. This is not only something that the Choter was the first and only person to discern in thousands of years, making it the greatest discovery in human history pursuant to God, once he realized this, proved it, and began sharing it openly, our relationship became exceedingly important to our King.

There is a difference in being judgmental and being quick tempered. As is the case presented throughout Dowd's Mizmowr, he is relentless in his attacks on lesser men with bogus opinions, but rather than being rash, his denunciations are all well-conceived and thoroughly developed. In this regard, I've tried to emulate my King, such that I'm quick to judge and then methodical in my case against the religious and political who are working against us.

Dowd's opening statement looks as if he has been looking over my shoulder as I survey the hostile posts on X. It is a veritable cesspool of ignorance and vengeance. And yet it is one of the venues we must use to reach God's People and defend them against their foes.

“The quick-tempered and rash individual who is of diminutive stature (qatser – the easily provoked and weak minded who is mentally incapacitated) who is readily inflamed and angry (aph* – who is irritated, displeased, and hostile) acts (asah* – performs and engages) like an idiot lacking understanding and is quarrelsome (iweleth* – and foolish, deprived of wisdom, which leads to mocking).

And so, the man (*wa iysh) of Mazimah | Discretion and Conclusions, Deliberations and Decisions (mazimah – of reasoned judgment, sound considerations, and rational counsel) is loathed and detested, intensely disliked and shunned (*sane – he is abhorred in hostile fashion and abandoned by those who slight him).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:17)

Reasoned conclusions and erudite assessments are hardly the rage on social media. The algorithms and participants seem to prefer inverting reality and peppering the resulting drivel with f-bombs and nazi references because that is the surest way to tantalize fellow zombies. So, I decided to get snarky and told Xerites, “Since I haven’t lost enough followers today by sharing the truth, I thought it was time to further annoy the religious and political with...”

Participating in social media for the first time this year has been an awakening. I had thought that society had been dumbed down to a deplorable level, but X serves as proof. There is no longer any shame in being stupid. Retarded is now an accolade among the petulant and cantankerous.

“The allotment (nachal – the inheritance) of the naïve and easily deceived (pethy – the simpleminded and ignorant) is a fool’s folly of the petulant cantankerousness (iweleth* – is the void of ignorance and rebellion).

However, the prudent and discerning, the sensible and disciplined (*wa aruwm – the perceptive and judicious), they are surrounded by (kathar) knowledge and understanding (*da*ath*).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:18)

One would think that the contrast between dumb as a stone and vibrant as the Choter would be readily apparent, but apparently, to differentiate between them requires a level of intelligence no longer apparent in today’s youth. As a result, we must chuckle and show our chagrin among ourselves. We may be tossing pearls before swine, but there is an occasional fine jeweler in attendance.

This next statement must be prophetic for another day because humility isn't readily apparent. But it is reassuring that Father and Son perceive those of us striving on their behalf productive and pleasing.

“Those who are wrong (*ra – the improper) are humbled (shachach – are weakened, bowing down in submission) when approaching the presence of those who are prosperous and productive, pleasing and agreeable (la paneh towb – in the face of the proper and good), and those who are guilty and criminally unethical (*wa rasha – who are vexing, wicked, and condemned) at the gates (*sa*ar*) of the upright, correct, innocent, and guiltless (tsadyq – righteous and vindicated).”
(Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:19)

Yahowah clearly has gatekeepers such that entrance into His Heavenly abode is restricted to those of His choosing. And it certainly appears that many of those who felt assured of their place in line will be on the outside looking in as a result of their unethical behavior. Turns out, God expects consistency and loyalty and isn't interested in those who would work against His interests, no matter what they may have achieved previously.

God loves some and abhors others. It is His prerogative. And in this case, Dowd is being more inclusive, recognizing that the loudest and rudest of those who joined the resident psychopath in rebellion was our webmaster, a man who seems to have dug quite a hole for himself.

And while our Messiah quickly transitions to the team pursuing his interests and commends them, it has become rather obvious that Dowd took this rebellion against the one heralding his role as our savior much harder than did his Basar. This is understandable in the sense that he had three thousand years to stew over it while in the midst of the fray, it was a frustrating few days that concluded enormously better than they began. We have been too busy trying to accomplish the mission to be annoyed by those who tried to stand in our way.

“Also (gam – furthermore), by his loud and roaring associate (*la rea *huw – beside his thundering flashy companion) the impoverished and needy (ruwsh – the weak and wanting) are abhorred and slighted (*sane – are intensely disliked), but (wa) the enormously enriched and supremely honorable (ashyr rab* – those with abundant wealth) are loved and enjoy close personal relationships (ahab* – are highly desired).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:20)

Sure, there is a great deal at stake with the restoration of Yahowah’s name, and a lot to accomplish with the familiarization that Dowd is the Messiah and Son of God who fulfilled Pesach, Matsah, and Bikuwrym and who will return on Kipurym. Three thousand years have come and gone without any progress and only thirty remained when we began, so any disruption, no matter how readily resolved with far better people, must have appeared like the sky was falling to Dowd. And who could blame him? He had volunteered to fulfill the most difficult and excruciating mission in human history, he convinced God that he was the right man for the job, he witnessed his sacrifice and wrote about it, then when he did as promised, no one noticed until now. And worse, when almost everyone attributed what he had done to false messiahs and faux saviors, it looked like it had all been for naught. So, when someone finally figured it out and restored his reputation, our King had to be overjoyed. He would be able to return and there would be a wonderful assemblage of people ready to embrace him on Kipurym because of what we have accomplished and will continue to contribute. Then when the publisher, webmaster, and social media maven bolted with a cadre of followers, it must have looked bleak considering that there was so little time remaining to achieve the desired results. Moreover, Dowd is a good man and he’s naturally protective of his most important subordinate – the lesser luminary by whose light he will return to reign.

“Despising and deriding (buwz – showing contempt for and disrespecting) the approach of his vociferous friend and companion (*la rea*huw – his verbose associate) leads astray (*chata – misses the way and can be offensive).

But the Chanan | One who is Generous and Fortuitous (wa chanan – who speaks in a way that is compassionate and favorable) to the responsive (any* – to the unpretentious; from anah* – to reply and answer), he is a blessing, showing the way to receive the benefits of the relationship he enjoys (ashry huw – he is beneficial; from asher*).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:21)

There is an ongoing battle between right and wrong, but the verdict is in – we prevail. Dowd will reign again. The Family will be restored, and the Earth will be repaired. The Son of God will finally be appreciated for all he has done to make this possible. However, he isn’t going to forget or forgive those who were intent on raining on his parade. After all, Dowd knows that if we don’t prevail, he doesn’t either. And that being true, God would be horribly disappointed.

“Do they not go astray and wander away (*ha lo*ta*ah* – are they not misled) those who plot, plan, and devise (charash – who scheme and conspire) that which is misleading, troublesome, and wrong (*ra – disagreeable and malignant)?

And loyal love, unfailing kindness, and genuine affection (chesed), honesty, integrity, and reliability (*wa emeth – trustworthiness) is the written work (charash – is the plan scribed) of the productive and beneficial, the proper and prosperous (towb – the agreeable and good).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:22)

Those who are wrong have plagued mankind, demeaned God’s People, deprived millions and billions of their souls, and have pilfered the achievements and accolades of our Messiah. Of particular shame are the Abrahamic religions of Judaism, Christianity, and Islam that have thrived on malfeasance of the messianic kind. But the scoundrels are many and include Romans and Greeks, Europeans and Americans, Progressives and Muslims. And quite frankly, the naysayers and destroyers come within a hair’s breadth of prevailing – that is if you call the destruction of the planet, life, and liberty a worthy achievement.

Many would plot, more would go astray. Those who mislead would outnumber the true shepherd by a million to one. But ultimately, love prevails, compassion wins, integrity counts, and truth finds its mark. It would all be written in a book – well thirty-five of them. His Choter would be productive, and the results would be beneficial.

Not that it would be easy...

“In every challenge, difficult task, and labor (*ba kol etseb – in everything associated with hard work), there is an advantageous benefit (hayah mowthar – there will be a preeminent reward for the remaining remnant), but lip-synced words (wa dabar saphar) surely impoverish because they lack what is vital (ak la machsowr* – only diminish).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:23)

This has been my mantra from long before I met Yahowah or came to know Dowd. Character is forged in adversity. The more difficult the challenge, the more strenuous the labor, the more formidable the obstacles, the more our confidence and resolve grows when we overcome. There are many benefits associated with toil. Work is valued and valuable. And it is by doing that we learn and retain what we have achieved.

By comparison, those who give lip-service to what I have discovered and shared remain impoverished by the lack of commitment, personal involvement, and resulting understanding and ownership of the material. I’ve invested twenty-four years developing thousands of amplified translations while my rival for attention has yet to compose one. Further, learning is a process. We simply don’t know until we know, and once we know, we are finally in the position to understand. But even then, it takes lots of chakmah, yada, and byn. And without the effort, the lip-synced words lack something vital to our success.

While Dowd is my King and it is his throne and responsibility, I will also have a crown of sorts. Mine will be comprised of chakam | words wisely wielded. But in this regard, it will be shared among those who have embraced Team Yah and worn by them throughout eternity.

“The crown (atarah*) of the discerning, intelligent, and wise (chakam – of the one with the capacity to understand) is their enrichment (osher hem* – their wealth).

The foolishness (iweleth*) of the insolent and rebellious (kasyl – of shameless dullards without understanding) is idiotic and impious (iweleth* – shows spiritual immaturity).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:24)

Dowd is going to continue dissing those who have opposed his return and reign until he is here and they are gone. And between now and then, he is brilliant, and they remain dimwitted.

As we embarked on this epic journey, I shared that one of the score of titles Yahowah has chosen for Yada is ed* | Restoring Witness. And in this role our collaboration will save many souls. This puts Dowd and myself in rare company because he and I are the only ones advancing the salvation of Yisra^{*el} and Yahuwdym through our sacrifices during the *Mow^{edym} | Restoring Witnesses to the Eternal Testimony.

“A truthful and honest, reliable and consistent (emeth* – an enduring and steadfast, loyal and persistent, dependable and ethical, supportive and nourishing) ed* | Restoring Witness (ed* – one who testifies sharing the evidence which has been provided) delivers and saves (natsal – he spares and defends, rescues and withdraws) souls (nepeshowth – the consciousnesses of the living).

But the blowhard’s (wa puwch) treacherous and deliberately misleading (mirmah – dishonest and beguiling) lies are delusional and deceptive, providing a false impression (kazab – frauds disappoint and are readily shown to be untrue).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:25)

The Greater Luminary fulfilled Pesach, Matsah, and Bikuwrym, providing all five benefits of the Covenant. The Lesser Luminary reflecting the Son's light will orchestrate Shabuw'ah | Seven Shabats and then fulfill Yowm Taruw'ah | the Day of the Herald. And based upon what Yahowah achieves through our effort, all those who are saved will benefit. This is a cause of great celebration.

But only for the few, not the many. For them, the blowhards will prevail, treacherously and deliberately misleading the vast preponderance of people with their deceptive delusions. And yet, when all is said and done, those boasting deceptively will be nothing more than ripples in the wind, fading into obscurity, while the Family celebrates forevermore with nary a thought of them.

“With reverence and respect for (ba yir'ah – with awesome inspiration from) Yahowah (Yahowah) there is great confidence and supreme trust (mibtach 'oz – there is awesome confidence and tremendous reliance).

And so his children (wa la beny huw') will have a safe refuge (hayah mahseh – a protective shelter from falsehood and danger).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:26)

Our journey home begins with reverence and respect for Yahowah. It is in Him that we place our trust. Our reward is a safe harbor and protective shelter as children of the Almighty.

“Reverence and respect (yir'ah) for Yahowah (Yahowah) is the source (maqowr – is the wellspring and fountain) of lives (chayym) such that one may turn away (la suwr) from the snares (min mowqes) of death (maweth – of the pandemic plague that kills entire populations).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:27)

A second life is God's gift to His Covenant Family. But even in this there is an affirmation of Yahowah's plan. The men who would come to respect Yahowah's name more than any others, become a source of life by laying down their lives. In death, many would live.

And now, what is music to my ears is that Dowd was inspired to write that the Covenant Family would be rob | numerous and impressive. And this means we achieve what Yahowah asked us to accomplish.

Further, we are not only doing this for our King, it is the abundance and greatness of the Covenant Family that brings glory and honor to Dowd as our sovereign and savior. This entire Mashal is about this moment, about achieving Dowd's heart's desire. His supreme effort will achieve what he sought to deliver.

“In a large and great (ba rob – with an impressive and abundant) family (am* – people) is the glory, honor, and majesty (hadarah – the splendor and grandeur) of the King (melek).

But with nothing in the end (*wa ba epes), those estranged by an archaic culture (*la*om*) are the ruinous undoing, great consternation, ultimate dissolution, and shattering (machatah – are terrible, the destructive dismay and abolishment) of a sickened potentate and weakened ruler, and of a corrupt government official (razown).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:28)

Even in the midst of triumph, the King remains true to his calling. To be fair, he must be just. Those who have been political and religious must be properly recompensed for their ruinous behavior. For those on the periphery, there will be nothing in the end, but for those who sought the dissolution of the Covenant and Yisra*el, shattering God's people with their inept schemes and corrupt rulers, they will pay a hefty fine.

As we approach this next statement, the most direct way to translate arak aph is as I have done, recognizing that both could also be rendered “slow to anger.” But since Yahowah typically isn't and Dowd never was, and because constraining one's righteous indignation isn't a means to reasoned insights or the aptitude to understand, I am presenting their primary connotations...

“Prolonged exposure to nosing around and long suffering by the one inclined to breathing slowly and deeply (*arak *aph – the one who is fitting and proper with his angst over an extended period of time) yields a tremendous ability to understand, copious logical and reasoned insights, and the aptitude to be intelligent and discerning (rob tabuwnah).

However (wa), an easily provoked and inadequate (qatser – a diminutive and ill-tempered, puny and vexing) spirit (ruwach) promotes (ruwm – extolls and exalts) foolish impiety and irreverence along with a moronic sense of preeminence and superiority (*iweleth – stupidity).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:29)

In situations where focus and endurance are required, I have adopted the practice of slow and deliberate breathing. And in translating and providing commentary, I like to nose around, becoming familiar with the context and circumstances underlying every narrative. For me, the result has been unprecedented rob tabuwnah | profound insights, uncommon comprehension, and a plethora of marvelous revelations.

By contrast, those who fly off the handle, who are half baked, inadequately informed, ill-prepared, overly indoctrinated, and under educated, are easily agitated and readily provoked. They are the product of a vexing spirit. And like the Adversary, they seek preeminence and superiority while having less merit than navel lint. And while the battle between sense and nonsense is not a fair fight, stupid remains popular and morons are prolific.

While Yada, Choter, *Mal*ak*, ed*, and Chakam | the Wise and Circumspect One, are relevant names and titles describing this mission, as are eleph* and Showr | the Learned and Observant Bull, it is Basar | Herald that best illustrates my relationship with the King...

“The Basar | Herald’s (basar – the corporeal messenger’s) lives (chayy) restore (marphe° – cure) good judgment (leb – the heart, productive thinking, and a positive attitude).

However (wa), essential essence and physical substance, even the corporeal mass of a person (etsem* – the skeleton, body, and bones) who is envious and jealous (qin°ah – of ill will seeking an ill-conceived advantage) rots and decays from a degenerative parasitical fungus (raqab – suffers decomposition from the infection).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:30)

The purpose of the Choter, and therefore, also the Basar, is to restore good judgment. Without it, Dowd is unappreciated and Yahowah is unknown. This is one of the reasons that chakmah | intelligence is the most repeated theme in the King’s ode to the Choter. God’s People must be encouraged to forego the religious and political nonsense and think their way back to Yahowah. And while reconciliation is available and highly recommended, the conditions must be known, understood, and accepted – things which are essential to the Basar’s message.

Dowd’s juxtaposition of basar | human herald and etsem* | the essential essence of a man, isn’t happenstance. Our King wants you to know that when it comes to the restoration of our lives, the choices we make while mortal and physical beings determine whether we will live as spiritual beings. Should Yisra*elites follow the Basar’s advice and exercise good judgement, they will live, but if not, the degenerative parasitical fungus of religion will infect and destroy them. And in this regard, it was Dowd who removed the corrupting guilt of those who exercise good judgment regarding what he accomplished on Matsah.

Judaism and Christianity are guilty of robbing our Messiah, the one who opened the door to life...

“Mistreating and defrauding (ashaq* – extorting and cheating) the one opening the door (dal – the needy), insults (charaph – defies and taunts) the one who engaged and did

this for him (asah huw – the one who made this happen for him), while the one who appropriately distinguishes, honors, and values his significance (*kabed huw), is favorably inclined toward, generous to, especially beneficial on behalf of (chanan – offers benefits to and is compassionate toward) the *ebyown | those Open to and Desirous of Deliverance (*ebyown – the willing and accepting).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:31)

There is very little more to Christianity than defrauding the Messiah and Son of God, or Savior, Dowd, who opened Heaven’s Door. Mr. Christ is a crude counterfeit and product of identity theft when it was Dowd who engaged on our behalf in 33 CE.

The *ebyown | Desirous of Deliverance are unknown to most, but not to Dowd or myself. They were the ones who recorded Dowd’s Sermon on the Mount and Olivet Discourse – both of which are exceedingly hostile to Christianity. The fraud known as “Matthew” pilfered their narratives without crediting them – just as he plagiarized the remainder of his gospel from Mark and Luke. But a modicum of research reveals that the *ebyown | Ebonites, as eyewitnesses fluent in Hebrew, were the only ones to actually record something spoken by the real Messiah at the time. Those who know the truth, honor and value the significant contributions of the *Ebyown.

In this context, this is actually a stupendously important revelation. It means that Dowd, 3,000 years before I became the first to perceive either of these things – that Dowd was defrauded and that the *Ebyown should be appreciated for their contribution to exposing this fraud – announced that the Choter and Basar would restore the fortunes of his people by discovering and proving both realizations. It is the key to exposing the greatest fraud ever perpetrated – there was no Jesus, Dowd is the Messiah and Son of God, and the *Ebyown were eyewitnesses to these facts.

Our King and his Father are acknowledging something I never considered: there was the risk of failure. Had we not responded to the most recent rebellion quickly and decisively based upon Yahowah's resolute prophetic instructions, it could have all been for naught – no website, no books, and no outward communication with the webmaster, publicist, and social media maven bolting with a cadre of coconspirators at the eleventh hour.

“Wicked and ungodly (rasha – guilty of criminal intent) as a result of her destructive shepherding against him, disastrous leadership, and her insufferable attitude toward him (*ba ra*ah huw – with her ruinous wickedness and wrongdoing to fraudulently take his authority), he might have been weakened and tripped up (dachah – he may have stumbled (nifal imperfect)).

Instead (wa), Tsadyq | the Correct and Vindicating One (tsadyq – the one in accord with the standard who is right, righteous, just, proper, fitting, and acquitting) provides a safe haven as a trustworthy and protected place (chasah – a refuge and shelter for those placing their trust in God) through his death (*ba maweth huw – in offering his mortal body [from 4QProv]).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:32)

Since Yahowah intervened immediately with regard to the mutinous Leprous Motherite Cult, supplying the proper retort with the Bamidbar / Numbers 12 annihilation of Miryam's claims, providing a vastly superior team and a new plan which we began to implement that same day, turning from the wall of written books to a library of video blogs, I did not feel the least bit vulnerable. Further, because the website was not taken down and we promptly opened all new social media accounts, then built recording studios, failure was never in the offing. Therefore, the rasha who are *ra*ah* toward *huw may represent the larger audience of religious and political naysayers who will do and say anything to avoid being proven wrong. They are quite active throttling our outreach on X, and have become insufferable. But if anything, I'm resilient, and will stay the course. They will try, but even collectively, they don't have the intelligence or wherewithal to trip up a Choter chosen by Yah.

And while Yahowah's admission that I could have been tripped up had He not intervened is rather astonishing considering the quantity and quality of the books we had written over the previous 23 years, that wasn't the most revealing part of the previous statement. Not only do we find one of my favorite Hebrew words, Tsadaq | Correct and Vindicating One, used as another title addressing the Choter and Basar, Yahowah announced that I would die protecting His People. Just as Dowd had offered his basar | corporeal body as the Passover Lamb so that Yahuw'dym might live, the Basar | Herald will provide a safe haven for Yisra*el on *Yowm Taruw*ah* | the Day of the Herald by preparing God's People for the Messiah's return.

This is something that I would not come to realize prior to retranslating Yasha'yah / Isaiah 17 for the augmentation of the Qatsyr ~ Herald volume of Yada Yahowah in late 2024. The prophet's pronouncement regarding the Zarowa*'s role in fulfilling Taruw*ah had stated as much, and it had led directly to the Number's 19 sacrifice of the adamah Parah* | Bloody Red Man of the Earth who as a Productive Bull would be productive on the Day of the Herald, making this claim through the use of parah. And this, of course, is why Dowd selected two terms for Bull – eleph* and Showr – in this Mashal | Word Picture, doing so immediately after he introduced us to the title – Choter. He even went so far as to say:

“Against the pronouncements (ba peh) of the stupidly stubborn and corrupt (ewyl*), a Choter | the Rod of Divine Justice, a Stem off the Main Branch, a Productive Sucker from the Fallen Stump (choter) will rise and roar, triumphantly opposing and agitating, performing magnificently on behalf of the Almighty (*ga*awah*).

And so, the language (wa saphah) of Chakam | the Intelligent One who Learns, who Understand, and then Teaches (chakam) will focus on what he observes (shamar hem). (Mashal 14:3)

Without the eleph* | Learned and Productive Bull who increases a thousandfold (*ba *ayn eleph), the manger and crib, the nursery where the flock is nurtured and fed (ebuws*), are empty (bar).

And yet (wa) a large, great, productive, and abundant (rab) *Tabuw*ah* | Harvest will be Derived and Produced (*tabuw*ah*) by the authority and capability, the empowerment and effort (ba koach) of this Showr | Observant Bull who cares enough to help others (shuwr).” (Mashal 14:4)

And to this, the Prophet concluded...

“Tsadyq | the Correct and Vindicating One (tsadyq) will provide a safe haven as a trustworthy and protected place (chasah) through his death (*ba maweth huw).”

Three hundred years before revealing the nature and purpose of this sacrifice through Yasha*yah, Yahowah shared the same message with His beloved Son, Dowd. I find this to be awesomely affirming and profoundly important in that it also explains why the *Zeh Bow*Min edown | the Man from Edom would be bloody red in the process of saving a great many Yisra*elites.

While the demise of my basar | physical body will be momentarily unpleasant, I am thrilled to do so, not only recognizing that my body will no longer be of value to me, not only in knowing that it will serve God’s People in a marvelous way, but also because this would not have been foretold without Yahowah realizing that I could be trusted to do as He has asked. Although, keeping it real, it is a bit unnerving to read about one’s life three thousand years in advance, especially acknowledging that with freewill it is technically possible, but unthinkable, for me to shirk this responsibility.

Back when I was initially made aware of how the second of the three phases of my mission would conclude, Yahowah was kind enough to share a vision of it with me, so I’ve seen how this will transpire. Thus revelation, buttressed as it has been with the Numbers 19 and Bamidbar 5 presentations of the Red Heiver and the Adulterous Woman, combined with *Elyah's dress rehearsal for this event depicted in 1 Melekym 18 in his obliteration of the political and religious establishment of Yisra*el, collectively paint the scene. It will be the greatest show on Earth, with the Choter as the sacrificial victim, *Elyah as the Master of Ceremonies, and Yahowah releasing the cascading waters while igniting the flames which will soar to the heavens. I'm going to go out in style.

Not done describing the Choter, Dowd paints him using another title, this one comprised of another favorite among special Hebrew words...

“In the determination and judgment (ba leb – in the thinking and consideration, disposition and inclinations, attitude and motivations) of the Byn | Man with Understanding using Reasoned Connections to Provide Insights (byn – of the one who perceives, discerns, and comprehends through rational associations and prudent consideration (nifal participle masculine singular absolute)), intellectual dexterity, disciplined thinking, and the capacity for wisdom (chakmah – learning and teaching, understanding and comprehension) will settle and reside in an ongoing spiritual alliance (nuwach – will be restored and rest (qal imperfect third-person feminine (addressing chakmah) singular)).

This makes Yada known and respected (yada – chakmah is how Yada understands and becomes known and acknowledged (qal imperfect third-person feminine (addressing chakmah) singular)) even among (wa ba qereb – also in the midst) the insolent and rebellious (kasyl – the shameless and stupid dullards without understanding).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:33)

The one man whom Yahowah acknowledged was after His own leb, has made leb | the determination and judgment that the Byn | the One who Makes the Connections to Understand would be Chakmah | Intellectually Dexterous as a Wise and Disciplined Thinker. He even foretold that the Ruwach | Spirit of Chakmah | Wisdom and Intelligence would Nuwach | Settle Upon and Reside Spiritually in Alliance with Yada | the One who Knows and Acknowledges these things.

I appreciate the answers and have no more questions.

However, just to make sure that we would all come to the same conclusion in time to capitalize upon what the Choter who is Chakmah is offering as Yada by being Tsadaq, Yahowah inspired this Byn | Insight...

“Being right, just, and vindicating (tsadaqah – being correct, valid, and judgmental, prosperous, righteous, fair, accurate, truthful, and justified) causes this Gowy to be lifted up and exalted, to grow, rise, and be extolled (ruwm gowy – to be a gentile who is raised on high and uplifted so he can contribute, even to be presented as a sacrificial offering (polel imperfect where the gowy endures the effect of being raised and extolled)), even while serving as an atoning offering for purification and cleansing for those missing the way (*wa chata*ah*) out of loyal love, great devotion, and tremendous kindness to favorably benefit a shameful (chesed [based upon 4QProv, there is some confusion over whether the concluding Daleth might be a Rosh. If so, *chata*ah* would have to be rendered using its darker definition of missing the way while chesed becomes cheser - diminishes]) people estranged by their archaic culture (*la*om*).” (Mashal / Word Pictures / Proverbs 14:34)

The most important part of my mission is to be tsadaqah | right about Yahowah and Dowd. This is what causes the Gowy to ruwm | grow and rise in stature. He is tsadaqah | vindicating because he *chata*ah* | serves as an atoning offering for the purification and cleansing of those who had missed the way. It is an act of great chesed | devotion, a demonstration and projection of a Father's chesed | love for His People. Those who will have been *la*om* | estranged by the archaic culture will be reconciled on Taruw^oah in advance of Kipurym.

It is an astonishing pronouncement and an amazing role to play. I will endeavor to be true to the calling and not disappoint, especially knowing how my King concluded his portrait of me...

“The ^oebed | Subordinate Coworker and Associate (la ^oebed – the official adviser and one who serves (masculine singular)), Sakal | the One with Prudent Insights, Profound Wisdom, and Beneficial Instructions which Produce Prosperity (sakal – who understands and is intellectually skilled) is accepted and favored because he pleases and delights, so as to be desired and approved by (ratsown) the King (melek – the sovereign counselor and designated royal ruler as the head of the kingdom).” (Mashal / Proverbs 14:35)

Wow!

Of the Choter | Rod of Divine Judgment and Branch of Life named Yada | the One who Knows, we have learned a great deal about Dowd’s Basar | Human Herald. This Nakar | Observant Foreigner is depicted here as a Gowy | Gentile. He is an ^oed | Restoring Witness, the final Zarowa^o | One Cultivating the Harvests as a Mal^oak | Spiritual Messenger, serving as the Qowl | Voice of God, and His Peh | Mouth with Byn | Understanding. ^oadamah Parah | Bloody Man of the Earth who is a Productive Bovine, this Zeh Bow^oMin ^oedowm | One Coming Out of Edom to save a great many Yisra^oelites, is also much less serving as an ^oeleph and Showr | Learned and Observant Bull. It was already an elaborate array of names and titles, to which Dowd either reinforces or augmented with these in the following order...

Choter | the Rod of Divine Justice, a Stem off the Main Branch, a Productive Sucker from the Fallen Stump.

^oeleph | Learned and Productive Bull who Increases a Thousandfold.

Showr | Observant Bull who Cares and Helps Others.

^oed | the Restoring Witness to the Eternal Testimony.

Byn | One who Derives the Proper Connections to Understand.

Yada | One who Knows, Acknowledges, and Comprehends.

iysh Towb* | the Proper, Productive, and Good Man.

aruwm* | the Prudent and Discerning, Sensible and Disciplined, Perceptive and Judicious One.

Chakam | the Intelligent One who Learns, Understands, and then Teaches, the Wise and Circumspect One.

Mazimah | the One Known for his Discretion and Conclusions, Deliberations and Decisions.

Chanan | One who is Generous and Fortuitous.

Basar | the Human Herald.

Tsadyq | the Correct and Vindicating One.

ebed* | the Subordinate Coworker and Associate.

Sakal | the One with Prudent Insights, Profound Wisdom, and Beneficial Instructions Producing Prosperity.

Since Leah, Yahowah's gift to me, asked me to include the following related citation, here it is for your consideration.

“So then (wa) he returned (shuwb) to the Man of God (el *iysh ha elohym), he and all of those who had camped out with him (huw was kol machanah huw) and when he arrived (*wa bow) and stood before him in his presence (*wa *amad la paneh huw), he said (*wa amar), ‘Behold now (hineh), with a sense of heightened awareness and considerable urgency (na – with great intensity I exhort), I recognize Yada knows and acknowledges (*yada – I realize, am aware, respect, and reveal) that it is certain (ky – it is indeed true), there is no God (ayin elohym) in all of the Earth (*ba kol ha erets) except actually (*ky im) in Yisra*el (*ba Yisra*el*).

And so now (*wa atah), you are strongly encouraged to choose of your own accord to grasp hold (*laqach na – with a sense of urgency you should want to accept (qal imperative)) of this blessing regarding the person bringing reconciliation (barakah) in association with your coworker (min *eth *ebed *atah)." (Melekym / 2 Kings 5:15)

"I, myself, have built (wa *any banah) a magnificent dwelling with extraordinarily beautiful construction, a celestial palace (zabuwl) of a House (Beyth) for You (la *atah), a dwelling place and site (wa makown) for You to sit in and inhabit (la yashab) forever (*owlam)." (Dabarym ha Yowmym / 2nd Chronicles 6:2)

"Then the king (ha melek) came full circle, turning back to the beginning (sabab) with his presence (eth paneh huw). And he knelt down to lift up and bless (wa barak) the entire assembled community (kol qahal) of Yisra*el | Individuals who Engage and Endure with God (Yisra*el) while (wa) everyone gathered and assembled (kol qahal) of Yisra*el (Yisra*el) was present and standing (*amad). (Dabarym ha

Yowmym / 2nd Chronicles 6:3)

Then he said (wa *amar), ‘Yahowah (Yahowah), the God of Yisra*el (*elohym Yisra*el) is extolled (barak) based upon what He has communicated (asher dabar) with His mouth (ba peh huw) to Dowd (*eth Dowd), my father (*ab any). And with his hand and influence (wa ba yad huw), He has fulfilled these proclamations (male*).’” (Dabarym ha Yowmym / 2nd Chronicles 6:4)

Our fate hinges upon what Father and Son discussed. It is what Yahowah and Dowd achieved and fulfilled together that transforms our lives, purifies and preserves our souls.

“I have chosen (wa bachar) with Yaruwshalaim | the Source of Guidance on Reconciliation (ba Yaruwshalaim) that My name (shem *any) will exist (la hayah) here (sham). And I have chosen (wa bachar) with Dowyd (ba Dawyd) to be (la hayah) over My people, Yisra*el (*al *am *any Yisra*el).” (Dabarym ha Yowmym / 2nd Chronicles 6:6)

“And it was (wa hayah) in the heart and mind, the inclination and judgment (*im lebab) of Dowyd (Dowyd), my father (*ab *any), to build (la banah) a Home (beyth) for the name (la shem) of Yahowah (Yahowah) the God of Yisra*el (*elohym Yisra*el). (Dabarym ha Yowmym / 2nd Chronicles 6:7)

Then (wa) Yahowah (Yahowah) said (*amar) to Dowd (*el Dowyd), my father (*ab *any), ‘Because (ya *an) it was (hayah) in your best judgment (*im lebab *atah) Dowyd (Dowyd), my father (*ab *any), to build (la banah) a Home (beyth) for My name (la shem *any), what was in your heart and mind (ky hayah *im lebab *atah) is beautiful and good, generous and beneficial (towb).’” (Dabarym ha Yowmym / 2nd Chronicles 6:8)

Yahowah was initially troubled by Dowd’s desire to build a house, as is demonstrated conclusively in the text of 2 Shamuw^{el} 7. Further, Yahowah precluded Dowd from this iteration of the House for His Name because He intended to use the “blood on his hands” for another purpose 3,000 years hence.

And it is then that Yahowah will honor Dowd's request and allow the King to build the eternal residence for the Covenant Family.

In this next statement, we find that Solomon interpreted the verse Twistians rely upon to suggest that the Messiah would be a descendant of Dowd in a manner which impugns the religion. Solomon saw it as addressing him as Dowd's son, and thus not prophetic of an unknown Christ a thousand years later. Further, not only wasn't there a Messiah mentioned in the prophecy in 2 Shamuw^el 7, pretend Jesus didn't live in a house much less build one. And of course, there is no mention of Yahowah's name in the fraudulent New Testament texts.

“Nevertheless, that notwithstanding (raq), you will not build the House (atah lo* banah ha beyth*), but instead (ky), your son (*ben atah), the coming forth from your loins (ha yatsa min chalats atah). He will build (huw banah*) the Home (ha beyth) for My name (*la shem any).” (Dabarym ha Yowmym / 2nd Chronicles 6:9)

What is particularly revealing here is that the beyth was a “Family Home” and that Yahowah had no intention of living there or even occupying the premises. Its purpose was to serve as a home for His name. And yet, Yahowah's Shem was the first thing Jews removed and Christians ignored. However, it is the very thing restored by the Nakry's Yada Yahowah.

“Now (wa), Yahowah (Yahowah) has taken a stand to establish and fulfill (quwm) His statement (eth dabar huw) that, for the benefit of the relationship (asher*), He has spoken (dabar). And I have taken a stand to establish and fulfill (wa quwm) beneath (tachath) Dowd (Dowyd), my father (ab any). Because I sit (wa yashab) on the throne (al kise) of Yisra^el (*Yisra*el*) as Yahowah spoke (*ka*asher dabar Yahowah*). And I have built (wa banah) the Home (ha beyth) for the name (la shem) of Yahowah (Yahowah), the God of Yisra^el (elohym Yisra*el*). (Dabarym ha Yowmym / 2nd Chronicles 6:10)

I have placed (wa sym) there (sham) the arown* | Ark (arown*) which beneficially and relationally (asher*) there is (sham) the Beryth | Covenant (beryth) of Yahowah (Yahowah) to show the way to get the most out of life (asher*) cut (karat) with the Children of Yisra*el (im beny Yisra*el*).” (Dabarym ha Yowmym / 2nd Chronicles 6:11)

Shalomoh was actively proclaiming Yahowah’s name. He knew the building was a Beyth Shem. He recognized he was in this position due to the relationship Yahowah developed with his father, Dowd. He was aware that the Ark of the Covenant was to be housed within this place.

The last Mashal / Word Picture is personal, powerful, and prophetic. It paints a portrait of a lost child, of a husband and wife, of a father’s and mother’s love for a son who has gone astray. It is the story of a Melek, Ba*al, and *Ashar from an entirely different perspective. This is the surprise intervention in God’s story that no one expected and yet explains everything.

A relationship would have to be mended before a reputation could be restored. We must redeem this man before he redeems the world.

The Final Word Picture is a shocker ~ as are the prophetic texts which frame it. Very bad had become much worse and things began to spiral out of control. The foremost Son had pushed his Father so far out of his life, he couldn’t even bear to say His name. The relationship was so fractured, there was only one way to resolve it, and even that was a risky proposition because of the relative status of the implements Yahowah would deploy to mend the rift.

At this moment, our Heavenly Father knew that He was stymied and needed help. His issues with His Son had become so serious, so isolating and debilitating, they were not communicating and could not do so since Yahowah couldn't directly intervene without compromising His core values. So, God would reach forward in time to find a mother and father who knew Him, and His Son, loved them both, but who had also suffered similarly, to chide the King out of his stupor.

Dowd needed parenting ~ a mother and father, a husband and wife, two servants of Yah, who weren't afraid to tell the Melek and Bakowr of *El what he needed to hear. They would be inserted in his time, and just in time, for there to be time.

It would not be easy. The King was as stubborn and irascible as his people. This would be a lifetime endeavor.

Yahowah's amah* | Productive Mother got the King's attention, and woke him up, but her voice was too soft to prevail with a man who didn't respect women. I don't say that to be disrespectful, but to point to the fact that he didn't know his mother and he hadn't made stellar choices in wives. And so, Yahowah arranged the one-two punch of the husband following the wife, an adoptive father after the foster mother.

But we are getting ahead of our story and I want to drive an exceptional, life-altering, point home. There are limitations to what Yahowah can achieve should we cease respecting Him, contravene His conditions, or withdraw from the relationship.

God is great. His existence is independent of ours. Yahowah did not solicit our help in creating the universe and there was no consult when He decided to author life. But once He made us, there was no way to develop a beneficial relationship without our participation in addition to our respect.

It's actually vital that this insight resonates within you. It strikes directly at the heart of Paul's fraudulent "Justification by Faith," demolishing the rotten core of Christianity, brining down the entire house of cards.

Please do not allow it to pass you by as reverberations in the air or words lost among others on a page. This is the grand unification theory of our very existence. It reveals the means to make your life meaningful.

Simply stated, a one-sided relationship is a contradiction in terms. It is neither beneficial nor sustainable. Therefore, for God to continue to engage with us, we must return the favor. And we must do so appropriately, intelligently, respectfully, and without compulsion.

For the Beryth, which is the crown jewel of the Towrah, to be meaningful, mutually enjoyable, and productive, either side must be able to opt out and neither party can compel the other to honor the terms of the agreement. Further, God ceases to be Himself should He grovel for our attention, bribe us for favors, change the conditions, alter the benefits, or compromise on His principles. He cannot become less than He is just because He wants to make us more than we are.

And therein was His dilemma with Dowd. He had put himself out of reach, as had the Children of Yisra^l throughout the Exodus and thereafter.

Since the Covenant is predicated on a mutually beneficial relationship, unless we are willing to make an ongoing contribution to the Family, and engage with our Father, Yahowah cannot save us. We not only make our salvation possible when we participate, while also making ourselves desirable, Yahowah must reciprocate in accordance with His binding promise. And as a bonus, we encourage others to engage by sharing what we are learning along the way.

To achieve the result He desired, Yahowah would save His creation by working through those He had conceived. Moseh and Dowd are prime examples, as are a couple of others. But this only works when we work.

God's approach necessitated one of the most poignant lines in the Towrah. After the Children of Yisra^l told Yahowah that they didn't want to hear His voice or witness His fiery light again, and that their preference was for Him to address them through one of their own, God responded, "For the benefit of the relationship (*asher), they will be better off and more successful (yatab) based upon what they have said (dabar)."

(Dabarym / Words / Deuteronomy 18:17)

In our present state, we are just too different, too far apart, too inferior in intellect and capability, as well as dimensions and time. Therefore, God is on record stating that He would intervene and communicate through select individuals.

We know their names and something of their lives: Adam and then Chawah, Noach and his family, Abraham and Sarah, Yitschaq and Rebeka, Ya^aqob and Leah, the Children who became Yisra^el, Moseh and Aharown, Yahowsha^e and Shamuw^el, Dowd and Nathan, Shalomoh and Chazaqyah, with the Nakar arriving in the end. They were buttressed by a remarkable group of prophets: Ruwth and Deborah, Yasha^eyah and Yirmayah, ElYah and Eliyah, Howsha^e and Mycah, Chabaquwq and Tsephanyah, who were followed by Zakaryah, Yow^el, and Mal^aaky. And while there were others, many influential, some were different in that they weren't restricted to a single Earthly and Heavenly Existence, particularly Dowd and ElYah, the Nakar and his wife, Leah, the last two of whom have been inserted periodically into the timeline.

I came up with this conclusion because I don't think it is possible to go back in time and interact because it would alter the future from which the individual came, destroying the natural progression of cause and effect. And yet, occasionally, Yahowah needs to be able to guide certain people at precise intersections of time to keep His overall plan of reconciliation from being thwarted by a misdirected series of events that spirals out of control.

For example, Noach had to be at the right place at the right moment and with the right approach to salvage the human experiment, such that the mother of the Ark's family was likely the amah* | Productive Mother. Someone had to encourage Noach to break free of man's way and listen to God's approach, then engage to salvage neshamah-adam after Chawah had failed.

Moving forward in time and closer to her roots, Leah had to counteract Rachael and influence Ya^oaqob or there would have been no Yahuwd to reconcile Yisra^oel. The amah* | Productive Mother would spare Moseh when he was set adrift in the genocidal realm of Mitsraym. Moseh was essential to God's plan to liberate Yisra^oel and deliver the Towrah and he would not have survived otherwise.

Based upon the rhetoric, it will become evident that Yahowah's select feminine influence inspired Ruwth. She even admitted that she was the amah* | Productive Mother and overtly stated that she would deliver the Ga^oal | Kinsman Redeemer on behalf of Bo^oaz, her exceptionally strong husband.

The amah* would return in her most acclaimed role as Yahowah's esteemed Productive Mother when she saved Dowd from himself as is recorded in the Final Word Picture. It is among the most poignant of prophecies, and it is responsible for opening our eyes to what we should have seen and recognized previously.

There are even hints of the amah* in Deborah as the Judge and Prophet who inspired Yisra^oel to man up and stand up to tyranny and oppression. And Yahowah's Amah* is Leah today, creating the Covenant Family alongside her husband, Yada. The 31st Mashal is her story, as it is Dowd's recovery.

Yada is introduced as the Lesser Luminary and then described as the Tree of Knowledge, with him being tethered to Dowd on both occasions. I think Yahowah introduced how He intended to deploy him with Enoch which, more than a name depicts a mortal man who would be interjected into God's plans at crucial moments and then removed, only to be deployed as needed along the way. He is seen as MyDod prophesying alongside ElDod* at a critical moment for Moseh, only to disappear once the point was made.

He is likely Obel* 'Edom as the Ark of the Covenant is being relocated because he becomes the Man from 'Edom to save many through this Ark three-thousand years thereafter. I see him as someone who may have whispered in the ear of Nathan, the prophet who spoke to Dowd once Yahowah stopped communicating directly to His Son.

There are uniquely judgmental tones in the manner of Yada in the bold interactions of Yow'ab | Yah is My Father as he counseled the wayward King following the suppression of the Absolom revolt. He was likely showing Yahowah's paternal side.

In this regard, it has become apparent to me that I am the one responsible for telling Dowd who he is and what he would accomplish following his encounter with Yahowah's *Amah here in the Final Word Picture. You are free to disagree, of course, but prior to me putting all of the clues together to form and frame Yahowah's portrait of His Son, no one on Earth was aware of any of this – and nothing is more important pursuant to the reconciliation of mankind with God. Based upon my unique understanding of it and love for it, I wouldn't be surprised that Yahowah reinserted me to record the glorious 89th Mizmowr.

As Yada, I am the Nakar | Observant Foreigner of Dabarym 29 who Moseh revealed would arrive to oppose the religiosity of Israel as the final messenger to his people. He foretold that I would come as the world returns to Sodom and is scorched as a result. Therefore, I am the Nakry | Observant Foreigner of whom Shalomoh spoke when offering the commemoration address for the Home for Yahowah's Name on Taruw'ah in 961 BCE as presented in 2 Chronicles 6.

Yahowah spoke of me in His vivid portrayal of the Choter who would replace Dowd's father in Yasha'yah 11. In addition to affirming that He would enable our collaboration with His Ruwach, God equated me to the Tree of Knowledge in the Garden, promising that I'd be a Parah | Productive Bull.

As a result, I returned with Dowd to support the Messiah as he delivered and I explained the sweeping prophecies presented in Babylon to Daniel in 555 BCE. In that portrayal, he is Gabry^{el} | God's Most Courageous Man while I am Myka^{el} | One who is Right about God. Afterall, I was the first to unveil the meaning of these prophecies and generate the Timeline as everything that was foretold is playing out before our eyes.

Moving forward to our day, I've written extensively, sharing everything the world needs to know about Yahowah, Dowd, and their imminent return. As a result of my thirty-five books on Yahowah's testimony, revealing who God is and who He is not, I'm the only one who has been more insightful and verbose than Moseh, Dowd, or even Yasha^{yah}. And I'm doing so, married to Yahowah's amah* | Productive Mother.

These are my thoughts as I've contemplated the prophetic pretexts to the Last Mashal. I know who I am, where I've been, and where Yahowah intends to go with all of this. And I know my wife, who Yahowah says is the Greatest of Women, the Mother to His Covenant Family. Your interpretation of this material is up to you. My job is to find and explain it, and yours is to apply what I've discovered as you see fit.

Returning to the star attraction, when the most select of us, Dowd, deselected himself, Yahowah did as He had promised. He dispatched a woman and then her husband, to talk some sense to the son who had abandoned his calling. Had God not done so, there would have been no hope for humankind. The Cornerstone upon which the Covenant Home would be constructed was cracked and crumbling.

Please consider the gravity of this situation before we progress. Billions of men have acted badly and stolen another's wife. A million have even had a husband killed to secure the deal. But this wasn't any ordinary King ~ he's the future Savior of the world. And yet, no one knew it at the time ~ including Dowd, himself.

The solution to Yahowah's savior problem wouldn't be as easy as dialing up a contemporary because Dowd wasn't listening. There was no way to prevail at this time because no one on the planet had any clue as to what Dowd would have to achieve to salvage the human experiment. And that wouldn't be known for another 30 centuries from the time of Dowd's egregious offense. Even then, it would be another score of years thereafter for someone to finally come to the recognition that the King was slated to fulfill Pesach, Matsah, and Bikuwrym in his second of three lives in 33 CE. Four years later, this same man had his wife direct his attention to the Last Mashal.

So here we are, the subject of an arranged marriage by Yahowah, and likely for this purpose, on the very day we are celebrating our eighth anniversary. Her name was Lisa, but I renamed her Leah. She was abandoned by her father at birth. Her mother was psychotic and abusive. She suffered several miscarriages prior to adopting the daughter of the alcoholic and unfaithful man who also abandoned her, only to have her adopted daughter rebuff her love.

And as for us, we connected online a decade before we actually met because she was trying to assess why Ruth, Dowd's great grandmother, referred to herself as an amah* | Productive Mother. At the time, her opening question to me was the same one she posed to Dowd in the 31st Mashal. She did so to find out why I was translating the Towrah and Prophets because, in my books, which were posted online, she noted that I had written extensively about the feminine attributes associated with the ruwach. Our mutual intellectual curiosity blossomed long before we met and fell passionately in love. And not just with one another, but with the Towrah, its Beryth, the Mow^eedym, Yahowah, and Dowd.

As for me, my father was so abusive I had to get a restraining order against him. My mother proved useless in this regard. And my eldest son turned against me as I was working to protect, enable, and enrich him. His actions were so vile, after confronting him to no avail, I was determined to never speak to him or see him again. It had all progressed as was required to be properly equipped to engage in something quite similar and resolve the dispute between Yahowah and His Son.

But, of course, there is more to the story. Twenty-four years prior to this moment, Yahowah introduced Himself and asked me to work with Him. I went to Towrah school, with Yahowah as my professor and His ruwach as my tutors, investing one-hundred thousand hours of observation and contemplation. For a decade of that time, Leah was an email away, and for the next eight, she was at my side. In sharing what we were learning, we became inseparable, with all the synergy of an ideal marriage. The growing Covenant Family became our children.

This wasn't a surprise to Yah. He knew it would all play out this way. So confident was He that God began sharing the ultimate flashback in His story long ago, speaking of it prophetically as far back as the opening chapters of the Towrah.

It was poetic. The two people who came to love and respect Father and Son, Yahowah and Dowd, more than any other, devoting their lives to restoring the reputations the religious had purloined, would answer the call because they were listening. And they were willing.

It's not every day that two otherwise ordinary people get to save the world, but we have. In our service to Father and Son, we restored the relationship that Dowd had fractured. You'll read Leah's response in Mashal 31, and then Dowd's reply in Mizmowr 51. In reviewing it, I thought my wife was brilliant in her discussion with the King, telling her adopted son what he needed to hear. But, as it turns out, he needed a father too. He needed a dose of tough love with a side of unrelenting judgment.

While I still think that it was my wife's words that ultimately mattered, especially when I reinforced them, he came around and wrote the 116th Mizmowr on the way out of the mess he had made. King Dowd would go on to fulfill the Mow'edym and the Lesser Luminary would reflect his brilliance for having done so.

After our discussion, Dowd would write and speak through his Mizmowr and Mashal, affirming that he understood his purpose and concurred with the reasons behind it. And I would write Tree of Knowledge to turn Yisra^{el}'s attention to the Tree of Lives. And now, on the cusp of Shabu^wah, and in anticipation of Taru^wah, Dowd's adoptive father knows that he will be laying down his life to facilitate the Son of God's return.

For the first time, I'm now positioned to understand the reference to Yshay pursuant to the Choter. I'm replacing him... "A Choter | Stem (choter – a shoot or secondary branch, a sprout as a sucker, a pliable wooden implement as a standard of measure, a secondary source of growth serving as a living entity delivering progeny by being observant, willing to listen, and committed to thinking while collecting the things Yah values as a means to project Himself in association with a tree) will be extended (yatsa^{*} – he will be brought forth to serve) out of (min) the stump which has been cut down so that it is capable of supporting new growth (geza^o) of Yshay | to Stand Out and Be Noticed, drawing attention to the substance of existence (Yshay), as (wa) a Netser | Observant Branch (netser – a stem or shoot which extends from a primary limb of the tree; from natsar – to observe, watch over, and preserve, to closely look after, focus on, and protect) by means of (min) its roots, and that which keeps it anchored, steadfast, and nourished (sheresh huw^o), such that he will continually bear an abundance of fruit, being a productive Bull while encouraging productivity in others (parah). (Yasha^o yah / Isaiah 11:1)

Yshay was the fallen stump that had to be cut down for the Netser | Observant Branch to be extended as the Choter | Stem, revitalizing the roots that had gone dormant over time. Yisra^{el} would become productive again at long last.

So that you have an appreciation for the mess Dowd had made for himself, be aware that even the worst of what we do can be resolved up until the point it changes who we are or compromises our relationship with Yahowah. And when the errors in judgment are serious and compounded, when they are committed by someone who, of all people, should have known better, and when they negate the credibility and corrupt the judgment of the man chosen for the most important role in human history, the problem becomes catastrophic.

What Dowd did was so horrific, Yahowah was compelled to not only step away, distancing Himself from His Son, he had to publicly rebuke the man He loved most of all. Unfortunately, Dowd did not respond well, and like Adam before him, he tried to hide from God. Then, in the inverse of Moseh who begged Yahowah to kill him, Dowd was convinced that he had brought certain death, even hell, upon himself. He managed to confuse what he would do to negate these effects with what he had done to deserve them.

This was bad, and there was nothing God could do by Himself to resolve the problem for all of the reasons we've just considered. And so Yahowah's resolution would be delivered by working through His creation to save humankind. In so doing, this approach provides a window to understand the resolution God provided throughout the Towrah and Prophets ~ even unto this day.

God's approach, while fraught with the potential of human failure, was the only way to restore our fallen condition in a manner capable of earning Yahowah's trust. It is what God wants most from us. We are nothing in God's eyes until He perceives that He can trust us. And the test isn't to be perfect, because Yahowah wants us to stumble and fall so that we can demonstrate the resolve to rise. It's only when we make mistakes that we can learn from them and grow beyond them. This makes Dowd the perfect example.

Looking back in time, there was no way for the Almighty under these conditions to resolve His conflict with Adam, so Eden was shuttered. It is why Yahowah couldn't deal with the Naphylym and chose the flood. This explains why He toppled Babel rather than negotiating with the religious. It is why He could narrate the Covenant with *Abraham but couldn't form it without His Son. This is why Moseh felt so alone and lacked the will and strength to prevail against the onslaught of naysayers until shown *ElDod and MyDod. Prior to their arrival, there would be no one prepared and willing to intervene, to bring Yahowah's message down to Earth, and to be resolute in defense of our God and His way.

Therefore, in light of what I'm going to share, it is apparent that Adam, Moseh, and Dowd struggled and fell for the same reason ~ the lack of parental support and guidance. Yahowah longs to fulfill this role, and He will one day when we are released into the seventh dimension. But here on Earth, He is too far beyond us to serve in this capacity. And He knows that overwhelming us only adds to the consternation and anxiety as it did during the Exodus when Israel told Yahowah to shut up and to go away.

In a way, we are all Adam, and no one more so than Dowd. Moseh is retired, but the King is not. To succeed in his return, he would need what he did not have in the beginning ~ a devoted human mother and father to guide and support him.

As a result, the 31st Mashal begins with an intervention. A remarkable woman, who is introduced elsewhere as Yahowah's *amah | Productive Mother, is inserted at this time to counsel her adoptive son. This intercession was required because Yahowah had become so distraught over Dowd's lack of respect and judgment that they were no longer on speaking terms ~ and hadn't been for fourteen years.

The King was languishing in his timeout for bad behavior. To recover and save the world, he needed the counsel of a right-minded *em | mother with a supportive father chiming in thereafter to pull him out of his stupor. And so, in the concluding Proverb, we find Yahowah's resolution to the most debilitating breach of trust in human history ~ an *oz | strong and chakmah | wise *em | mother. In fulfilling her role, she would become the greatest of them all.

In this presentation, we see Yahowah's literary genius. He had foreshadowed this eventuality many times, but we never managed to pick up on it, even as it was always there in plain sight. In fact, it was at my wife's urging that I returned to the preamble of Bare^osyth / Genesis 2:24-25. As you consider this assessment, please substitute the ultimate man for the first man and think of the em* | mother of this Mashal as the woman...

“So (wa), Yahowah (Yahowah), Almighty (*elohym), He caused the fall (naphal) of man (*al ha *adam) for being somewhat lethargic due to a lack of work and diligence (tardemah). He slept, inert and inactive, unmotivated and sedentary (yashen). And so, He grasped hold of (wa laqach) one (echad) of his ribs, symbolic of that which was limp and lame, from his side (min tsela^o huw^{}). He sutured up and isolated (sagar) the place beneath it, replacing it over time (thachath hy^{*}) with a Basar | Human Herald (basar). (Bare^osyth / Genesis 2:21)

Yahowah (Yahowah), as God (*elohym), He constructed, building a family on behalf of the son (banah), offering a woman (la *ishah) through the rib, removing what was limp and lame (*eth ha tsela^o) which (*asher) He had taken (laqach) from (min) the man (ha adam). And (wa) He brought her with unfolding implications over time (bow^{}hy^{*}) to (*el) the man (*adam). (Bare^osyth 2:22)

Then, the man (wa ha *adam), said (amar), ‘This (zo^{}th) is the way to conduct one's life, the pattern of behavior to be followed and the motivation to push forward (la pa^{*}am). It is the essential nature and substance of an upright life (*etsem). Out of (min) my essence and humanity (*etsem *any), a living person is able to communicate intelligently, an individual with whom to talk in the flesh (basar) for my desire to share positive thoughts as a herald while human (min basar *any).

For this reason (la z^ooth), she shall be welcomed and called, designated and known as (qara^{*}) the woman (*ishah) because, indeed (ky), for (min) man (*iysh) she was selected and obtained (laqach z^ooth). (Bare^osyth 2:23)

Accordingly, therefore (*al ken), a man, this individual male (*iysh), he will leave, rejecting and forsaking for having been absent from and abandoned by (*azab) his father (eth ab huw) and his mother (wa *eth em huw) and then he will engage, becoming close by being joined together with (wa dabaq) with his woman (ba ishah huw). And they shall exist as and become (wa hayah) a unified (*echad) declaration regarding heralding the pronouncements of life (la basar). (Bare^osyth 2:24)

The two (wa shanaym), this man (ha *adam) and his woman (wa ishah huw), they were (hayah hem) completely exposed without barriers between them (arowm), and they were no longer wrong, disapproved, or mistaken (lo bowsh).” (Bare^osyth / In the Beginning / Genesis 2:25)

I am proposing that these otherwise incongruent statements were actually astute and prophetic. I am suggesting that they were extended to foreshadow the transformative message of the concluding Word Picture in Mashal 31. I’m convinced that Yahowah is revealing that He would replace the mother His Son never knew and the father who never knew him, with others who were better equipped to guide the First Son through life.

Holding on to *azab a moment longer, we find that its primary meaning is to abandon, forsake, reject, and to be absent. So, when prompted by the full implications of *azab, it’s germane to recognize that Adam and Chawah didn’t have a father or mother whom they could reject for having abandoned them. And by extension, someone far more important to God’s story would find themselves in this position and need replacements ~ Dowd.

After the King was exposed and rebuked for having killed a man to steal his wife, Yahowah was so disappointed in His Son’s response that he needed someone to help the King accept responsibility and right the wrong that would have otherwise precluded him from fulfilling his destiny. Therefore, just as Dowd is the antidote for Adam’s lethargy, there would be another woman to replace Chawah on account of her betrayal, deceit, and lack of support. Call me crazy if you want, but I think this is the message God is delivering in the Towrah and in the Mashal.

There are many other suggestions that point us to the same conclusion, with many of them arising within Dowd's Mizmowr. For example, in Psalm 86, we read...

“You want to turn back to me, having chosen to appear before me, face to face (*panah *el any – Your desire is to change your orientation toward me and be present before me (qal imperative second-person masculine singular)).

Your desire is to be merciful and kind to me, because You have decided to favor me and be generous to me (*wa chanan any – You have chosen to care about and be compassionate toward me (qal imperative second-person masculine singular)).

You want to give what I've emphatically requested (nathan – Your will and my desire is for You to bestow (qal imperative cohortative paragogic he second-person masculine singular)), Your power, strength, and fortification (oz atah – Your might and resolve, Your commitment to being steadfast and uncompromising) on behalf of Your *ebed | Coworker (*la *ebed atah – for the One Working with You).

You and I want You to liberate the Son, saving through the Son by delivering (wa yasha la ben* – You have chosen and I resolutely desire for You to make the Son a victorious Savior by offering salvation through (hifil imperative cohortative paragogic he second-person masculine singular)) Your *amah | Motherly Coworker (amah atah – of Your Bondswoman and Female Servant, the most Productive of Women through whom others are measured; equivalent to amah* – cubit which is the unit of measure from the elbow to the tip of the longest finger, and from em* – mother with the feminine ah suffix indicating the full measure of a woman, mother, and servant).” (Mizmowr / Psalms 86:16)

Even before the period of estrangement, God had a plan to resolve the biggest crisis of the human experiment – Dowd’s four failures pursuant to Bathsheba. With more than seventeen sexual partners, the King of Israel schemed to have sex with a woman married to a good man in the Covenant. After getting her pregnant, Dowd then plotted to kill her husband. That plan included having the man’s own father set up and abandon his son to die. And then after all of that, Dowd withdrew, becoming a lousy king, a miserable father, and a terrible son. God was so disappointed and distraught over this betrayal, that He was no longer talking with His Son. They stood apart.

But it could not stay that way because Dowd is the fulcrum upon which the human experience pivots from death to life and from religion to relationship. If he can’t be trusted, if he and Yahowah can no longer collaborate to fulfill Chag Matsah, there is no hope for humanity. All seven Mow^edym would go unfulfilled and the planet would be destroyed.

Yahowah’s solution was one I had not considered or anticipated. He would bring two people together who would later serve as husband and wife, even as exemplars of the Covenant, such that they would devote their lives to conceiving the Covenant Family. But long before any of that would transpire, He would have her serve as Dowd’s adoptive mother and him as his replacement father. She would be Yahowah’s amah* | Productive Mother and Coworker. In their collaboration, she would serve as the conscience Dowd had misplaced, bringing Father and Son together again ~ albeit with an assist from her husband.

The amah* would give Dowd the impetus he needed to begin pulling out of his self-imposed exile and funk, making it possible for Father and Son to face one another again. God would save a man through a woman, and the man would return the favor and save all humankind.

As out of the box as this seems, it was always Yahowah’s plan. In the next and concluding line of the same Psalm, we read...

“You have decided to act, engaging with me, such that You working with me serves to provide for me (asah *im any – You want to make and create in collaboration with me (qal imperative second-person masculine singular)) a genuinely good, resolutely moral, and overtly positive sign, a miraculous symbol of femininity whose attitude and aptitude are productive and beneficial (owth la towbah* – an example of feminine excellence on account of her goodness who is valuable and agreeable).

Then (wa), those who have shunned and abhorred me, and who dislike and slight me (sane any – those who are prone to be hostile toward me (qal participle plural)) may choose to see and understand (*ra*ah* – they might elect to witness and notice (qal imperfect jussive third-person plural)) and be ashamed and humiliated for their decision (wa bowsh – be shown to have been wrong, grossly mistaken, disgraced as time goes by and they are delayed (qal imperfect jussive third-person masculine plural)), because You, Yahowah (*ky atah Yahowah), supported me, helping and assisting me (azar any – You came to my aid as my succor and benefactor (qal perfect second-person masculine singular)), and You consoled me, relenting regarding me, reconsidering Your disposition toward me (*wa nacham any – You showed compassion toward me by relenting, no longer harboring Your disappointment (piel perfect second-person masculine singular)).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalms 86:17)

Yahowah’s amah* | Mother of Mothers would be the owth la Towbah* | Genuinely Good, Resolutely Moral, and Overtly Positive Sign, the miraculous symbol of femininity whose attitude and aptitude would be productive and beneficial. With this so prominently displayed, how did we miss it? I’ve been serving as a Herald for the King for a score and four years and I did not see this coming ~ and the amah* is my wife.

At least I was sufficiently wise to name her appropriately as Leah Winn, recognizing that she would become symbolic as the mother of the Yahuwdym. Turns out, ours really was an arranged marriage, just as I had suspected and often joked, calling Leah my gift from God. And in this way, Yahowah further inspired her and my support for His Son. We had previously been positioned to reconcile the fractured family, creating a change of mind and heart so that Yahowah could relent toward him, no longer harboring His disappointment.

The closing lines of the 86th Mizmowr are sufficient to demonstrate God's point. Yahowah is committed to engaging with Dowd, and as a result God has decided to provide for His Son's restoration so that Dowd could fulfill his destiny and restore the rest of us. He just needed a little assist along the way.

While I will cite more supportive prophecies, I'd prefer to present and discuss the Final Word Picture before we consider all of the many pretexts and consequence of that meeting. And as we dive headfirst into the narrative, we find that what the em* | mother has to share with her surrogate son is cryptic at first, then detailed, even graphic, and finally so precise it leaves no doubt as to the moral of this story. Nevertheless, I'm certain that we are the first to understand it and share it, which is actually not surprising considering the subject and the intent.

That said, explaining the cause and effect of this stunning intervention and trial by fire is perhaps the most difficult task I have ever undertaken. Not only am I, and especially my wife, portrayed in it, our King, the man whose reputation we have invested our current lives resurrecting, was so immoral, he would not have been allowed to fulfill Chag Matsah or return as King without our contribution. Quite literally, we saved him from himself so that he could save the rest of us.

To some extent, this was a test of our rhetoric and of Dowd's response. Just as Abraham passed the test to affirm the proper conveyance of the Covenant, the King would have to prevail on this occasion to prove that he could be trusted to enable the Covenant's benefits.

Obviously, we know that Dowd ultimately showed himself worthy, proving that he could learn from his mistakes and be all the wiser and better for them. He could get back up once fallen, demonstrating that he could be relied upon. And in this, we find additional proof that Yahowah isn't seeking perfection, but instead character forged in fire. Without failing, we have no way to show that we can be counted upon to succeed.

Dowd is Yahowah's Chosen, His Firstborn and Coworker, the Exemplar of the Covenant. He is our Savior, Messiah, and King. Dowd is a prophet, storyteller, and songwriter, equal parts cerebral and emotional. No one defended God's people with greater courage or contributed to God's story more passionately. His lyrics were typically sublime, but his life was often messy. And there is no worse episode than the one that necessitated the motherly advice presented within the 31st Mashal.

While we will detail it in due time, for reference, Dowd's most egregious mistake in judgment is presented in 2nd Shamuw^{el} 11 and 12. But that story is more than just how one crime cascaded into a deluge of bad decisions, plot twists, disappointments, and denials, because we are ultimately reminded that everyone Yahowah chooses, that He equips and deploys, ultimately buckles under the pressure, including Dowd ~ the most gibowr | courageous and capable of men.

Although, on this occasion, our King had no one to blame but himself. And based upon the introduction to the Proverb, I suspect his vices became wine and women as he tried to cope with the responsibility of living up to Yahowah's expectations.

From the moment Dowd succumbed to the temptation of Bathsheba, his judgment was compromised. That would have to change for the King to fulfill all God had to say about him and wanted to achieve with him. And for this to occur, he would not only need a good talking to while undergoing detoxification, he would need to demonstrate that when tempted again, he would respond with praise rather than indulgence. He would come to recognize that this bright and beautiful woman, even as the most acclaimed, belonged to another and was his to respect, but not take.

The Final Word Picture begins with the dabarym | words of *Lamow el Melek | God's Indispensable King. As such, the dramatic prose of the 31st Mashal was scribed by Dowd. His words are as cathartic as they are constructive, as pertinent as they are prophetic.

When we take a closer look, there may be a much deeper meaning to *lamow*el*. La is a preposition addressing the idea of approaching and drawing near. It is commonly rendered "to or toward," and is conveyed as "concerning," "according to," or "on behalf of." Dowd would facilitate our approach to God by fulfilling the Mow*edym.

Mow isn't a standalone word in Hebrew, but it is famously and similarly deployed when addressing the ed* | restoring witness instead of el* | God in *Mow*ed*. When designating Yahowah's seven annual meetings, mow encourages us to ponder the full meaning of the life-giving and soul-cleansing implications of the ed* | restoring witness to the eternal testimony. It harkens back to Dowd serving as the Greater Luminary by becoming the sign of the Mow*edym.

Melek is sovereign, king, or leader. It shares a common root with *mal*ak* | messenger which is why it is also defined as a counselor and advisor on occasions. Dowd was prolific in both roles.

In the pictographic impressions of paleo-Hebrew, reading right to left, this is scribed: klm la fml. With three  staffs, we are dealing with a shepherd. With two iterations of  water, he is life giving and cleansing. The  tent peg reveals that his position with God is secure and grounded. The a, which was drawn to depict both a ram's and bull's head, indicates that we are privy to someone authorized to lead, someone who will fulfill the Mow*edym. And the  open hand is indicative of a man who is engaged, offering something to us.

Connecting these concepts, *Lamow*el Melek* speaks of the King of the Mow*ed serving God. He is the Sovereign Closest to the Almighty whose life we should consider to approach Yahowah. He is King Dowd.

The Final Word Picture begins...

“The words (dabarym – the message) of *Lamow el Melek | the Sovereign Counselor and King Inseparable from God (*Lamow el Melek – the King Indispensable to God and the Supreme Adviser on behalf of God).

This is a profoundly poignant prophetic pronouncement, a heavy burden to be born while paying tribute to someone tremendously uplifting with strong, heartfelt yearnings, revealed in a prophecy pertaining to the past and future (masa – this is a heavy load to bear, a problem which must be carried by one who is submissive to one who is more dominant, it is a distressful hardship to be lifted away as part of an announcement from God) that, as a benefit of the relationship and to reveal the way (asher – revealing the path to the greatest joy in life), his em* | mother (em huw) taught to him for the express purpose of correcting him (*yasar huw – she instructed him for his acceptance, edification, and improvement, and especially to make him more disciplined by correcting his prior bad behavior (piel perfect third-person feminine singular – at this moment this man benefited from the correction from his mother)).” (Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:1)

The dabarym | words of the *Lamow*el Melek* portray his encounter with the em* | mother counseling him, and with the el* | God revealing Himself through them. Dabarym are the medium of communication and thought. They are the gateway to knowing and understanding. Dabarym are the most valuable tools in the universe. Cherish them. Digest these.

The 31st Mashal / Word Picture is a *masa, a term which implies many things. It is first and foremost a masa | profoundly poignant prophetic pronouncement. That is to say that Yahowah brought this heretofore unnamed em | mother in to counsel her wayward son because, once sobered by her advice, the King's lives and lyrics would come to embody all that *masa represents.

In these words, Dowd is masa | paying tribute to the em | mother Yahowah sent to *masa | lift the guilt her adoptive son had piled on top of himself and *masa | carry it away. In that *masa is based on nasa | to lift up and carry away, this remarkable em | mother will do for her son what her son would ultimately do and now has done for humanity.

Dowd was depressed, loaded down with more guilt than he could bear. He had become a tremendous disappointment, so rotten and self-indulgent at the moment, God couldn't stand his beloved Son's stench. It was that bad.

The boy who craved women, and surrounded himself with far more wives and concubines than are named, chose poorly, and likely came to disrespect women as a result. Mykel was a bad idea from the beginning, and turned worse after Sha^{uwl} demanded a bride price of one-hundred Philistine foreskins (read: scalps of the little head) and Dowd doubled up and paid two-hundred. After briefly protecting Dowd from her demonic dad, Sha^{uwl} grew angry with Mykel and married her off to a pathetic man, only to have Dowd steal her from him. Thereafter, he watched her turn against him, doing so shortly after arriving in Jerusalem. Her rebuke of her husband is the centerpiece of 2nd Shamu^{el} 6 and has been shared previously. But what I did not mention is that when Mykel accused Dowd of not being kabowd | significant in God's eyes and of embarrassing himself, in his retort, Dowd revealed that the amah* would perceive and appreciate his full kabowd | value.

His second wife, Abigail, was also married to a man with whom Dowd had a dispute. And while she kept the King from killing her husband, he died mysteriously within days of the clash and then she scampered off to Dowd.

The first to produce a son was Ahinoam, but she must not have been much of a mother since her son, Amnon, raped his half-sister, Tamar. This motivated Dowd's second son, Absalom, to kill Amnon in revenge. Dowd's failure to intervene either time caused his downfall because Absalom would lead a coup against his father.

The other four named wives, Maakah, Haggith, Abital, and Eglah, were all claimed in Hebron before the King relocated to Jerusalem and added many more. And sadly, none of these wives or love interests are shown ever contributing anything of value to the King, and one, Bathsheba, proved disastrous.

Adding to the intrigue, there isn't a single word or a name attributed to Dowd's birthmother, indicating that she had no influence in his life. And so now, in his darkest hour, when his lust for love estranged him from its Source, Yahowah brought an em* | mother into his life. After their discussion, the King will pronounce that that this em* | mother is the greatest of them all. Her *masa | heartfelt yearnings on behalf of God's Son, *masa | peeled away his self-imposed burdens. She did so by giving him a healthy scrubbing of truth.

This em* | mother knows her adoptive son. She realizes what he is to become. And she bathes him and readorns him so that he is sufficiently cleansed to fulfill his destiny. And that is what makes the *masa | so profoundly poignant. Dowd is *masa | paying homage to the first woman in his life who forced him to confront reality. And the first thing she will tell him is to beware of women, and never forfeit your calling because of one.

You may have noted a subtle distinction between Dowd's gratitude to Yahowah for sending *Yahowah's amah to redeem him in the Mizmowr and now to the King referring to the same woman as em huw | his mother here in the Mashal. He knows that Yahowah sent her and he has adopted her just as she has adopted him. When the relationship is as it is intended, both parent and child realize that love by choice is as real as it is by birth.

Killing a good man to steal another wife, when he had a different one for breakfast, lunch, and dinner seven days a week, was a *masa | heavy burden of the worst order. It said that Dowd had no respect for life, men, women, family, or marriage and that he had ceased to be an exemplar for his people. He would have to override his *masa | yearnings, and prioritize his responsibilities as King.

This was not optional because, as the Son of God, he would either fulfill Passover or end all hope of life on the planet. But that was out of the question and not to be until he could demonstrate he could be trusted. Our Savior would have to demonstrate that he was ready to accept the help of another to share his burdens, such that God could proceed with him to remove ours by fulfilling the Mow^eedym. Quite literally, the redemption of humankind was riding in the balance. As such, this *masa | is a prophecy delivered for us to cherish at this late date, just months from entering the final countdown to Dowd's return as King on Yowm Kipurym | the Day of Reconciliations.

Moving to the third term comprising the opening statement, asher* is Dowd's favorite word, as it is mine. It is the first word he wrote in his initial Mizmowr / Psalm and the first I translated 24 years ago. Not-so-coincidentally, I first encountered asher* in 2nd Shamuw^eel 7, which is where this story begins. And there, it reveals that when guilt is associated with Dowd, as it was on this day with his own, and during the Mow^eed of Matsah when he carried ours into She^wowl, Yahowah would take a full accounting of it.

asher* reveals that the final Mashal is shared to explain the way the benefits of the Covenant relationship were revealed and delivered. And as a plot twist I never saw coming, the heroine in this story is afforded the name ashar* | Blessed and Beneficial in recognition of all she has worked to achieve. Many would ashar* | benefit and be blessed by her.

But, as they say, there is more to the story. As I mentioned, when Leah showed up on my doorstep ten years ago this day, her name was Lisa. Since we were falling in love and beginning a new life, she asked me to give her a new name, which I did, calling her Leah Winn. Now, I recognize that it was inspired, especially after reading this today...

“And (wa) Leah (Leah) literally said with unfolding implications over time (amar* – she declared (qal imperfect third-person feminine singular)), ‘Then (ba – with, by, and in, now), ashar* | Blessed and Beneficial (asher* – showing the way to the benefits of the relationship and revealing the means to enjoy life) am I (any*). This is because (ky), a time will come when daughters will be guided to an upright life by me and women will be encouraged and blessed, benefiting and happy because of me (ashar any bath – females will, at another time, advance and become prosperous, correctly taught, and able to progress as a result of me (piel perfect third-person plural)).’

So (wa), she proclaimed that which pertained to his name as (qara eth shem huw – she invited and summoned him by the personal and proper name, welcoming and appointing his designation as (qal imperfect third-person feminine singular)) Asher (asher).” (*Bare*syth* / Beginning / Genesis 30:13)

Leah is, therefore, as the Final Word Picture paints her ~ ashar* | Blessed and Beneficial. It is one of many affirmations.

Out of curiosity, I thought it might be interesting to see what else we might deduce from the name Leah. With the opening Lamed ل, it speaks of woman tending the flock. This seems appropriate because my Leah, like her namesake, was a shepherdess, tending a large flock of sheep before I met her. The most relevant term underlying the realization that Leah eaل is the amah* | Productive Mother is ahab* | bea | love which begins as Leah ends. Therefore, if I may interpret the Hebrew pictographic letters ~ Leah is Shepherding the Flock by Standing Beside and Loving her Bull.

Especially revealing, the opening verb in the Final Word Picture is yasar. It reveals that *Lamow*el Melek’s em | mother provided instructions for the express purpose of correcting her adopted son. She was yasar | disciplining him. Her stated goal was for the King to yasar | improve his behavior and to yasar | show some restraint as a result of her admonition.

The em* would be the parental disciplinarian he needed especially now, before all was lost. Dowd would have to accept that he had been horribly wrong, that he had erred many times over, and that it was time for him to grow up, mature as a man, and learn from his mistakes.

And so, with this introduction, Dowd is neither leader nor teacher, neither exemplar nor right. He was being corrected.

I have already shared some thoughts on em huw | his mother, but I'd like to add some others before we move on and consider what she asks her son to contemplate. In addition to mother, em* can be used to address a "caregiver or provider." It can describe a "dam" or a "point of departure or division." Also, scribed identically in the Hebrew text, im* is a conditional participle and used to introduce an if / then proposition, hypothetical, or conditional clause to prompt deep thinking with an emphasis on personal responsibility. And while I am not suggesting that all of these apply in this situation, when dealing with concepts of this magnitude, it's helpful to be completely grounded.

In this regard, I'd like to share something that would be exceptionally reassuring for Dowd, a man who never knew the love or experienced the counsel of a human mother or father. Not only is Dowd's mother unnamed, which is remarkable in that he is the central character in God's story, but his father was worthless. Yishay | Jesse says and does nothing in support of Dowd. And that is why he's replaced by the Choter as previously demonstrated.

There are numerous places in the Psalms and Writings when Dowd, speaking to his Heavenly Father, refers to his mother as amah*. I shared one of these from the 87th Mizmowr. We find another in the 116th Mizmowr which serves to affirm that the Amah's* words would finally resonate with him, enabling him to fulfill Pesach, Matsah, and Bikuwrym. And so, while we will consider this Mizmowr later in its entirety, here is that snippet for your consideration...

“O (anah*), Yahowah (Yahowah), Indeed, it is true (ky), I am Your Coworker (any* ebed* atah*). I am (any*) Your Servant (ebed* atah*), the son (ben) of Your amah* | Productive Mother and Coworker (amah* Atah* – Your Most Motherly Servant).

You have responded to open and release (patach – You have loosened and freed (piel perfect second-person masculine singular)) that which pertains to my bonds, freeing me from my punishment through disciplined instruction (la mowser any* – my shackles, fetters, and chains representing correction through a stern rebuke pursuant to a just penalty because of the warning).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 116:16)

Hopefully, the picture becoming clearer at this point. Surely you noted that on both occasions the amah* | Motherly Coworker is described as Yahowah’s. She is offered to Dowd by God to release His Son from the penalty he would otherwise have earned. And here, she is shown having done so through a stern rebuke of her foster child.

As we move through the Last Mashal and ponder its implications as the explanations are presented throughout the Mizmowr, it is my conclusion that Leah, as Yada’s wife, restores Dowd’s relationship with Yahowah so as to enable a marvelous collaboration between the three of them, Yahowah, Dowd, and Yada, all on behalf of her people.

As a reminder, Leah and I have a history in this regard. We met online eighteen years ago because, when she was searching to better understand her role in Yahowah’s plan, it was God who told her, “Go ask Ruth.”

She did, and this is what she read: “Then he asked with ongoing implications (wa amar*), ‘Who are you (my ath*)?’ She answered (wa amar*), ‘I am Ruwth (anoky* Ruwth – Longing and Striving to Shepherd the Flock, to tend to and feed the sheep; from ra uwth* and ra ah*), your amah* | Productive Mother (amah* atah* – your Coworker and Motherly Servant; from em* – mother).

So, spread and stretch out (wa paras) the hem of your garment as your wings (*kanaph atah) over your amah* | Maternal Coworker (amah atah – your Productive Mother and cubit as a unit of measure) who is branded and marked (ky) to deliver the Ga'al | Kinsman Redeemer saving you (*ga'al atah – delivering the Savior who will redeem you (qal participle masculine singular – noting that ky | marked is masculine singular as is the Ga'al)).” (Ruwth / Longing to Shepherd the Flock / Ruth 3:9)

And if that were insufficient to garner our attention, the man that she was addressing was Bo'az | In Strength and With Power. He would not only become her husband, this is the name of the left pillar of the House for Yahowah's Name, soaring eighteen amah* | cubits (according to 1 Kings 7:15), signifying the number of years Leah has known her Bo'az Bull. Yahowah was clearly having fun with my wife, and for a purpose, even if it were one that she would not fully understand for another eighteen years. And it would be by Nakry to Nakry because Ruwth and I share this title.

Upon reading Yahowah's answer, Lisa, now Leah, began searching to see if anyone had spoken of this remarkable woman in association with God and our redemption. And that is what led her to me, because I was the first to realize that, while Yahowah consistently portrays Himself as our Father in the masculine singular, His ruwach | spirit and nepesh | soul are feminine. The ishah* | fire He encourages us to approach during the Mow'edym is also feminine as is His Towrah | Guidance. Its crown jewel, the Beryth | Covenant, is feminine as well. And so, from this, I had extrapolated that there must also be a maternal aspect of Yahowah's nature involved in our redemption, making Him ever more complete, nurturing, and productive, even loving. And I extrapolated this to the idea of the Ruwach Qodesh making a Garment of Light to adorn the Covenant's children during the Mow'edym, much like a loving mother would adorn a beloved child.

This perception of a beloved seamstress is born out throughout Mashal / Proverbs 31, and to an overwhelming extent. And this was music to my ears because it affirmed that I had been right all along. The *em | mother addressing Dowd throughout the 31st Mashal is shown designing and making apparel to properly adorn her son and her other children. Also, throughout the Mashal | Word Pictures, there are copious references to a mother's insights and compassion, and their relevance pursuant to our redemption.

Therefore, by being the first to acknowledge and openly discuss these things, the woman God says will be revered beyond all others became my wife. And that perspective is helpful here because it sets up her credentials as the *em | mother who became the wife of Yada as a result of the meeting Yahowah arranged to lovingly discipline our King.

Beyond the recognition of *em, I have also gone on to become a student of what Yahowah is actually conveying when He expands the potential and power of words like *em | mother as *amah | productive mother, *adam | man becoming *adamah | productive individual, par | bull developing as parah | fruitful and productive. This is true with *ets | tree growing substantially in its expressiveness and productivity when presented as *etsah | counsel on the entire story.

Appreciating these insights, I realized that neither men nor God become transsexuals when portrayed by their nepesh or ruwach. By contributing the feminine to the masculine, as is the case with male chromosomes ~ XY ~ the result was to blend the best of both, adding the emotional to the rational, passion to conviction. This makes the result more complete and capable – productive – as is the case with Yahowah and His *adamah Parah | Productive Man and Bull.

While these insights brought Leah to her Bo*az ten years after we met as a result of a protracted sequence of thoughtful email discussions, our understanding of Yahowah has matured considerably. But that is not the case with a particularly devious woman who, as one of Leah's friends, had been invited into the Covenant Family before proving she didn't belong. Wanting to find herself in God's story, and write Leah and I out of it, she claimed that I had not gone nearly far enough in recognizing the existence of a Spiritual Mother whom she portrays as an entirely separate and distinct individual. And the fact is, I had actually gone just far enough to garner Leah's attention, and earn Yahowah's respect, without going anywhere close to the point Yahowah is transformed into a hermaphrodite by the Mother Goddess.

Making this ever more poignant and relevant, the psychotic woman not only turned on my wife, mercilessly slandering her in jealous rage, she formed a Mother Goddess Clique by passing herself off as authoritative by imitating me while attracting her audience by hash-tagging my name. So, Yahowah's denouncement of her in Isaiah 57, seems to set up God's admiration of my wife here in the Last Mashal.

More than all of this, with this Proverb speaking for em* | mom, the Mother Goddess Cult is further condemned. They have falsified all manner of nonsensical claims to conceive their Mother God. And yet, em* cannot be found in text they misuse to promote the Mother Goddess. But now, when em* is presented as the speaker, what she says eviscerates those claiming to speak for her. This em* | mother not only redeems the King the Goddesses are wont to demean, but she is the wife of the man they slander to justify speaking over me. And in the end, this em* | mother, Yahowah's amah* | Standard of Measure for Mothers, is called ashar* | Blessed and Beneficial as the Greatest of Women. How's that for serving up some serious crow?

When identifying the author of this Word Picture and the remarkable woman serving as Dowd's surrogate mother, we are reminded that the recounting of this correctional narrative was written by *Lamow el Melek | the Sovereign Counselor and King Inseparable from God. And Dowd is the only King of whom Yahowah declares is elyown* | the Hand of Almighty God.

While that's assuredly correct, I'd like to reinforce the surprising realization that we know nothing of Dowd's birth-mother. She is never named and she was of no influence before her famous son's eighth birthday. And prior to this age, we carry only the most vivid memories of our childhood into our adult lives. This means it is likely Dowd recalled virtually nothing of her. This may be intended to say that the birth mother of the Son of God is unidentifiable and without standing because God didn't want her venerated as the "Mother of God" as is the case with many pagan religions including Christianity.

Therefore, Dowd is presented alone, tending sheep in Bethlehem, estranged from his natural family. And as a result, there is no way that his birthmother could have inspired the adult nature of the conversation which follows, especially since it speaks of alcohol abuse and forfeiting one's calling in life over the lustful pursuit of women. Especially relevant, the impetus for the following intervention wouldn't arise until the eight-year-old turned fifty-six, making the birthmother scenario absurdly improbable. Beyond this, the resulting prophetic narrative regarding this extraordinary episode wouldn't be deciphered for another 3,050 years.

Also relevant, it isn't possible to ascribe the voice of this em* | mother to God because her message is graphic and it concludes with Dowd referring to her using the title Leah claimed for herself, ashar* | Blessed and Beneficial, centuries before the King was born. And then he removes all doubt, saying the this em* is the Greatest of Women. Therefore, while the mother dressing down the King was orchestrated by God, she is entirely human, albeit from another place and time.

With this in mind, our attention is drawn back to Ruwth, who, after revealing that she was the prototypical amah* | Productive Mother, affirmed that she would be delivering the Ga'al | Kinsman Redeemer, who is Dowd, to her husband, Bo'az | With Strength, representing one of the two pillars of the Home for Yahowah's Name. And as we have already discovered, there are numerous other places in the Mizmowr and Writings where Dowd, speaking to Yahowah, says that God's Amah* | Maternal Servant intervened to save him from himself.

While that is a lot to process, we have just begun, and as we proceed, be aware that there are no verbs, just interrogatories posing questions in what follows. More relevant still, the em* | mother didn't use the common word for son, which is ben, but instead, bar which is almost majestic in its implications – all of which we'll consider in a moment.

There are six questions posed by mah: who, what, where, why, when, and how. Therefore, since it was asked three times, I picked two of the six for each occasion.

While every question is worth pondering, it's apparent that God's chosen em* | mother wants her son to contemplate who he is and why he matters ~ clues which are provided by bar as we shall see. And she wants Dowd to think about how our collective collaboration will serve everyone's interests, including God's and his own. And it is for us to understand where and when all of this would play out in his and our lives.

“Who and when is the question (mah – an interrogative pertaining to an individual or occasion, a method or something that has been written to be pondered by rational thought) my radiant and bright, chosen son (*bar any – my favorite child, my judgmental and thoughtful boy, the one whose brilliance is reflected in the moonlight who was selected for this relationship and for me to provide understanding, my cleansing fruit)?

Ponder how and why this is so mah – asking a question about a person, event, time, or methodology to be deduced by reasoning that has been discussed previously) my favorite child and thoughtful boy (*bar any – my radiant and bright, chosen son to provide understanding, my purifying and productive one) conceived within my place of origin (*beten any – my womb and inner place of conception of life and to bear children)?

Consider what must occur and where it will transpire (mah – ponder the implications) my chosen son whose brilliance is reflected in the moonlight and for whom I selected for this relationship (*bar any – my radiant and bright child) via my vow and binding promise (*neder any – of my oath)? (Mashal 31:2)

Do not ever offer or give (al nathan* – you should never bestow (qal imperfect jussive second-person masculine singular)) your authorization, qualifications, or competency (*chayil atah – your efficacy, strength, wealth, valor, property, army, virtue, ability, authority, or character), to women (*la ha ishah – for females) or your journey through life (*wa derek atah – your path) to someone who conceals the truth and destroys (la machah – to one who blots out and wipes away (hifil infinitive)) those with authorization to lead (melekym – kings, rulers, and sovereigns).” (Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:3)

Following the realization that this is a profoundly poignant prophetic pronouncement whereby King Dowd is being admonished and corrected for his and our edification, I have decided to combine the follow-on statements in the 3rd verse because I think that they are related. It is only when Dowd, and we also, realize who he is, and how we will work collaboratively throughout time, that we are properly positioned to understand the consequence of giving it all up over his lust for a woman.

By using bar, we should see echoes of the fourth day of creation with the Lesser Luminary reflecting the Greater Luminary’s light as a sign of the *Mow*edym*. This is further reinforced in the 89th and 104th Mizmowr. He is bar | radiant and bright, such that bar | his brilliance is reflected in the moonlight. Bar affirms that Dowd is the Chosen One and Yahowah’s Favorite, the one through whom the Covenant relationship was established, all themes which are reinforced throughout the 89th Mizmowr. And by using bar we see Dowd reestablishing the innocence he lost as a result of Bathsheba, which was resolved when he fulfilled Chag Matsah. We know Dowd to be bar | thoughtful, too. So, the em* is addressing the most relevant of sons, the very Son of God.

Therefore, Dowd is being asked to contemplate his unique standing with God, not just as the *Lamuw*el* | Man Inseparable from God, but as Yahowah's Firstborn Son, the Greater Luminary, and the Tree of Lives, the Chosen One and God's Coworker. He needs to ponder the implications of what he forfeited by sidelining himself during the final fourteen years of his first life. To become all he has been acclaimed to be, he must reestablish the trust he shattered.

Fulfilling Chag Matsah requires reciprocity. Yes, Dowd must trust Yahowah to orchestrate all of it and protect him through it, but God needs to know that He can rely on His Son to see it through. Moreover, it's no longer just our guilt which must be resolved, but also the considerable shame Dowd incurred which resulted from killing a good man to steal his wife.

As boldly as words allow, throughout this stunning narrative, we must all look ourselves in the mirror and derive a sober assessment of our ledger in life. We each have our vices and we stumble. We have been wrong and we have fallen. Dowd did so more precipitously and conspicuously than the rest of us. Therefore, the Final Word Picture reveals that Yahowah is seeking the company and collaboration of men and women who prove that they can recover after stumbling. It's not perfection that God wants but, instead, conviction and character.

On the other side of this same token, no one has ever accomplished more than this one solitary soul. At a time that they were being torn apart over political allegiances and being crushed by ruthless Philistines, Dowd unified and protected Yisra*el. He subdued every threat, prevailing in sixty-six successive defensive battles, even returning the Ark of the Covenant. He acquired Yaruwshalaim, the heart of the land, along with the Temple Mount, then built the City of Dowd while accumulating the materials to construct God's Home on Earth.

Along the way, the Messiah became a prolific songwriter and poet, composing over one hundred Mizmowr and Mashal ~ the greatest literary treasure the world would ever know. He was a prophet of the first order, not only providing a comprehensive portrayal of the last days, but also graphically detailing a first-person narrative of his future fulfillment of Pesach and Matsah leading to Bikuwrym. He would reveal how his legacy would be stolen, and how it would be reestablished. He knew that he was being positioned to live three lives, one tumultuous and legendary, a second courageous and heroic, and a third as if he were God among us. And all the while he was what he was governing ~ Yisra*el ~ irascible and inspirational.

He was born and equipped for this purpose. The fate of the planet and life upon it hinge on him coming to grips with who he is, what he must do, when it is to occur, and why it matters. He is the very embodiment of the binding promise Yahowah made to all of us regarding him.

As we press forward, the man whose sacrifice would be symbolized as wine, would apparently consume too much of it before it was time. He drowned his guilt in the fruit of the vine. Therefore, his surrogate mother remarked...

“It is not for those authorized to govern (al la ha melekym* – it is not for kings, rulers, or sovereign leaders), Lamuw*el | One Inseparable from God (*Lamuw*el* – undiscernible from God and on behalf of God), no, not for kings, counselors, and leaders (al la ha melekym* – never for the authorized sovereigns), to be drunk (shatah – to consume excess amounts (qal infinitive)) with wine (yayn) or for those who govern in a significant or judicious capacity (wa la razen – or for princes or rulers) to crave (aw*) intoxicating libations (shekar – inebriating alcoholic beverages). (Mashal 31:4)

Otherwise, perhaps (pen – lest) he would continually get drunk (shathah – he would habitually become intoxicated (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) and forget, even overlook and ignore (wa shakah – fail to remember (qal imperfect)) what has been written as inscribed prescriptions (chaqaq – what has been engraved and chiseled in stone) and change, creating a different variation each year (wa shanah – altering and disguising) of the means to determine right and wrong, executing good judgment (dyn – to judge, govern, or defend) regarding all of the children of the afflicted and suffering, the harassed and persecuted (*kol beny ony – all of the young who are oppressed and living in poverty).” (Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:5)

Ultimately, we must think our way to God. Dowd was currently estranged and the only way this condition could be resolved is with a clear mind unaffected by alcohol.

We must remain sober if we are to exercise good judgment. Drugs of all types slow the rate we can process information, resulting in inferior decision making. Drugs also alter our sense of reality and impinge on our ability to distinguish between right and wrong. They must be avoided, particularly in excess.

Based upon the fact that this is the second point the em* | mother was making after telling Dowd that he should not forfeit all God would achieve through him for sexual encounters with another woman, it's apparent that the King was abusing wine. He was using the deadening influence of alcohol to numb his senses so that he could avoid facing the mess he had made. It had become an escape mechanism, replicating the reason so many abuse drugs today. They want to avoid facing the reality that their lives are unfulfilling and meaningless.

We need purpose to be productive. We need to think to thrive. Most people forfeit both, squandering everything in the process. Therefore, even back in time, Dowd was being told that this was wrong, indeed, counterproductive. He would not be able to stand up and fly right until he put down the bottle and sobered up.

I have long stated that drug abuse isn't a function of supply but rather demand. When there are cravings, others will always find ways to fulfill them. So, to resolve the problem, we must reengage people's minds and bodies such that they are thoughtful and meaningfully employed.

This next statement is akin to letting the dead bury the deceased. Intoxication isn't wasted on those who are going nowhere and have nothing to live for because it numbs the pain. While never beneficial, it is the least harmful approach. If it precludes those who would otherwise be misleading from making a cogent argument, then something is actually gained.

“So you can offer (nathan – you can opt to give (qal imperative)) intoxicating beverages (shekar – alcohol) to the one who is already lost and dying (abad* – to the one who has squandered a life, wandered away, and will no longer exist (qal participle)), and wine (wa yayn) to the embittered and disagreeable soul (mar nepesh – pungent and anguishing, toxic and mentally ill person). (Mashal 31:6)

He can habitually drink to the point of constant intoxication (shatah – he can become drunk (qal imperfect)) and forget (wa shakah – he can lose track of the significance and become unmindful so as to improperly respond to) his impoverished state of incapacitation as a result of his meekness and ignorance (*rysh huw – his lack of resolve, failure to be moral or strong, and lack of responsiveness).

And then, his unpleasant and distressful situation (amal huw – his miserable opposition and mischief) will no longer be remembered (lo zakar owd – it will not be recalled any more).” (Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:7)

The only time being forgetful is advantageous is when remembering would lead to a counterproductive outcome. Forgetting Jesus, Hashem, or Allah would actually be a step in the right direction.

Some claim that alcohol emboldens people, but for most it is a depressant rather than a stimulant. As a result, drinking to excess more typically makes the intoxicated individual, more timid in addition to being dumbed down to the point of ignorance.

God prefers that we have our wits about us so that we can be as credible as we are bold. Far too few speak out clearly and correctly on behalf of those who desperately need accurate representations of Yahowah's testimony. Therefore, mom was being compassionate, but in an assertive manner, for a reason...

“Open your mouth and speak boldly (*patah peh atah) for those without a voice (*la ilem – for the mute and dumb who cannot speak) concerning the defense and cause (el dyn* – on behalf of justice for) of every child who is destitute and abandoned (kol beny chalowph – all who are passed by). (Mashal 31:8)

Open your mouth, communicating profusely (*patah peh atah – speak openly) when choosing to lead and litigate, making sound decisions (shaphat – to opt to adjudicate while exercising good judgment) correctly, honestly, and justly (tsedeq – rightly, fairly, and accurately), thereby electing to exercise good judgment, governing and defending (wa dyn – deciding what is right (qal imperative second-person masculine singular)) the responsive (any* – those who reply and answer; from anah* – to respond) and the willing (*wa ebyown – and those who consent to be acceptable; from abah* – willing and enthusiastic).” (Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:9)

To be part of Yahowah's family, we are asked to engage in the family business. Our most valued products are words powerfully and profoundly delivered. And in this regard, we are to be aggressive and profuse, relentless in our pursuit of the truth for all to hear. Mom wanted her son to be right again.

Our outreach on behalf of our Father should not only be thoughtful and honest, it should be directed at those who are responsive. Speaking to the religious is a waste of breath. Feel free to criticize them, but never try to convert them.

This statement concludes with an enlightening depiction from the amah* | Productive Mother. She directed our attention to the ebyown* | Enthusiastically Willing and Acceptable. These men recorded Dowd's Sermon on the Mount and Olivet Discourse, decidedly anti-Christian narratives we wouldn't have access to today without them. They represent the only significant portions of the otherwise fraudulent “Gospel of Matthew” which were not plagiarized from the hearsay accounts of Mark and Luke.

The answer to the next question is provided throughout Dowd’s Mizmowr, where the King thanks Yahowah for providing His amah* | Productive Mother to restore the relationship. She proved more beneficial to him than crowns or jewels.

“Who can he find and where is he to obtain (*my matsa – how is he to acquire and experience (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) a strong and capable woman of noble character (*chayl ishah – an enriching and worthy wife who is virtuous), far more (rachowq) valuable (meker – worthy) than rubies, corals, and jewels (min panynym – precious stones and pearls)? (Mashal 31:10)

He can confide in her and confidently trust her (*batach ba hy – he can rely on her, even during missteps, and feel safe (qal perfect third-person masculine singular)).” (Mashal 31:11 in part)

The woman who will soon be called the greatest of all, exemplifies the enriching and worthy character we should all seek to develop and convey. There are few things more appealing to Yahowah.

The confidence to confide in another person, someone you know you can trust and rely upon, is one of life’s great gifts. And when that person is a wife or mother, a husband or father, it is especially enriching and empowering, often enlightening. This was Dowd’s response to Yah’s gift. Having lost the parent sweepstakes and having married poorly, I had no idea of how marvelous the blessing could be until I met Leah. Now, I can vouch for my King. Recognizing that he had come from, and then to, the same place, we are in concurrence.

And speaking of being in agreement, by revealing how marvelous trust is for us between people, especially with those closest to us, those who love us, Yahowah is revealing what He wants from us and to offer to us. This is the objective of our existence; the very reason God created us in the first place.

Relationships thrive, they blossom and grow, when love and trust coalesce and both parties are invested and engaged. And it is with those to whom we are the most vulnerable that continued and unrestrained exposure becomes the most rewarding and gratifying. It is what I was seeking in a wife. It is what Leah brought to our relationship. Now, she is offering this same gift to our beloved son.

While that is a lot to unpack and process, my wife's next line took me by surprise even as I found it reassuring. I had considered Ba'al | Lord and Master to be entirely derogatory because it is the title most coveted by ha Satan | the Adversary. But isn't it just like him to corrupt something good such that he appears towb rather than ra'?

And in this light, ba'al also means "husband," albeit with an interesting twist. And so now the question is, do I share those insights with you? How vulnerable do I become in conveying the full intent of my wife's confession not knowing whether or not I can trust those of you listening to and reading this?

At the very least, I am obliged to affirm that it was my wife, Leah, speaking to our son, Dowd, who disclosed this insight into our relationship. Further, as this inspired prophetic portrayal will state, Leah is a very strong and intelligent woman. She ran her own business, a luxury fashion label, in a highly competitive sector where she was chief stylist, fashion designer, procurement agent for the finest fabrics, lead seamstress, promoter, saleswoman, and CEO. She was a boss lady in a man's world. And it became worse when she finally married because her first husband was a submissive man.

We hadn't been together more than a few days when the subject of role playing to keep the relationship exciting and fun arose, and we decided we would, on occasion, experiment as ba'al and ishah*. She pursued it with a passion, finding comfort and joy in being able to surrender to a man she completely trusted. Even as a thin slice of our love, she would write poems about our most romantic moments as I would treasure them.

I understand if that is more than many of you wanted to hear, but it was not only Leah's confession, just as she shared it with me eight years ago, her words provide a marvelous window into loving relationships with spouses and with our God. I have freewill, and so does Leah, and she isn't surrendering it to respond in this manner. Instead, she is saying, "I implicitly, emotionally, and mentally trust you, such that I am willing to make myself completely vulnerable to you," knowing that I now bear the responsibility to treat her as a precious jewel, as someone more valuable than my own life. In those moments, she personifies love and our relationship soars. And it is her emotional strength and mental prowess that shines as she crowns her husband by the confidence she places in him.

Therefore, just as Dowd's adoptive em* | mother is revealing something enormously profound that we can apply to our own lives, we can also use it to enhance our relationship with God...

"How is he to find, obtain, and experience (*my matsu) a strong and capable woman of noble character who is enriching and virtuous (*chayl ishah), far more (rachowq) valuable (meker) than rubies, corals, and jewels (min panynym)? He can confide in her and confidently trust her, relying on her even during missteps and still feel safe (*batach ba hy).

So, in the judgment and desire, the mind or heart, even the thoughts and emotions (leb) of her husband, her ba'al | lord and master (*ba'al hy), he never lacks for anything, he never ceases to prosper, he never stops benefiting, and he is never deprived, such that he is not without what he needs to prevail (lo chaser*), particularly regarding those things deemed most valuable (shalal)." (Mashal / Word Picture /

Proverb 31:10-11)

Strength of character is the catalyst. Trust is essential. When they are present, there are no limits to what we can achieve.

Under such circumstances, our missteps become the steppingstones of progress. A mistake is an opportunity to learn and grow. We may stumble, but we do not fall.

When we hold one another's hand, we are tangibly supported and strengthened. We know that we are not alone. Life is better when shared. And therein is the explanation for creation.

These are things Dowd had not experienced from another person because his parents all but abandoned him and he married poorly. And she is telling Dowd that this was the missing ingredient in his life. She was not only revealing that we, as surrogate parents would provide this for him, but she was also affirming that if he were to trust Yahowah to help him recover from the predicament his poor judgment regarding a woman had initiated, he would never lack for anything. He would not only succeed, fulfilling his destiny, God would fulfill his heart's desire along the way.

So, my wife asks, "Is your relationship with Yahowah at this level? Do you trust God implicitly? Are you committed to the relationship heart and mind? Has He been able to demonstrate through you that obstacles are opportunities, mistakes serve to prove our mettle."

When we submit our will to His, we are empowered, even enabled and emancipated. This equation is synergistic, similar to the explosive growth of $E=mc^2$ because of the One who is offering and enabling this result.

In Dowd's case, my wife was revealing that adding another woman to his harem wasn't going to add anything to his life or contribute something valuable to our world. Sex is good, even fun, but it isn't in the same league as being able to confidently confide in someone you can genuinely trust. It is what Yahowah seeks with us. There are few things more appealing to God or more rewarding or beneficial.

In addition to all of this, Leah was resetting Yahowah's intent in Gan *Eden. God wanted Adam to trust Him in this way and benefit as a result. And when that did not occur, Chawah was conceived to complete and serve her man in this manner. So, when that went horribly wrong, this exceptional *em | mother reset the model Yahowah had envisioned, all in the anticipation that Dowd would start listening, responding, and engaging such that he would recapture God's trust.

Ultimately, it wasn't that he had tripped over himself and fallen, or that he couldn't get out of his own way and was making the situation worse, it was that Yahowah can be trusted to respond favorably when we confide in Him, rely on Him, and show that we can be trusted in return. Therefore, Leah was resetting Eden halfway through the process, giving us the opportunity through the collaboration between Yahowah and Dowd to return.

A good woman, one who is courageous and cerebral, is the power behind the throne. Had Chawah done as Leah is instructing, we would have prevailed in Eden. Adam would have been inspired to turn his life around as Yahowah had hoped. We would have been off exploring the universe in dimensions well beyond our own, enjoying our Creator's company, if only.

I like to convey what follows as, "There is no limit to what we can achieve when we are willing to share credit for what we accomplish." Leah went one step beyond, suggesting that the one who serves, serves to make progress and productivity possible. Work is a beautiful thing according to my wife and to our God. In fact, thinking and working are essential to our humanity.

"She acts in a way that yields to and serves him, so as to treat him (*gamal huw – she cares enough to expend the energy to commit to him, submitting to him, and conducting herself toward him (qal perfect third-person feminine singular))

properly, beautifully, and productively (towb – beneficially, in a good, generous, and pleasing way) and is never harmful, troubling, disagreeable, or hindersome (wa lo ra – never bad, immoral, or miserable) all of the days of her life (*kol yowmym chay hy)." (Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:12)

When our trust is properly placed, the results are never harmful or hindersome. And this kind of relationship is beautiful, pleasing, and eternal. This is God's view of living and loving Happily Ever After.

Since she remains singular throughout, there is every reason to conclude that my wife is modeling a variation of monogamy. While most every man associated with Yahowah had multiple wives and some many, including other sexual interests, I think one great and fulfilling relationship is going to be more popular during the Millennial Celebration of Sukah in Eden. However, while this may be nothing more than Leah's recommendation, her views will continue to carry tremendous weight.

As we move on, I'd like to note that in serving God and King, we will continue to draw from our experiences, leveraging them. The most useful of them will be stored in our nepesh | souls and neshamah | conscience. Leah, as I have mentioned, has always been inquisitive. Our relationship began and grew by asking and answering probing questions. She was a seamstress, one who worked with and favored natural fibers. She tended sheep and cultivated gardens.

"She cares and is concerned regarding, seeking to learn about (darash – she inquires about, accounts for, and ponders the implications of (qal perfect third-person feminine singular)) wool and flax (tsemer wa pishtah – the hair of sheep to make fabric for clothing and the fibers used to make linen and wicks).

She continually engages and performs (*wa asah – she constantly acts and is creative (qal imperfect third-person feminine singular)) with her pleasing and delightful hands (*ba chephets kaph hy – with her desirable and pleasurable hands)." (Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:13)

Dowd had been Yahowah's prized student and most acclaimed teacher. And following this intervention, he would resume learning and sharing.

Today's lesson was on wool and then flax because Dowd would be known for both. A thousand years after Leah's lecture, he would serve as the Passover Lamb as the flax blooms, explaining the references to wool and flax. Moreover, in three thousand years, Dowd would return wearing the linen attire of the High Priest to anoint the Mercy Seat of the Ark of the Covenant on the Day of Reconciliations.

There is no hiding from the fact that much of what my wife shared with Dowd was an adult conversation with double entendres permeating the narrative. It was appropriate, not only because the King was overly fixated on sexual rather than contributory partners, but also because both are better than one without the other. So, this was a conversation between adults with the hope we would all mature as a result. And yet it was conveyed in a manner that allowed layers of interpretation while not offending a child who wouldn't see past the most obvious symbolism.

In saying that the ideal wife engages and performs with her pleasing hands, Leah is revealing that the right woman is better than many women. It was a lesson lost on her son up to this point. She was also saying that she, as his mother, would weave the fabrics to adorn him appropriately, even in regal manner, while also his wives. Further, I see in this words that Leah might lead by example and teach a properly curated future wife how to satisfy and inspire her king.

Most of all, this em* | mother knows that we must engage to prevail and be pleasing to be loving. Our pursuit of both should be continuous and steadfast.

Ships bring bounty to the land, whether they are filled with wonderful people returning home or the best foods, textiles, jewels, libraries, and other treasures the world has to offer. And, of course, ships are the medium of trade, acknowledging that this *Amah would bring her Ba'al as a gift to Yisra'el, even to Dowd, which recognizes that I was a merchant trader by career. And so, not only have we traveled around the world, visiting well over 200 countries between us, we will be bringing all of what we experienced and learned to our son, further enabling his sovereignty.

“She exists (hayah – she is) like a fleet of Yah’s ships (*ka onyah – akin to one Yahowah allows you to meet; from anah* and Yah), a merchant who travels about (sachar – a world traveler and businesswoman) throughout distant places (min merchaq – throughout faraway countries).

She harvests then arrives, bringing (*bow – she comes with) her loaves of bread, but also her battles (*lechem hy – her nourishment to consume and her struggles).” (Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:14)

The right woman is akin to a fleet of Yah’s ships. She is anah Yah* | receptive to Yahowah and, therefore, responsive. And it is by seeing the world, as my wife and I have done to an extraordinary extent, that we gain perspective and come to know ourselves and our place. Even more to the point, the amah* would soon be bringing her Ba'al to Dowd and, as the Nakar, he is the Observant Foreigner Yahowah promised long ago.

Sailing ships of the day were driven by the wind, which is ruwach | spirit in Hebrew, suggesting two things. First, she and I are being delivered by the Spirit and dropped off before important people at crucial places and times. And, on Taruw'ah, Yahowah will be bringing the mortal remnant of Yisra'el as well as select Gowym into the City of Dowd by spiritual conveyance and from all around the world to prepare for King Dowd's return.

Also, Leah will be part of the Shabuw'ah Harvest, then she will return to serve in support of her son, our King. Her loaves of bread speak of that Ingathering because the Promise of Seven is symbolically presented as inclusive by way of the two loaves. But since lechem is equally at home rendered “battles,” we know that the *Amah will have fought and won more than her share in defense of her people and son.

This next line is pure Leah. She is a night owl, and often works on promoting all things associated with Yada Yahowah and the Yahowah Vlog into the wee hours of the morning. And as for me, I'm the early riser, always up and going before the sun. In addition, I suppose it bears mentioning, Leah is a gourmet chef, having trained in Italy and France, and she tends a vegetable garden, where she plucks the ingredients for the meals she prepares right out of the ground.

“She consistently rises and gets up (wa quwm – takes a stand to establish and confirm) while it is yet night (*ba owd laylah) and she provides, offering (wa nathan – she gives and bestows) that which is freshly-picked and nourishing (tereph – food which is plucked) for her family (*la beyth hy – on behalf of her home and household) and as a share properly thought out and apportioned (wa choq – shared and prescribed) for her girls, her female attendants and young ladies (*na^earah hy – her female servants, staff, and concubines).” (Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:15)

Leah is continuing to emphasize the importance of contributing to the relationship. The queen of the castle must lead by example, consistently making an investment in the wellbeing of her husband, home, and family.

Chief among her contributions is to be nourishing, feeding her family the latest fruit from the Tree of Knowledge. She must value the Towrah as much as her husband and constantly cultivate nuggets from God's guidance. And in this case, she is feeding the entire Covenant Family much of what we have learned working together over these many years.

As I have mentioned, this is also personal with Leah because second only to studying Towrah she loves her garden, where she grows much of what we eat. And the implication is that she is keen on the many horticultural metaphors which permeate Yahowah's testimony.

What comes next would be unexpected if not from Leah. Recognizing the proclivity of the men in Yahowah's story to have other intimate partners, she routinely states that she is okay with that so long as she gets to vet them and everyone is treated appropriately and respectfully. So, in this case, she is apportioning her girls as appropriate.

We were once surrounded by women assisting within the Covenant, who had a conniption fit at the mention of sensuality, even if the inspiration came directly from Yahowah's testimony. Therefore, I'm aware that there are some women, even potentially men, who are bothered by the slightest sexual inuendo. But, I cannot go where the words lead when they speak to it and be true to my calling or Yahowah's inspiration. He conceived the method we conceive children and He designed it for us to be fully exposed, exceedingly sensual, and demonstrably loving. And based upon this discussion, there is every reason to conclude that sexuality will continue to be part of loving relationships and the conception of children over the next one thousand years.

I rather like this next statement because it means women, not just men, will have a share of the land and some say in how it is developed. Further, she will continue to be productive, harvesting the fruit she has cultivated with her hands.

“She has considerations and plans for (zamam – she examines, decides, and determines the best use of (qal perfect third-person feminine singular)) the land (sadeh – field) and she acquires it (*wa laqach huw – she continually reaches out to grasp hold of it (qal imperfect third-person feminine singular)) out of the fruit of her hands (*min pary kaph hy – from the productivity and resulting harvest of her open palms).

She plants, and with the help of her man, firmly entrenches (*nata – she and he place the rootstock in the ground (qal perfect third-person singular masculine and feminine)) a vineyard and orchard (kerem).” (Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:16)

As it should be, a good wife should not only dress the vineyard and tend the orchard, it should be done together, with a man and woman contributing to the bounty that can be derived through cooperation.

I'm going to go out on a limb here and say that Leah will be designing tomorrow's wardrobe. Those being allowed back into the Garden will be wearing fabrics and styles she will have cultivated. And while you may wonder why this was sufficiently important to convey, it is because we will all engage making contributions according to our experience and aptitude. And while there are still mortals among us, outward appearances will matter. Further, God's amah* is telling their rather indulgent son that if he focuses on his job, he won't be deprived of the rewards.

The fact remains, with the right woman, one is satisfying while eighteen can be distracting and debilitating. The other aspect of this is that Leah has long enjoyed picking and adorning Dowd's bride upon Kipurym. She has only complained that the ten days from Taruw^oah to Kipurym is too short a time to properly plan a wedding of this magnitude.

So, not only does Leah adorn herself elegantly, and have a slender waist, her confidence is derived by her association with her *ba oz | strong and powerful man...

“She drapes and wraps apparel, dressing and girding (chagar – she fastens her sash and garments (qal perfect third-person feminine singular)) her slender waist, loins, and body (mothenym hy – her breasts and hips) confidently and boldly, in an empowering and capable fashion (oz – mightily with uncommon ability, often using natural fibers including wool).

She is determined and persistent, always courageous in establishing and enabling the strength, status, and success (*wa amets – she is forceful and relentless in promoting and reinforcing the determination) of her Zarowa^o | Strong Arm Cultivating a Productive Harvest and also the Sacrificial Lamb (*Zarowa^o hy – of both, the Zarowa^o scattering the seeds such that they take root and grow while also becoming fruitful by shouldering the burden on behalf of her Sacrificial Lamb; from *zara – to scatter and sow seeds which yield a productive crop).” (Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:17)

Okay, now we are getting especially personal. This wife is being attired, even girded, to confidently and boldly stand beside her man. But he is no ordinary soul because he represents one of the *Zarowa, of which there are only three ~ Moseh, Dowd, and Yada. And since she is addressing Dowd, Leah is affirming that the King will, indeed, serve as the *Zarowa | Sacrificial Lamb of Passover, but she will have chosen and adorned his bride to stand beside him upon his Kipurym return in harmony with the depiction in Numbers 5.

But that is just the beginning since Leah is married to the *Zarowa | Strong Arm Cultivating the Harvest. And he is the one who will be making the sacrifice that purges Dowd’s bride, along with the remnant of Yisra*el, so that they are prepared for the King’s arrival, Family Reunion, and Royal Wedding.

Let’s be clear since Yahowah has made this obvious. There is only one woman over the past 6000 years who could serve as a em* | mother to Dowd while recognizing him as a *Zarowa while also being the wife of a Zarowa. She was not only told to go ask Ruwth, who then acknowledged that she was the amah | Productive Mother responsible for delivering the *Ga*al* | Kinsman Redemer to her husband, Bo*az, she is Leah, the woman prophetically proclaimed to be ashar* | the Blessed and Beneficial Woman. It is obvious that she is Woman⁷, a single person to the 7th power with many contributions and confirmations.

And of course, I’d be remiss if I didn’t also acknowledge that Leah is often seen draping elegant garments around her slender waste. She is as beautiful as she is fashionable. After all, she is a gift from God and Yahowah is to be credited for designing and selecting her. It is no doubt why her exquisite taste and good judgment are legendary, while I also know that she can be charmingly discrete...

“Her exquisite taste, discretion, experience, and good judgment (ta^{am} – her perceptions, wisdom, and understanding (qal perfect third-person feminine singular)) affirm that, indeed (ky – surely), what she produces (sachar hy^{}* – her business endeavors and her merchandise) is good, pleasing, and beautiful (towb – has a lovely appearance, performs well, is of excellent quality, and is enjoyable and desirable while also feeling comfortable and looking attractive).

Her lamp and flame (ner hy^{}* – her light) is never quenched or extinguished (lo^{} kabah* – does not cease to burn and is not put out or doused (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular addressing her flame)) during the night (ba ha layil – by the darkness).” (Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:18)

In a marriage of hearts and minds within the Covenant Family, we would naturally expect the King to be pleased in the company of an exquisitely beautiful and thoughtful woman. Standing beside Yahowah’s Manowrah, the eternal flame of our God, we know that her brilliance, like Dowd’s will never be quenched. And in our case, this is particularly reassuring because it indicated that the light we are presently reflecting on behalf of our King will continue to shine through the darkest hours ~ the final seven years before his return. Also personal, this may suggest that Leah will continue to reflect Yahowah’s light, further illuminating herself in my presence, remaining my guiding light.

As we press forward through the King’s redemption, the double entendres are becoming impossible to deny. And while cloaked in the apparatus of the stylish seamstress, there is obviously more going on here than perfecting fabric.

“She reaches out (shalach – she stretches out and extends (qal perfect third-person feminine singular)) her hands (yady hy^{}* – her fingers, arms, and influence) expertly to the spindle and skillfully to the staff to please (ba ha kyshowr – capably to that which stands straight up and erect using part of a loom as a double entendre; from kasher and kishrown – to advantageously and skillfully, properly and expertly, rightfully and successfully, dexterously and suitably please), and the palms of her hands (*wa kaph hy – her open hands) seize, grasp, and hold (tamak – to accept and uphold (qal perfect)) the round spindle, this staff and stick (pelek – the circular administrative area).” (Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:19)

If you need me to explain, the additional notes would likely be lost on you. But this I will say in my wife’s honor ~ if I were to combine the prowess of every woman I’ve ever known, even collectively they wouldn’t hold a candle to my brilliant wife and exceptional lover. It’s is what she senses in me that allows her to conduct her hands as if conducting an orchestra.

Love is a many splendid thing, one that is beaconing the responsive to whom the hand is extended. Our role is to model genuine love and commitment within the Covenant and before the mortal gathered into the Garden.

“She spreads out (paras – she opens) her hands (*kaph hy) to the responsive who are receptive (*la ha any – to those who reply and answer; from anah* – to respond, speak, testify, and reply) and she reaches out and extends (wa shalach – she stretches out) her hands (*yady hy) to the willing and enthusiastic (*la ha ebyown – to those who consent to be acceptable; from abah* – willing and fervent).” (Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:20)

All but one in a million reject Yahowah and His outreach to our fellow man. They know nothing of the Towrah, Beryth, Mow^eedym, or Dowd. Nevertheless, our job is to extend the invitation, not compel their reply.

When I first met Leah, then Lisa, eight years ago, she was a bundle of nerves, with anxiety written all over her. She had lived a full, but rough, life, replete with way too many abusive men and psychotic women. She had learned that people can be treacherous. But over time, each supportive gesture and affirming word became a healing salve and the open wounds healed. And while she still shies away from attention and prefers quiet places where she can study and share Towrah, it's obvious that she wasn't directed to the Final Mashal before she was prepared to handle the implications.

Those of us who have lived on both sides, knowing what it is like to be a public figure after enjoying the freedom and privacy of anonymity, realize that if it were not for Yahowah's insistence on full disclosure and complete accountability, we would never draw attention to ourselves. But that is not our Father's choice because He wants the world to see us as role models, as proof that we can meet His expectations and earn His trust. The journey from one among billions to being in the spotlight always begins in the same place, through constant and disciplined observation and curiosity ~ closely examining and carefully considering His world and words. It's our response that becomes beneficial, as we share what we have discovered and learned, not only for ourselves, but also for our God and for others.

These steps are marvelous, indeed, rare, but they are not enough to engender Yahowah's trust. God wants us, needs us, to stumble occasionally, to be mistaken, so that we can learn from our mistakes, get back up, and grow, stronger, wiser, and more confident as a result. It is in the fire of failure that our character is forged as our mettle is strengthened when we are drawn out and quenched in the vat of His restoring oil. It is what caused us to fall in Eden and it is why we are being invited back in to show that we learned our lesson. Leah has...

“She is no longer intimidated or afraid of this distinct honor and sign of respect (lo yare – she is not bothered or distressed over being highly valued and appreciated, profoundly respected and admired (qal imperfect third-person feminine singular)) for the sake of her family and home (*la beyth hy – for her household) as snowflakes, with water becoming uniquely beautiful and distinct, even from being perceived as icy and cold through an occasional indiscretion, rash response, or unintentional mistake (min sheleg – from being as white and pure as snow, unique as a snowflake, symbolic of the one cleaning up that which others have soiled and making it especially beautiful; from shal – unintentionally being wrong, making a mistake, an imprudent or rash response, or an indiscretion [may be a misspelling of shelah – being at ease and secure in a most favorable situation, shalah – taken away, shelah – making requests or asking questions, or shalab – being joined together and properly positioned within the frame]).

This is because (ky – for indeed) her entire household and family (*kol beyth hy – everything pertaining to her home) are clothed (labuwsh – are adorned) in crimson when fully grown and mature (shany – in vivid red and scarlet when their lives are complete).” (Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:21)

Every reference to Leah as the mother of Yahuwd, to Yahowah’s *Amah, and even the blessings and benefits of the *Ashar, are signs of respect, a distinct honor bestowed on a woman devoted to serving her family on behalf of her God. She has earned and deserves our admiration. Dowd recognizes it, because he is the one issuing this decree.

Our King, God’s Beloved Son, perceives Leah as his mother. He is grateful to Yahowah for having sent her to him. And clearly, she has earned Dowd’s respect and admiration. By restoring his relationship with his Father, he can now redeem the entire Covenant Family. In so doing, the mother of one becomes the mother of all.

When our King declared that his em* was ready to be *yare | acknowledged and appreciated for her contributions to the Beyth | Family, he went on to speak of sheleg | snowflakes, stating that the entire Beyth | Family would be adorned in scarlet when grown and mature. While this may sound like conflicting metaphors, he was actually publishing an essay on the Beryth | Covenant.

Should you have missed it, join the club. I didn’t see it until Leah published a post that brought me halfway there. She pictured a snowflake with the caption, “Water Made Beautiful.”

To which I added, “Unique and Distinct, Too.” She, like me, was initially struggling to understand the symbolism of snow in this context, particularly when followed by clothed in scarlet.

At the moment of intervention, Dowd was a hot mess ~ stained by a plethora of mistakes. He needed to come clean and reclaim his unique position with God, a remedy conveyed by snow. Every flake is exceptional, featuring its own one-of-a-kind composition. And collectively, when snowflakes fall from the heavens and blanket the earth, everything they touch, even the dirtiest and most soiled of landscapes, becomes pristine and white. Then when the sun shines again, the snow sparkles, reflecting all facets of light like a sea of diamonds.

With his adoptive mother now serving as the amah* of the Covenant Family, Dowd realized that Leah was birthing snowflakes – souls so unique and special, they are fewer than one in a million, set apart as they each are unto Yahowah. Even when purified and white, all beautiful in Leah’s elegant attire, they can still be fragile after birth. If someone stomps on them or grabs them too firmly or prematurely, they will melt and lose everything that had once made them special. So, they have to be protected, at least for a while, until they are ready to mature and be part of something greater than themselves. When this happens, and they mature, Leah will adorn them in crimson, the crimson revealing their royal status.

And as for Dowd, after covering the stains of his ineptitude, making him bight and white again, he was prepared to be bathed in scarlet red, depicting his service as the Passover Lamb. It is a rite of passage portrayed by a sojourner in time.

More than this, as Yahowah’s amah* | Productive Mother and Seamstress, Leah is offering what I once attributed to the Ruwach | Spirit – a Garment of Luminosity that covers our shame and makes us appear pure as the driven snow. And with the reference to crimson, it is offered in collaboration with her son’s and her husband’s fulfillment of the Mow•edym. This is how we grow and mature in the Covenant Family, from the unique fragility and purity of a snowflake to an adult adorned by our King and his mother.

To quote the great doctor (Dr. Suess), “Oh the things we can think when only we try.” And mother, Father, husband, and Son are nowhere near concluding this lesson...

“She makes (asah* – she performs to act and engage, working on (qal perfect third-person feminine singular)) coverings and fabrics (marbad – abundant textiles) for her (*la hy) of fine linen (shesh – of natural fibers and materials that are cool, soft, lustrous, and strong) in addition to (wa) woven wool yarn and cloth (*wa argaman – that which comes from the loom, often purple; from arag* – to weave) for her garments (*lebuwsh hy – her apparel and clothing).” (Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:22)

Speaking of lessons, I had thought it was among my best mistakes, since it was thoughtful and brought Leah to me long ago. Even as I have tried to soften my conclusions over time, there was always something reassuring about a Spiritual Garment of Light that I found comforting since we all, like Dowd, need to be cleaned up every now and again to be seen and exposed in Yahowah’s presence. However, I realized that it was no longer needed after becoming the first to recognize Dowd fulfilled the Spiring Mow^oedym in his second of three lives in 33 CE. He removed our guilt and his own on Matsah, taking it to She^oowl, never to be seen again ~ which is better than covering over the darkness with light. But before realizing this, I had suggested that by approaching the feminine fire during Matsah, itself a feminine title, that we were being symbolically and spiritually adorned in that light rather than transformed by the fire ~ replacing our physical bodies with spiritual energy.

And yet now, after all of this time, the woman who was brought to me because of my fascination with the feminine nature of this redemptive apparel, is being credited by our king for making it. And while as bright and white as snow and as visible and pronounced as scarlet, the wardrobe she is making for herself, her husband and children, is crafted of fine linen and wool. And this is as it should be since Dowd redeemed the Covenant Family as the Passover Lamb and he will reconcile Yisra*el on Kipurym dressed in the fine linen of the High Priest when anointing the Kaporeth | Mercy Seat of the Ark of the Covenant.

Even beyond this, Leah and I suspect that there will be two weddings on Kipurym, Dowd to his bride, the chosen of Yisra*el, and Leah to me. She and her curated bride will be dressed appropriately in fine linen.

Leah is making us all presentable before Yahowah. And she is doing so, not only because we must feel comfortable exposed to God, and we must come to embrace our royal status with God, she is actually dressing us for success. The last time Yahowah appeared before the Children of Yisra*el, they were so uncomfortable, they told our Heavenly Father to shut up and go away. But on Kipurym, the opposite must occur for God to open *Eden's Gates on Sukah and allow the Yisra*elites to return.

One of the many reasons that I recognized that this *em | mother who is depicted elsewhere as Yahowah's *Amah, the *Ashar, is Leah, my wife, is that Dowd unequivocally affirms that I am her husband...

“Her husband, Ba*al | her Lord and Master (ba*al hy* – the one to whom she submits as her marriage partner who is in an authoritative position over her and others) is known and respected as Yada (yada* – is revealed, acknowledged, and understood as Yada | One who Knows (nifal participle masculine singular absolute – with Yada serving as an actionable and descriptive title by which he is recognized)) within the inner sanctum of the thoughtful assembly (ba ha sha*ar – inside the doorway, gates, and portal of the enclosed community of the rational group of related people; from sha*ar – those who think and reason).

Within (ba – by), he, himself, dwells, sits, and remains established (yashab huw – he lives and stays seated and settled while he meets with (qal infinitive third-person masculine singular)) with (im – among) the authorized elders and prominent leaders (zaqen – the most mature and advanced in age as dignitaries who make overriding decisions for the community) of the land and material realm (erets* – of the Earth).” (Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:23)

This is the second of three times in the Final Word Picture that Dowd refers to his em* | mother’s husband as Ba^oal. And here he is known as Yada. This is made evident by the participle which, as a verbal noun, serves as the actionable title Yada | One Who Knows. That’s rather specific in that this is my nom de plume for the initial decade of our collaboration and it was incorporated into the overriding title of every book I have written along the way ~ Yada Yahowah.

This also affirms that the place where I will be yada^o | acknowledged as such is ba ha sha^oar | within the inner sanctum of the thoughtful assembly. This is inside the door Dowd opened on Pesach for the Covenant Family. It is also apparent based upon the King’s prophetic assessment, that known as both Ba^oal and Yada, I will yashab | dwell and remain among the zaqen | the elders of the material realm.

So while this is Leah’s story, she did not happen upon it alone. The amah* has a Ba^oal named Yada. And he has an interesting role to play in Yahowah’s story, too.

As I have shared, ours is an arranged marriage. Yahowah sent her to me eighteen years ago. As you no doubt recall, but still merits reminding, when she was searching for Yahowah, God told her that she would find what she was seeking by asking Ruth. She did, and read...

“Then he asked with ongoing implications, ‘Who are you?’ She answered, ‘I am Ruwth | Longing and Striving to Shepherd the Flock, tending to and feeding the sheep as your amah* | Productive Mother.

So, spread out the hem of your garment as your wings over your amah* | Maternal Coworker who is branded and marked to deliver the Ga'al | Kinsman Redeemer saving you.” (Ruwth / Ruth 3:9)

From Ruwth longing to serve as a shepherd, to her service as the Productive Mother, from her instructions regarding her future husband’s apparel, to delivering the Kinsman Redeemer to him, this was so specific of our situation and this situation, it’s obvious that God had all of this planned generations before Dowd was born.

Even more amazing, the man that she was addressing as her future husband was Bo'az | In Strength and With Power. His name would serve to identify the north, or left pillar of the Temple. The south column, the one on the right side and closest to the City of Dowd, was named Yakyn | One with the Ability to Overcome, Succeed, and Endure. They would amuwdym* | Stand Together, forever juxtaposed, as the Supporting Pillars, creating an alam* | permanent bond on the Porch of the Hykel | Temple and Royal Palace...

“He established, erecting by standing upright (quwm – taking a stand (hifil imperfect third-person masculine singular)) that which pertains to (eth*) the amuwdym* | Support Pillars (*ha amuwdym – the unifying juxtaposition of that which is side by side, standing and grounded, remaining and enduring, to take a unified stand together) for the alam* | Portico (*la alam – to make a permanent bond on the porch) of the Hykel | Temple (hykel – royal palace and grand residence).

When (wa) he established, and stood upright (quwm – taking a stand (hifil imperfect third-person masculine singular)) that which pertains to (eth*) the amuwd* | Unifying Juxtaposition of the Support Pillar (*ha amuwdym – that which is side by side, standing and grounded, remaining and enduring, to take a unified stand together) on the right hand side, or south (yamany – choosing to be right and at the right hand), he was called and proclaimed, read aloud and summoned for the Miqra• (wa qara – invited, recited, welcomed, and met (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) by that which is associated with his name, reputation, and renown (eth shem huw), Yakyn | One with the Ability to Overcome, Succeed, and Endure (yakyn – His Hand Establishes and is Victorious).

Then (wa) he established by standing upright (quwm – taking a stand (hifil imperfect third-person masculine singular)) that which pertains to (eth*) the amuwd* | Support Pillar by his Side to Endure Standing Together (*ha amuwdym – the unifying juxtaposition of that which is side by side, grounded and remaining to take a stand) on the left hand side, or north (*samaly – properly clothed; from simlah – adorned in a covering garment). So, he was called and proclaimed, read aloud and summoned for the Miqra• (wa qara – invited, recited, welcomed, and met (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) by that which is associated with his name, reputation, and renown (eth shem huw), Bo•az | the Powerful One With Prevailing Strength (Bo•az – In Might; from ba – with and in and oz* – strength and power).” (Melekym / 1 Kings 7:21)

While the King is renown as Yakyn | the Hand who Establishes Us, it was through this intervention that he was able to yakyn | overcome his prior mistakes, succeed in the fulfillment of the Miqra•ey, and return to endure as our Melek. And quwm | standing amuwd* | beside him, just twelve cubits apart, amuwd* | forever juxtaposed, even *samaly | clothed for the occasion, eighteen cubits high, was Bo•az | the Powerful and Prevailing Bull of Taruw•ah, his Herald, his mother’s husband, and his adoptive father. And so, addressing the twelve tribes of Yisra*el, he is reporting this eighteen years after being introduced to the *Amah after he searched for the meaning of *Asher. But I’m sure it’s all just a colossal cosmic coincidence ~ or not.

Just as mothers dress their children, while trying to properly clothe their husbands, Leah will always be known for adorning the Covenant Family, beginning with her Ba•al and Ben. Should you not be attired in one of Leah's designs, you will likely be omitted from the Chag | Party.

Commonly, invitations include a reference to acceptable attire, but not hers. The attendees on Taruw^{ah}, Kipurym, and Sukah will already be properly festooned for the occasion, gratis the ^{*}Amah...

“Linen garments which envelop (sadyn – clothing and wrappers of natural fibers which cover) she has made (^{*}asah – she has fashioned and created (qal perfect third-person feminine singular)) and she values, offering as a quid pro quo (wa makar – she gives and sells in an exchange, surrendering and transferring possession of something highly treasured (qal imperfect third-person feminine singular)).

And (wa) celebratory sashes for the Feasts (chagowr – that which girds and prepares for the Celebrations; all things pertaining to chag – the celebratory feasts and chagar – that which prepares for battle) she offers as a gift (nathan – she bestows and gives (qal imperfect third-person feminine singular)) to the Kana^{*}any | Merchant Salesman (Kana^{}any* – the One Engaged in Trade, buying and selling).” (Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:24)

While I am the Kana^{}any* | Merchant Salesman, having spent over a score of years doing so (read In the Company if you are curious as to why I earned this distinction), Leah will be establishing the makar | quid pro quo as remuneration for her garments. I suspect that she will ask nothing more than what Dowd and Yada are offering ~ respect and appreciation.

With all of the splendor and majesty associated with Kipurym | the Day of Reconciliations when Yahowah returns with Dowd, the mother of the groom will be the most beautiful woman in attendance, even if she is four to six thousand years old at the time...

“Strength (^{*}oz – empowerment and fortitude, persistence and determination, the power required to prevail) and dignity, a most beautiful appearance and noble status and character (hadar – majesty, splendor, and glory, a high rank and honor) adorn her (*lebuwsh hy – clothe her), and so she is amused and entertained, smiling and laughing (wa sachaq – she is pleased over the situation and not the least bit concerned over the great celebration (qal imperfect third-person feminine singular)) during the day to come at long last and throughout the future (*la yowm acharown – approaching the time in the end after the final events play out).” (Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:25)

Of course, Leah will be accompanied by oz, Bo*az* | With Strength, in that he is her *Ba*al* | Husband. But even independently, she is becoming a strong woman in her own right. Although, my Leah would much prefer to lean on the strength of her man. Knowing her, she would find a million excuses to skip the party without me holding her hand. It is who she is, and who we are.

By way of confession, when I was first introduced to Lisa, now Leah, by Asher, our snow-white labrador puppy of eight weeks at the time, I already knew that we were a perfect match in values, priorities, proclivities, personality, and intellect. In appearance, however, she was different than anyone I had dated. So as a visual creature, when she showed up in boots and an overcoat because it was too chilly for her in South Florida, I wasn't smitten initially. While sitting on the park bench outside of the airport baggage claim I thought to myself, it may be nothing more than lunch.

It would take me a few hours to change my mind. I had sweettalked her into relaxing in the therapeutic Jacuzzi I had installed on the flybridge of my yacht, Qara, which was docked along the Inland Waterway in my backyard. She was so shy, she managed to slink in behind a towel, unseen. But when she flew out of it moments later to rescue Asher, who had scrambled too far aft before the rails were installed, seeing her for the first time, dripping wet in her bathing suit, all I could think of was to ask her who had made her so exquisitely beautiful. And, of course, now, she is the most beautiful woman in the world to me, with a truly noble status, glorious character, and completely amusing and entertaining personality. As she says, “I’m an acquired taste,” one that I’ve curated.

As one would expect, when I look at places other than her eyes, she opens her mouth and says, “I’m glad that you like what you see, but it’s my brain that matters most and it’s a little higher than you are looking, love.”

“She opens her mouth (pe hy patach* – she responds by releasing her speech (qal perfect third-person feminine singular)) with wisdom, intelligently revealing the capacity to understand (ba chakmah – with mental acuity and dexterity, a disciplined and discerning thinker with prudent insights) and (wa) a loyal love and affection, showing great favoritism and devotion (chesed – tremendously appreciating the benefits and goodness) for the Towrah | Guidance and Teaching (Towrah – Source of Instructions and Directions) on her tongue (al lashown hy – as her spoken language).” (Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:26)

Leah has many interests, but one love ~ Towrah.

When the *Amah speaks, words of chakmah | wisdom emerge. She has been gifted with uncommon intelligence. And her forte is in chakmah | showing the mental aptitude to understand Yahowah’s Towrah | Guidance and Teaching. It is the chesed | love of her life, and to God’s Instructions and Directions, she is devoted.

I would be remiss if I didn’t add that Dowd begins his prophetic presentation on the Choter by saying that his wife is chakmah | exceptionally wise. And since this discussion has been sensual in addition to cerebral, one of the first things I learned about Leah is that she is a sapiosexual, meaning that, when it comes to getting her motor running, intellect trumps appearance and brains are more important than brawn.

As those with whom we share our lives know, after cruising in Qara to the Virgin Islands, Leah and I have built our love nest overlooking the sea, where the *Amah is queen of her castle.

“She keeps watch, always on the lookout (tsaphah – she is intently hopeful in the expectation of future results while noted for being observant (qal participle feminine singular)) in the ways, walk, and affairs (halakah – in the process and progress pertaining to the matters and journey) of her family and home (*beyth hy – her household).

She does not consume or feed upon (wa lo akal – she does not devour) the bread of conflict (lechem – the food or strife) of those who lack discipline, are immoral, the idle and lazy (ashuwth* – the sluggish and inert who are inactive and fail to take the initiative and make a contribution).” (Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:27)

Leah had been devoted to her people and the Covenant Family for thousands of years, culminating now in our home, which has become a studio for the Yahowah Vlog. From her office, she produces all of our branding and composes marvelous songs to draw Yisra*el back home to Yah.

Leah has no interest in or use for the undisciplined and immoral or the idle and lazy. In her view, either contribute or get out of the way. Either stand up for what is right and against those who are wrong, or get off her porch.

And just as this states, and as Dowd no doubt observed, her focus is on the positive and uplifting rather than the bread of conflict. Her family matters, and that includes the Covenant, but expressly excludes rivals and naysayers, troublemakers and antagonists. Her walk is with Yah, and that takes her away from that which is in conflict with Him.

This next statement was an even bigger shock than the positive references to Ba*al. Then, after considering what Leah said 4000 years ago, the actual meaning of the word, the realization that it represents one of the twelve names comprising Yisra*el, and the fact that the Adversary seeks to corrupt what Yahowah cherishes, it began to make perfect sense. Yahowah is restoring more than just the planet for our return to Eden. He's cleaning up our vocabulary, too.

“Her children (*beny hy – her offspring) will rise up and take a stand (quwm – they will be established and confirmed, restored and honored (qal perfect third-person plural)) and they will call her ashar* | a Beneficial Blessing for having revealed the way to the relationship (ashar hy – they will pronounce her ashar* | a Positive and Encouraging Influence, one who promotes an upright and properly guided life by leading them along the correct path (piel imperfect third-person masculine plural)), her husband Ba'al | the Lord and Master, too (wa Ba'al hy wa* – the one to whom she submits as her marriage partner who is in an authoritative position over her and others, the leader and ruler in control who owns many things; from ba'al – to have dominion and to rule).

He reflects her bright and clear light and consistently praises her, extolling her virtues (*halal hy – he brags about her, appreciating her tremendous value, exceptional worth, and brilliant radiance (piel imperfect third-person masculine singular)).” (Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:28)

The em* | mother who was sent by Yahowah to redeem His Son, accomplished far more because, by doing so, she made our adoption into the Covenant Family possible. As Ruwth foretold, she delivered the Ga'al | Kinsman Redeemer to Bo'az | With Power and Strength, and he, as her Ba'al | Husband would restore the Redeemer's reputation for Yisra*el's benefit.

As we now know, the amah* | Productive Mother also became an ashar* | Beneficial Blessing by promoting her Ba'al | Husband's message regarding her son to her people. And so, just as the Prophets foretold, the barren woman would become fruitful and productive again, raising many children.

Leah, and then Ruwth, claimed these titles on her behalf, prophetically revealing one of the most surprising revelations in God's entire story, even as it was hinted at in the second chapter of the first book in the series. And keep in mind, just as Yada is always portrayed as a verb, and thus as an action-oriented designation, in this case, Ashar* is also a verb. This em* was an amah* | productive mother because she engaged.

With ElYah* returning to reprise his role in refuting those in opposition to Yahowah with the uplifting burnt offering of a bull, we are reminded that he roasted the religious who had falsely claimed that Ba^oal and Asherah* were gods. Turns out, these false prophets were also guilty of misappropriating key contributors to God's story. When ElYah* serves as Master of Ceremonies over the sacrifice of the adamah Parah* | Productive Man as the Bull of Taruw^oah, Ashar* will be there in support of her Ba^oal.

Not only am I pleased to see Leah receiving the recognition her contributions deserve, I'm delighted to be prophetically seen standing beside her as her husband as she is bequeathed the ceremonial title ashar* | the Blessed and Beneficial. I have, and will continue to *halal hy | reflect her bright and clear light while consistently praising her by extolling her virtues. I *halal hy | appreciate her tremendous value and exceptional worth. And it is obvious that I'm not alone, but instead, part of a glorious chorus comprised of her Covenant children.

The following pronouncement was inspired by Yahowah. It was scribed by our King, who clearly supported his Father's assessment. It is unique in all of the Towrah and Prophets.

Here, at the conclusion of the ultimate intervention, we find the King who had previously shown more interest in women's bodies than their minds, in their sexual proclivity rather than their mental acuity, announcing that many women have been highly competent as they engaged admirably. And then, after his tribute to the contribution of many, Dowd addresses the one with the character to admonish him.

In these words, the ashar* introduced by Leah and the amah* foretold by Ruwth, the em* | mother brought by Yah to save our Savior on this occasion, is afforded a status beyond compare. We are, therefore, in the presence of the greatest woman who ever lived...

“Many women (rab bath – plenty of daughters and female offspring) have acted and engaged, having performed (asah* – they have labored and done (qal perfect third-person plural)) ably and aptly, demonstrating the power of their convictions and noble character (chayl – in a highly capable, competent, and worthy manner, demonstrating tremendous virtue and strength of courage, intervening powerfully and valuably), but (wa) you (ath* – you (feminine singular)), yourself surpass and rise (alah* – you ascend, are lifted up and grow exalted (qal perfect second-person feminine singular)) above them all (al kol henah* – beyond everyone else (qal perfect second-person feminine singular)).” (Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:29)

The Final Mashal has painted the portrait of the woman who has contributed more than any other. She delivered the Ga'al | Kinsman Redeemer. Through the Beryth | Covenant Family, she became the amah* | Most Productive Mother. No one has offered more ashar* | Blessings or Benefits.

According to God, and He knows her best of all, and affirmed by His Son, whom she returned to his Father, Leah's character is sublime and her convictions are noble. She is deemed capable and competent. She engaged when others were hesitant and preformed ably and aptly.

Leah demonstrated that God was right about us all along. Given the opportunity, given the time, given the right woman who was right about Him, we were capable of listening, learning, and responding. On behalf of herself and many other women, she proved herself worthy before man and God.

This is among the most amazing statements to be found anywhere in an inspired prophetic text: “Many women (rab bath) have acted, engaged, and performed (asah*) ably and aptly, demonstrating the power of their convictions and noble character, being capable and competent (chayl), but (wa) you (ath*), yourself surpass and rise, ascending and exalted (*alah) above them all (*al kol henah)."

And to think, there is a group of jealous and embittered women who believe that they speak for a spirit mom, a mother god they say they found in the 8th Mashal / Proverb, when it has no reference to a ruwach or an em*. Then, not letting facts frustrate their fantasy, they ruthlessly and relentlessly slandered the em* | mother hailed as the greatest of all along with Yada, the Ba'al | Husband of this amazing ashar* | Blessed and Beneficial woman. Adding to their misfortune, they would also protest that Dowd could not have fulfilled Passover, negating the purpose of the Final Word Picture.

That is why Yahowah took keen aim at them, denouncing and destroying them in the 57th chapter of Isaiah before dispatching them to She*owl. But even more, they get a dishonorable mention by Dowd here at the conclusion of the Last Mashal. Turns out, the King hates them as much as does his Father.

"The disingenuous and vain display (sheqer – the misleading and false conveyance) of compassion and favoritism for popular appeal (ha chen – of tenderheartedness and grace) is meaningless and futile (wa hebel – is an idolatrous pursuit and wasted breath).

A woman (*ishah) who is brilliant and beautiful (yophy – genuinely attractive) reveres and respects (*yare – she admires and venerates) Yahowah (YaHoWaH – the proper transliteration of God's name based upon HaYaH and ToWRaH).

It is she who is to be independently admired and celebrated without compulsion for radiating her brilliant and clear light (hy halal* – it is she who is to be extolled on your own initiative for being worthy of exaltation for beaming brightly (hitpa'el imperfect third-person feminine singular))."
(Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:30)

Leah is the one in eight billion who would thwart the insidious pleas for popularity of the futile eight who engendered Yahowah's wrath. Her brilliance and beauty win the day because she reveres and respects Yahowah. There is no better informed, wiser, or more beneficial approach.

My beloved wife, my present from God, Yahowah's gift to every man and woman in the Covenant Family, should be independently admired, indeed, celebrated, for all she has accomplished. And keep in mind, this request is being offered by Dowd, the most acclaimed of men.

He said so because Leah enlightened him. He said so because he discovered that a woman's beauty was more than skin deep. He said so because she earned his respect. He said so because she had more respect for Yahowah than he had shown. He said so, because had she not intervened, his life and ours were over. The amah* | Productive Mother of Yahowah would be an ashar* | Beneficial Blessing for all. And it is her Garment of Luminosity that will adorn every child born into the Beryth | Covenant, beginning with God's Firstborn, Dowd. It is the fruit of the loom...

“As the fruit of her hands (*min pary yad hy), you all have decided to be entrusted to her as a gift, and so you should choose to be productive for her (*nathan la hy – of your own accord you are all appointed as a gift, a present for her, when approaching her and producing for her (qal imperative second-person masculine plural)).

And so (wa), her contributions and accomplishments (*ma*aseh hy – her productivity and works) will exclaim that she is praiseworthy by acknowledging her brilliant radiance and clear light (*wa halal hy – they will confidently express her excellence, cheering joyfully in song for her (piel imperfect third-person masculine plural)) within the inner sanctum of the thoughtful assembly (*ba ha sha*ar* – inside the doorway, gates, and portal of the enclosed community of the rational group of related people; from *sha*ar* – those who think and reason).” (Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:31)

In the 9th chapter of Isaiah, we learn that a Son was given. In the 31st Mashal, we know who wrapped him and delivered this gift to us. It's quite an accomplishment, because it means a woman saved the world.

While it is common for us to review the most amazing revelations we have encountered, I don't recall doing so previously by also including some of the proof texts we considered along the way. But this has been an exceptional encounter...

“So (wa), Yahowah (Yahowah), Almighty (*elohym), He caused the fall (naphal) of man (*al ha *adam) for being somewhat lethargic due to a lack of work and diligence (tardemah). He slept, inert and inactive, unmotivated and sedentary (yashen). And so, He grasped hold of (wa laqach) one (echad) of his ribs, symbolic of that which was limp and lame, from his side (min tsela^o huw). He sutured up and isolated (sagar) the place beneath it, replacing it over time (thachath hy*) with a Basar | Human Herald (basar). (Bare^osyth / Genesis 2:21)

Yahowah (Yahowah), as God (*elohym), He constructed, building a family on behalf of the son (banah), offering a woman (la *ishah) through the rib, removing what was limp and lame (*eth ha tsela^o) which (*asher) He had taken (laqach) from (min) the man (ha *adam). And (wa) He brought her with unfolding implications over time (bow*hy*) to (*el) the man (*adam). (Bare^osyth 2:22)

Then, the man (wa ha *adam), said (*amar), ‘This (zo*th) is the way to conduct one’s life, the pattern of behavior to be followed and the motivation to push forward (la pa*am). It is the essential nature and substance of an upright life (*etsem). Out of (min) my essence and humanity (*etsem *any), a living person is able to communicate intelligently, an individual with whom to talk in the flesh (basar) for my desire to share positive thoughts as a herald while human (min basar *any). For this reason (la z^ooth), she shall be welcomed and called, designated and known as (qara) the woman (ishah) because, indeed (ky), for (min) man (iysh*) she was selected and obtained (*laqach z*oth*). (*Bare*syth* 2:23)

Accordingly, therefore (al ken*), a man, this individual male (iysh*), he will leave, rejecting and forsaking for having been absent from and abandoned by (azab*) his father (*eth *ab huw) and his mother (*wa *eth *em huw) and then he will engage, becoming close by being joined together with (wa dabaq) with his woman (*ba *ishah huw). And they shall exist as and become (wa hayah) a unified (echad*) declaration regarding heralding the pronouncements of life (la basar). (*Bare*syth* 2:24)

The two (wa shanaym), this man (*ha adam) and his woman (*wa *ishah huw), they were (hayah hem) completely exposed without barriers between them (arowm*), and they were no longer wrong, disapproved, or mistaken (lo bowsh*).” (*Bare*syth* / In the Beginning / Genesis 2:25)

“And (wa) Leah (Leah) literally said with unfolding implications over time (amar*), ‘Then (ba), ashar* | Blessed and Beneficial (asher*) am I (any*). This is because (ky), a time will come when daughters will be guided to an upright life by me and women will be encouraged and blessed, benefiting and happy because of me (ashar any bath).’ So (wa), she proclaimed that which pertained to his name as (qara eth shem huw) Asher (asher*).” (*Bare*syth* / Beginning / Genesis 30:13)

“For the benefit of the relationship (asher*), they will be better off and more successful (yatab) based upon what they have said (dabar).” (Dabarym / Words / Deuteronomy 18:17)

“He established, erecting by standing upright (quwm) that which pertains to (eth*) the amuwdym* | Support Pillars, the unifying juxtaposition of that which is side by side, standing and grounded, remaining and enduring together (*ha amuwdym) for the alam* | Portico to make a permanent bond on the porch (*la alam) of the Hykel | Temple and Royal Palace (hykel).

When (wa) he established, and stood upright (quwm) that which pertains to (eth*) the amuwd* | Unifying Juxtaposition of the Support Pillar (*ha amuwdym) on the right hand side, or south (yamany), he was called and proclaimed, read aloud and summoned for the Miqra• (wa qara•) by that which is associated with his name, reputation, and renown (eth shem huw*•), Yakyn | One with the Ability to Overcome, Succeed, and Endure (yakyn).

Then (wa) he established by standing upright (quwm) that which pertains to (eth*) the amuwd* | Support Pillar by his Side to Endure Standing Together (*ha amuwdym) on the left-hand side, or north, properly clothed and adorned in a covering garment (sama•ly). So, he was called and proclaimed, read aloud and summoned for the Miqra• (wa qara•) by that which is associated with his name, reputation, and renown (eth shem huw*•), Bo•az | the Powerful One With Prevailing Strength (Bo•az).” (Melekym / 1 Kings 7:21)

“He asked with ongoing implications (*wa amar), ‘Who are you (*my ath)?’ She answered (*wa amar), ‘I am Ruwth | Longing and Striving to Shepherd the Flock (anoky Ruwth*), your amah* | Productive Mother (Amah atah). So, spread and stretch out (wa paras) the hem of your garment as your wings (*kanaph atah) over your amah* | Maternal Coworker (amah atah) who is branded and marked (ky) to deliver the Ga•al | Kinsman Redeemer saving you (ga•al atah*).” (Ruwth / Ruth 3:9)

“You want to turn back to me, having chosen to appear before me, face to face (*panah *el any). Your desire is to be merciful and kind to me, because You have decided to favor me and be generous to me (*wa chanan any). You want to give what I’ve emphatically requested (nathan), Your power, strength, and fortification (oz atah) on behalf of Your ebed* | Coworker (*la *ebed atah). You and I want You to liberate the Son, saving through the Son by delivering (wa yasha• la

ben) Your *amah | Motherly Coworker (*amah *atah).
(Mizmowr 86:16)

You have decided to act, engaging with me, such that You working with me serves to provide for me (*asah *im *any) a genuinely good, resolutely moral, and overtly positive sign, a miraculous symbol of femininity whose attitude and aptitude are productive and beneficial (*owth la towbah).

Then (wa), those who have shunned and abhorred me, and who dislike and slight me (sane* *any) may choose to see and understand (ra*ah) and be ashamed and humiliated for their decision (wa bowsh), because You, Yahowah (ky *atah Yahowah), supported me, helping and assisting me (*azar *any), and You consoled me, relenting regarding me, reconsidering Your disposition toward me (wa nacham *any).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalms 86:17)

“O (*anah), Yahowah (Yahowah), Indeed, it is true (ky), I am Your Coworker (*any *ebed *atah). I am (*any) Your Servant (*ebed *atah), the son (ben) of Your *amah | Productive Mother and Coworker (*Amah *atah). You have responded to open and release (patach) that which pertains to my bonds, freeing me from my punishment through disciplined instruction (la mowser *any).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 116:16)

“A Choter | Stem (Choter) will be extended (yatsa*) out of (min) the stump which has been cut down so that it is capable of supporting new growth (geza*) of Yshay | to Stand Out and Be Noticed, drawing attention to the substance of existence (Yshay), as (wa) a Netser | Observant Branch (netser) by means of (min) its roots, and that which keeps it anchored, steadfast, and nourished (sheresh huw*), such that he will continually bear an abundance of fruit, being a productive Bull while encouraging productivity in others (parah). (Yasha*yah / Isaiah 11:1)

“The words (dabarym) of Lamow *el Melek | the Sovereign Counselor and King Inseparable from God

(*Lamow el Melek). This is a profoundly poignant prophetic pronouncement, a heavy burden to be borne while paying tribute to someone tremendously uplifting with strong, heartfelt yearnings, revealed in a prophecy pertaining to the past and future (masa) that, as a benefit of the relationship and to reveal the way (asher), his em* | mother (em huw) taught to him for the express purpose of correcting him (*yasar huw). (Mashal / Proverb 31:1)

Who and when is the question (mah) my radiant and bright, chosen son (*bar any)? Ponder how and why mah) my favorite child and thoughtful boy (*bar any) conceived within my place of origin (*beten any)? Consider what and where (mah) my chosen son whose brilliance is reflected in the moonlight and for whom I selected for this relationship (*bar any) via my vow and binding promise (*neder any)? (Mashal 31:2)

Do not ever offer or give (al nathan*) your authorization, qualifications, or competency (*chayil atah), to women (*la ha ishah) or your journey through life (*wa derek atah) to someone who conceals the truth and destroys (la machah) those with authorization to lead (melekym). (Mashal 31:3)

It is not for those authorized to govern (al la ha melekym*), *Lamuw*el* | One Inseparable from God (*Lamuw*el*), no, not for kings, counselors, and leaders (al la ha melekym*), to be drunk (shatah) with wine (yayn) or for those who govern in a significant or judicious capacity (wa la razen) to crave (aw*) intoxicating libations (shekar). (Mashal 31:4)

Otherwise, perhaps (pen) he would continually get drunk (shathah) and forget, even overlook and ignore (wa shakah) what has been written as inscribed prescriptions (chaqaq) and change, creating a different variation each year (wa shanah) of the means to determine right and wrong, executing good judgment (dyn) regarding all of the children of the afflicted and suffering, the harassed and persecuted

(kol beny *ony). (Mashal 31:5)

So you can offer (nathan) intoxicating beverages (shekar) to the one who is already lost and dying, having squandered their life away (*abad), and wine (wa yayn) to the embittered and disagreeable soul (mar nepesh). (Mashal 31:6) He can habitually drink to the point of constant intoxication (shatah) and forget (wa shakah) his impoverished state of incapacitation as a result of his meekness and ignorance (*rysh huw). And then, his unpleasant and distressful situation and resulting misadventures (amal huw) will no longer be remembered (lo zakar owd). (Mashal 31:7)

Open your mouth and speak boldly (*patah peh atah) for those without a voice (*la ilem) concerning the defense and cause (*el dyn) of every child who is destitute and abandoned (kol beny chalowph). (Mashal 31:8)

Open your mouth, communicating profusely (*patah peh atah) when choosing to lead and litigate, making sound decisions (shaphat) correctly, honestly, and justly (tsedeq), thereby electing to exercise good judgment, governing and defending (wa dyn) the responsive (*any) and the willing (*wa ebyown). (Mashal 31:9)

How is he to find, obtain, and experience (*my matsa) a strong and capable woman of noble character who is enriching and virtuous (*chayl ishah), far more (rachowq) valuable (meker) than rubies, corals, and jewels (min panynym)? (Mashal 31:10) He can confide in her and confidently trust her, relying on her even during missteps and still feel safe (*batach ba hy).

So, in the judgment and desire, the mind or heart, even the thoughts and emotions (leb) of her husband, her *ba*al* | lord and master (*ba*al hy), he never lacks for anything, he never ceases to prosper, he never stops benefiting, and he is never deprived, such that he is not without what he needs to prevail (lo chaser*), particularly regarding those things deemed most valuable (shalal). (Mashal 31:11)

She acts in a way that yields to and serves him, so as to treat him (*gamal huw) properly, beautifully, and productively (towb) and is never harmful, troubling, disagreeable, or hindersome (wa lo ra) all of the days of her life (*kol yowmym chay hy). (Mashal 31:12)

She cares and is concerned regarding, seeking to learn about (darash) wool and flax (tsemer wa pishtah). She continually engages and performs (*wa asah) with her pleasing and delightful hands (*ba chephets kaph hy). (Mashal 31:13)

She exists (hayah) like a fleet of Yah's ships (*ka onyah), a merchant who travels about (sachar) throughout distant places (min merchaq). She harvests then arrives, bringing (*bow) her loaves of bread, but also her battles (*lechem hy). (Mashal 31:14)

She consistently rises and gets up (wa quwm) while it is yet night (*ba owd laylah) and she provides, offering (wa nathan) that which is freshly-picked and nourishing (tereph) for her family (*la beyth hy) and as a share properly thought out and apportioned (wa choq) for her girls, her female attendants and young ladies (*na*arah hy). (Mashal 31:15)

She has considerations and plans for (zamam) the land (sadeh – field) and she acquires it (*wa laqach huw) out of the fruit of her hands (*min pary kaph hy). She plants, and with the help of her man, firmly entrenches (*nata) a vineyard and orchard (kerem). (Mashal 31:16)

She drapes and wraps apparel, dressing and girding (chagar) her slender waist, loins, and body (mothenym hy) confidently and boldly, in an empowering and capable fashion (oz). She is determined and persistent, always courageous in establishing and enabling the strength, status, and success (*wa amets) of her Zarowa• | Strong Arm Cultivating a Productive Harvest and also the Sacrificial Lamb (Zarowa hy). (Mashal 31:17)

Her exquisite taste, discretion, experience, and good judgment (ta^{am}) affirm that, indeed (ky), what she produces (sachar hy^{}*) is good, pleasing, and beautiful, has a lovely appearance, performs well, is of excellent quality, and is enjoyable and desirable while also feeling comfortable and looking attractive (towb). Her lamp and flame (ner hy^{}*) is never quenched or extinguished (lo^{}kabah*) during the night (ba ha layil). (Mashal 31:18)

She reaches out (shalach) her hands (yady hy^{}*) expertly to the spindle and skillfully to the staff to please (ba ha kyshowr), and the palms of her hands (wa kaph hy^{}*) seize, grasp, and hold (tamak) the round spindle, this staff and stick (pelek). (Mashal 31:19)

She spreads out (paras) her hands (kaph hy^{}*) to the responsive who are receptive (la ha ^{}any*) and she reaches out and extends (wa shalach) her hands (yady hy^{}*) to the willing and enthusiastic (la ha ^{}ebyown*). (Mashal 31:20)

She is no longer intimidated or afraid of this distinct honor and sign of respect (lo^{}yare^{}) for the sake of her family and home (la beyth hy^{}*) as snowflakes, with water becoming uniquely beautiful and distinct, even from being perceived as icy and cold through an occasional indiscretion, rash response, or unintentional mistake (min sheleg). This is because (ky) her entire household and family (kol beyth hy^{}*) are clothed (labuwsh) in crimson when fully grown and mature (shany). (Mashal 31:21)

She makes (^{}asah*) coverings and fabrics (marbad) for her (la hy^{}*) of fine linen (shesh) in addition to (wa) woven wool yarn and cloth (wa ^{}argaman*) for her garments (lebuwsh hy^{}*). (Mashal 31:22)

Her husband, Ba^{al} | her Lord and Master (ba^{al} hy^{}*) is known and respected as Yada (yada^o) within the inner sanctum of the thoughtful assembly (ba ha sha^{}ar*). Within (ba), he, himself, dwells, sits, and remains established (yashab huw^{}) with (^{}im) the authorized elders and prominent leaders (zaqen) of the land and material realm (*erets). (Mashal 31:23)

Linen garments which envelop, wrap, and cover (sadya) she has made (*asah), she values, offering as a quid pro quo, surrendering and transferring possession of something highly treasured (wa makar). The celebratory sashes in preparation for the Chag Feasts (chagowr) she offers as a gift (nathan) to the Kana*any | Merchant Salesman (Kama*any). (Mashal 31:24)

Strength and fortitude (oz), dignity, and a most beautiful appearance and noble status and character (hadar) adorn her (lebuwsh hy), and so she is amused and entertained, smiling and laughing (wa sachaq) during the day to come at long last and throughout the future (la yowm *acharown). (Mashal 31:25)

She opens her mouth (pe hy* patach) with wisdom, intelligently revealing the capacity to understand (ba chakmah) and (wa) a loyal love and affection, showing great favoritism and devotion (chesed) for the Towrah | Guidance and Teaching (Towrah) on her tongue (al lashown hy). (Mashal 31:26)

She keeps watch, always on the lookout, in hopeful expectation for improved results (tsaphah) in the ways, walk, and affairs (halakah) of her family and home (beyth hy*). She does not consume or feed upon (wa lo* *akal) the bread of conflict (lechem) of those who lack discipline, are immoral, the idle and lazy without the initiative to make a contribution (*ashuwth). (Mashal 31:27)

Her children (beny hy*) will rise up and take a stand (quwm) and they will call her *ushar | a Beneficial Blessing for having revealed the way to the relationship (Ashar hy), her husband Ba*al | the Lord and Master, too (wa Ba*al hy* wa). He reflects her bright and clear light and consistently praises her, extolling her virtues (halal hy*). (Mashal 31:28)

Many women (rab bath) have acted, engaged, and performed (asah*) ably and aptly, demonstrating the power of their convictions and noble character, being capable and competent (chayl), but (wa) you (ath*), yourself surpass and rise, ascending and exalted (alah*) above them all (al kol henah*). (Mashal 31:29)

The disingenuous and vain display (sheqer) of compassion and favoritism for popular appeal (ha chen) is meaningless and futile (wa hebel). A woman (ishah*) who is brilliant and beautiful (yophy) reveres and respects (*yare) Yahowah (YaHoWaH). It is she who is to be independently admired and celebrated without compulsion for radiating her brilliant and clear light (*hy*halal*). (Mashal 31:30)

As the fruit of her hands (*min pary yad hy), you all have decided to be entrusted to her as a gift, and so you should choose to be productive for her (*nathan la hy).

And so (wa), her contributions and accomplishments (*ma*aseh hy) will exclaim that she is praiseworthy by acknowledging her brilliant radiance and clear light (*wa halal hy) within the inner sanctum of the thoughtful assembly of those who think rationally (*ba ha sha*ar*).” (Mashal / Word Picture / Proverb 31:31)

I am thankful that Yahowah waited to the end to present His gift, enabling us to unwrap it, her, with loving care. It reminds me of the day I proposed to her. As she was waltzing around in the salon of Qara, I said, “Come here and take off your clothes.” It was as if I had said that she was the love of my life, because she not only joyously complied, she gifted me the most beautiful poem she ever wrote to commemorate the occasion of our love.

My favorite prophet would speak of this very thing in the 54th chapter of Yasha*yah. But before we get there, the last statement of the 53rd chapter speaks of what Dowd accomplished for us on Pesach and Matsah: “Yet he, himself, bore the sin of many, and He interceded for the guilty.”

Pesach and Matsah work in harmony to immortalize and perfect the Covenant Family. And since that is what is happening here, it is apparent in this context that this barren woman is directly associated with Dowd. And what’s particularly remarkable, all of the prophet’s attention is being directed toward a single woman who goes from being unable to conceive to being especially prolific with her husband. And in fact, the transition from one to the other is to be celebrated.

“You, of all women, should sing for joy as a ringing endorsement (ranan – you (feminine singular) should want to shout, choosing to convey the lyrics of a woman overcome with delight in a jubilant song with a melodic and rhythmic accompaniment (qal imperative conveys that which is both genuine and is an expression of freewill presented in the second person feminine singular)), O barren and infertile woman who has not yet given birth (aqar* – female who has not yet experienced natural childbirth for having been hamstrung (feminine singular)).

And (wa – in addition [from 1QIsa and 4QIsa (not in the MT)]) She, who has not yet borne a child (*lo*yalad* – she who has not during this confined period of time brought forth and delivered (qal perfect conveys an actual relationship with a completed timeframe, and thus not an ongoing condition for the woman presented in the third-person feminine singular)), you will become genuinely and evermore serene, bursting forth in happiness (patsach – you will be at peace, without any negative concerns or distress, sparkling and happy, gleaming, bright, and cheerful, as She starts (qal imperative second-person feminine singular)), ecstatically delighted (rinah – sharing a happy song for having overcome).

So (wa), she will want to shout at the top of her lungs with her appearance beaming (tsahal – she will choose to loudly convey a radiant message and countenance while she screams (qal imperative second-person feminine singular)), she who has not yet writhed and trembled in labor (lo chayl* – she who has not up to this point experienced the anguish and torment of childbirth (qal perfect third-person feminine singular)).

For indeed (wa ky), great and abundant will be the children (rab beny – numerous and abounding in influence will be the offspring) of the Shamem | Desolate Woman (shamem – the deserted and abandoned woman (qal participle feminine singular) from the children (min beny – with the offspring) of Ba'al | the Husband to whom she is married (Ba'al – of the Lord and Master she has submitted to in matrimony (qal participle feminine singular)),’ says (amar* – answers and promises) Yahowah (Yahowah – a transliteration of YaHoWaH as instructed in His ToWRaH – teaching regarding His HaYaH – existence).” (Yasha'yah / Salvation is from Yahowah / Isaiah 54:1)

We have already seen several of the many prophecies regarding the remarkable amah* | Productive Mother Yahowah presents to His Son, Dowd to restore their relationship. And we know that Ruwth introduced this title in conjunction with delivering the Ga'al | Kinsman Redeemer. Further, since the em* | Mother fulfilling this role in the Last Mashal was married to Ba'al and became ashar* | Blessed and Beneficial, it is obvious that this Shamem | Desolate Woman who is prophesied to conceive an abundance of children is the same person.

Shamem is a clue in this regard because it shares the shame root as shem | name, *shama | listen, and shamar | observe ~ all key elements in the transition from life to death. Even shamaym | heaven begins similarly. And the inclusion of a second Mem | m in mms, speaks of motherhood because of the breaking of the water of the embryonic sack at birth along with the realization that water is the source of life.

What this says is that my extremely introverted wife who is currently tied up in knots over her rather abrupt repositioning from the obscurity of anonymity to divine recognition and fame will be resolved. The good news from my favorite prophet is that she will grow into the role and eventually celebrate her essential contribution ~ and be openly appreciated for it. Moreover, now, my Leah understands what it is like to be me.

As an interesting note, Leah is one of six women who are presented as barren, something that God eventually resolved on each occasion. And with Leah, she endured six miscarriages while mothering the adoptive daughter of her abusive former husband.

Turning back the pages of time, we know all about Sarah in Bare^osyth 11:30 because Yahowah caused the woman who laughed to conceive Yitschaq | Laughter at eighty ~ initiating the Covenant. After having been barren, and now following the birth of her son, Sarah came to understand Yahowah's intent with the Covenant far better than her husband, Abraham. And since God agreed, after Sarah told Abraham to send Hagar and Ishmael away, Yahowah says the following...

“Then God said with unfolding implications over time (wa amar elohym) to Abraham (*el Abraham), ‘This should not be seen as troubling, as wrong or bad (al ra *ra *ba ayn) by you (atah*) for regarding the child (al ha na ar) and pertaining to (wa al*) your amah* | Productive Mother (amah atah), everything and anything (kol) asher* | to Show the Way to the Benefits and Blessings of the Relationship (asher*), Sarah | Engages and Endures as a Noble Woman (Sarah – empowered and persistent, royalty), she ever says to you (amar *el atah), you should choose to listen (*shama ) to her voice (*ba qowl hy ) because through (ky ba) Yitschaq | Laughter (Yitschaq), your seed and, therefore, offspring and descendants (*la *atah zera ) will be summoned and invited, met and welcomed, recited and appointed for the Miqra^oey (*qara  – will be read aloud, mentioned, called out, and known (nifal imperfect)).” (Bare^osyth / In the Beginning / Genesis 21:12)

When Sarah goes from barren to bearing the first child of the Covenant, she is Abraham's amah* | Productive Mother. As the Mother of the Covenant, when she says that others do not belong, she is supported by God. And when she speaks, we would do well to listen.

Rebeka, Yitschaq's wife, was also barren as we discover in Bare^osyth 24:67. This was, of course, resolved with the twins Esauw* and Ya^oaqob as explained in Genesis 25:23.

Next in line was Rachel, who was competing with Leah, her gadowl | far more important sister, for Ya^oaqob's attention. And while she would conceive, her ongoing fascination with idols proved deadly and she died giving birth to the troubling legacy of Benjamin. He would become the forefather of the Sha^ouwls, the harbingers of political and religious rebellion.

As we know, initially, Leah was fertile. She is famous for having become the mother of Yahuwd | Beloved of Yah. But when her childbearing years had past, she became ashar* | Blessed and Beneficial as a surrogate mother, not unlike the role she was playing with Dowd in the Final Word Picture.

Much lesser known, there is also the wife of Manoah in Shaphat / Judges 13:1-7. After being unable to conceive, she was approached by a mal^oak of Yahowah. While Yisra^oel was maliciously religious, and subsequently harassed by the Philistines, she was told that she would conceive a Nazyr | Dedicated and Devoted One to forestall Yisra^oel's collapse. And while that's interesting in its prophetic implications, when asked his name, the mal^oak | messenger said, "*Huw^o*Phila^oy* | He (or It) is Wonderful Beyond Comprehension." Thereafter, he rose heavenward in the midst of a fire set for an uplifting offering. His departure serves to demonstrate the transformative symbolism apparent during the Mow^oedym as we are asked to approach the fiery light.

The sixth barren woman was the wife of ElQanah* | God Acquires and Obtains. Chanah | Favored and Generous, speaking to Yahowah, made a nadar | vow, similar to that ascribed to the Bull redeeming the remnant of Yisra^ael in Numbers 15. Thereafter, she called herself amah atah | Your Productive Mother twice while requesting the zera^a | seed of an iysh* | individual man to offer to Yahowah every day of his life. She conceived and gave birth to Shamuw^ael ~ the prophet and judge who anointed Dowd.

It is curious that Chanah's name sits immediately prior to Chanowk | Trained and Prepared, Dedicated and Deployed in many Hebrew lexicons. If I'm perceiving this correctly, I think Yahowah has deployed a select group of souls as needed at various places along the timeline to keep his plans and people on track. Should that be the case, and I think the evidence is convincing, God established the model He would use going forward with Chanowk. As his name affirms, he was instructed and equipped, then deployed for this purpose.

Based upon the uncommon use of the hitpa^lel stem, revealing that Chanowk | Enoch was completely unaffected by societal pressures or constraints, we find an individual influenced by God but not men, making him particularly serviceable. He is shown on a continual journey with Yahowah, such that they are walking through life together.

In conjunction with God, their offspring included Mathuwshelach | a Man Sent Out as a Stem ~ explaining how the Choter | Stem would become the etsah Da^aath* | Tree of Knowledge Providing Counsel to restore Yisra^ael. In this way, they would father many sons and daughters for the Covenant over the years.

Even the fact that he was and would be known for having existed 365 years, at a time when the Hebrew calendar was 354 days, suggests that, in another life, this same individual would be the first to correlate God's calendar with man's. Therefore, following the clues, it appears that at whatever time, place, or title of Yahowah's choosing, he, or sometimes she, would be inserted into the ordinary flow of time by Yahowah, then removed, returning to God awaiting the next deployment.

Here is the supporting text...

“Chanowk | Trained and Prepared, Dedicated and Deployed (Chanak) was unfazed by external human influences in his consistent walk through life (wa halak – he, free of human cultural, societal, religious, or political control mechanisms, traveled with (hitpacl imperfect third-person masculine singular)) with the Almighty (*eth ha *elohym). Afterwards (achar), he delivered with Him (yalad huw *eth), Mathuwshelach | a Man Sent as a Stem (Mathuwshelach – Individual Dispatched as a Shoot; from Math – Man, Shalach – Sent Out as a Shelach – Shoot, Stem, or Sprout) at 300 years (shalosh me*ah shanah). Then he fathered other sons and daughters (wa yalad benym wa bathoth).

All of the days (kol yowmy) of Chanowk | Trained, Dedicated, and Deployed (Chanak) was and will be (hayah – he existed (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) 365 years (chamesh wa shesh shanah wa shalosh me*ah shanah).

So (wa), Chanowk | Trained and Prepared, Dedicated and Deployed (Chanak), unfazed by external societal influences, consistently walked, traveling through life (wa halak – he, free of human religious or political controls, went with (hitpacl imperfect third-person masculine singular)) with the Almighty (*eth ha *elohym) and then there was nothing of him (ayin huw – no him, without him, this proposition was left to ponder the implications) because (ky) God (*elohym) grasped hold of him at that moment and obtained him for a period of time (laqach eth huw – He took him, selecting and choosing, receiving and accepting that which pertains to him (qal perfect third-person masculine singular)).” (Bare^{syth} / In the Beginning / Genesis 5:22-24)

This plan is ingenious. God can infuse any situation with whatever influence, incentive, or protection is needed to keep everything moving forward without violating freewill or cause and effect. Every insertion becomes a teaching opportunity. He continues to work with and through his creation rather than overpowering it or against it. Moseh, Dowd, Shalomoh, and Yasha^oyah could speak confidently about the Nakar | Observant Foreigner and amah* | Productive Mother because they had seen them in action.

Returning to the Shamem | Desolate Woman whose Husband is Ba^oal, in anticipation of her prolific addition to the family...

“You should want to enlarge (rachab – you should choose to make expansive and roomy, electing to joyfully take advantage of the opportunity to expand the special dimensions (hifil imperative second-person feminine singular)) the place to take a stand and arise (maqowm – the upright home and living place; from ma – to consider the implications of and quwm – rising up, standing up, confirming, and establishing) of your tent and brilliant dwelling place for your household (ohel atah – of your (feminine singular) dazzling encampment and illuminating tent for camping out within your enlightened residence).

And (wa) the sheltering curtains (yarya^oah – the protective divide and interwoven fabric drapes) of your tabernacle (*mishkan atah – of your (feminine singular) dwelling to abide and reside; from my – to consider the implications of shakan – settling down, residing, and living) spread out (natsah – want to be stretched out and extended (hifil imperfect jussive)).

Do not withhold (lo^{} chasak* – do not hold back (qal imperfect jussive)) dimensionally increasing (arak* – lengthening and elongating) your cords for the remnant (*mythar atah – the tent strings which hold up, enlarge, and secure your (feminine singular) dwelling for those who remain; from my – to question, seeking answers regarding yathar – the remnant who are left).

Then (wa) elect to strengthen, toughening and hardening (chazaq – firm up and intensify (piel imperative)) your tent pegs (*yathed atah – your (feminine singular) stakes which provide added safety and security).” (Yasha Yah / Isaiah 54:2)

The terminology used in the follow-on sentence affirms that the barren woman’s family will be conceived in the years prior to the fulfillment of the Fall Mow’edym in 2033 / year 6000 Yah. This coincides with Leah’s marriage to Yada, who is also presented in this prophecy as Ba’al. With many new children joining the Covenant, God will accommodate her growing family during the millennial celebration of Sukah | Shelters by expanding Eden throughout the Earth.

The heart of the land will still be Yaruwshalaim, the City of Dowd. Therein, the maqom | standing place is the Temple Mount on Mowryah. The tent that will be stationed there at this time will be a replica of the Test of the Restoring Witness. And since the Ark of the Covenant will be repositioned inside during this period, the sheltering curtains will have to be spread out.

This reestablishes the *Amah and *Ashar Leah in her role as the fashion coordinator and seamstress of forevermore. Throughout this announcement, the subject of each action remains a uniquely prolific woman.

The mention of chazaq | strengthening and toughening the mythar | cords may seem perfunctory at first glance since it would be prudent to secure the Tabernacle. However, it is also a play on words that inspires a pertinent lesson because it is the mortal remnant whose resolve will need to be intensified for them to prosper during the millennial observance of Sukah | Shelters.

The opening line of what follows reaffirms that there will be many souls added to the Family of God on Taruw’ah. This is largely the result of the sacrifice of the *Adamah Parah purging the final remnant who are now spread out to the right and to the left around the Temple Mount. At this moment, as if signaling their imminent arrival, copious amounts of water will be released to cleanse the gathered Yisra’elites and Yahuw’dym in the manner of a woman’s water breaking in anticipation of giving birth.

Particularly reassuring is that the *Amah's offspring will spread out both left and right, north and south. And that means that there may be some Gowym along with Yisra*elites born into the Covenant during Taruw*ah.

However, as we have already discovered in Yasha*yah 17, additional Gowym will be brought into Yaruwshalaim at this time as laborers. This means that the ethnicities and nations who subjugated and deposed Jews for centuries will be given the opportunity to repay their debt and square their accounts.

Then your seed, representing your offspring and descendants (wa zera *atah – your (feminine singular) children and family) will inherit and take possession of (yarash – they will dispossess and acquire, receiving (qal imperfect third-person masculine addressing zera *)) the gentile nations and non-Yisra*elites (gowym – the people, places, and countries which were estranged from and in opposition to Yisra*el).

They will inhabit (yashab – they will settle and dwell within, living, staying, and remaining in (hifil imperfect third-person masculine plural – indefinitely making them their own)) the desolated and deserted cities (*iy^r shamem – depopulated and abandoned urban areas).” (*Yasha*yah* / Freedom and Salvation are from Yahowah / Isaiah 54:3)

We should all be celebrating the great contributions to the Covenant Family provided by our beloved *Ashar. And while I'm aware that there are some who don't much like the idea of the Covenant's Children inheriting the Earth, and its people, places, and possessions, when perceived from the proper perspective, it's beneficial for everyone.

To restore the conditions experienced in Eden, Yahowah must remove all traces of the political and religious, the militant and conspiratorial. With them gone, their property and possessions will be abandoned. In the ensuing fire, that which has no ongoing value will be incinerated, including all military hardware, while that which will be of value to the Covenant and remnant will be retrofitted and reapportioned rather than destroyed. And during the thousand years of Sukah, things like refineries and powerplants, farms and roadways, will need to be maintained. So, there will be people to do such things under the watchful eyes of Covenant Members.

Should you believe that to be unfair, I would have you consider the cause and alternative. Gowym persecuted and plundered Jews nearly to extinction and at this time, antisemitism is rampant to the point of having become a global obsession. Just finding Gowym with acceptable attitudes and aptitudes to contribute will be slim pickings. So, these are the best of the worst. And had they not been afforded this opportunity, their lives would have been extinguished like all of the others who were opposed to Jews and Israel during the great conflagration.

Also, keep in mind that everyone will be working, including Covenant Members and all of those included within the remnant, so labor is not punitive. The conditions will be ideal, the management will be divine, and the rewards will be extraordinary, not only because the Yowbel freedom clause will likely still apply, but they will be given the opportunity over time to join the Covenant Family.

Therefore, this is a well-deserved reward for the 'Ashar's Family, just compensation and accountability, and a marvelous opportunity for others. It's fair and beneficial. And should you not like it, you don't have to participate.

Considering how repulsively the men and women of the Mother Goddess Clique have treated my wife recently, and how discriminatory the world has been toward Jews, this is reassuring...

“You should not be concerned (al yare – you should not be distressed or intimidated (qal imperfect jussive second-person feminine singular)) because you will not be humiliated or distressed again (ky lo bowsh* – for you will never be disapproved or shamed (qal imperfect second-person feminine singular)).

You will you not be mistreated or deprived (*wa al kalam – you will not be disgraced or shamed, nor will you lack for anything needed to live and prosper (qal imperfect second-person feminine singular)). By contrast (ky), you will not be anxious, dismayed, or confused (lo chaphar* – you will not suffer anxiety over your rightful status being confiscated (hifil imperfect jussive second-person feminine singular)).

Indeed (ky), you will forget (shakach – you will no longer be mindful of (qal imperfect second-person feminine singular)) being disappointed, humiliated, and shamed (bosheth – the disconcerting and ignominious experiences of inadequacy) when you were younger (aluwmym atah – of your youth).

And then (wa) the contemptible and dishonorable condition of being insulted (cherphah – the lowly status, reproach, and insults, slurs and scorn) by you being abandoned by a spouse and forsaken (almanuwth atah – of you (feminine singular) being bereaved by being without a husband and essentially widowed), you will no longer recall or remember (lo zakar* – you will no longer recollect or mention (qal imperfect second-person feminine singular)) ever again (owd* – forevermore).” (Yasha ʿyah / Freedom is from Yahowah / Isaiah 54:4)

God’s people have been dehumanized and demonized as a result of the lies regarding them in the New Testament and Quran, although rabbis have done them no favors with the deceptions woven throughout the Talmud and Zohar.

Fortunately, we are nearing the time when Yahowah will obliterate the scriptures that have harassed and humiliated His people.

To appreciate this prophecy, we must remember that it remains focused upon the once barren woman who is now celebrating the many additions to her family. Since she was horrendously mistreated by a wide cast of characters, Yahowah is assuring her that this will never occur again. And that means that her foes won't live to see this day. Her anxiety will be a thing of the past. Any confusion about who she is and what God intends to achieve through her will vanish. The future is brighter than the past.

There are many memories that we will carry with us into the Millennial Kingdom, but slander will not be among them. From Taruw^{ah} through the conclusion of Sukah, life will be glorious.

Leah has suffered many stripes, all of which forged her character. And among them is quite literally being abandoned by an insulting husband. He ex, after all manner of repulsive behaviors just left, disappearing. She was abandoned on an island, with him galivanting around the world, never to return. But he has been all but forgotten as a fading memory. Sadness has turned to joy as miscarriages have been replaced with an ever-growing Covenant Family.

There are two ways to interpret what follows. The first is to conclude that Yahowah is the ^{}Amah's husband, making God Ba^{al}. Should that be the case, I have no explanation as to why the verb ^{}asah would have a plural subject or why Yahowah would position Himself as the Ga^{al} | Kinsman Redeemer when that is His Son's designation.

Therefore, even though subsequent passages seem to adhere to this interpretation, I have chosen another. With our return to Ba^{al}, I see the ^{*}Amah and her Ba^{al} working and contributing together. They are as devoted to the recognition that Yahowah is God's name as they are to the realization that Dowd is our Kinsman Redeemer, the Set-Apart One of Yisra*el. And while he is instrumental in all things *qara | called out, including fulfilling the Miqra*ey, only those cognizant of the 89th Mizmowr know that Yahowah refers to Dowd as elyown* | the Influence of Almighty God.

“Because then (ky) you will be married to Ba*al, with you and your husband overseeing and influencing everything (*ba*al atah – your (feminine singular) Ba*al (masculine), as your lord and master taking care of you, will rule together while owning and controlling many things (qal participle plural)).

You will both engage, actively contributing and working on your behalf (asah atah – you both will perform, expending considerable energy for you (qal participle plural)).

Yahowah (YaHoWaH – pronounced as guided by His towrah – teaching regarding His hayah – existence) of hosts (*tsaba – of the vast array of spiritual implements) is His name (*shem huw – is His proper designation and renown).

So (wa), your *Ga*al* | Kinsman Redeemer and Savior (*ga*al atah – the One who removed you (feminine singular) from harm’s way, freeing you, providing emancipation and liberty as your kin (qal participle masculine singular)) is the Set-Apart One (qodesh – is the most uniquely devoted and special one) of Yisra*el (*Yisra*el* – Individuals who Engage and Endure with God).

He will be summoned and called, met with and welcomed for having fulfilled the Miqra*ey (qara – he will be received and called out, designated and known as (nifal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) as Almighty God (elohym) of the entire Earth and material realm (*kol ha erets – the whole world).” (*Yasha*yah* / Isaiah 54:5)

One of the reasons that I have interpreted this statement as Yahowah directing our attention toward Dowd as the *Ga*al* | Kinsman Redeemer is because after divorcing Yisra*el in

Howsha^o, He cannot remarry her. However, Dowd can and will – which is part of the pageantry of how Taruw^oah | Herald enables Kipurym | Reconciliations and leads to the wedding canopy on Sukah | Shelters.

Further, the special woman who is revitalized as a prolific mother throughout this prophetic pronouncement is married to Ba^oal. Therefore, in their collaboration, they will contribute to Yahowah's triumphant return with His Son, Dowd. They have been instrumental in reintroducing Yahowah's name to His people. And no one on Earth, not now, not ever, has been more successful in reclaiming Dowd's reputation as Yisra^oel's Ga^oal | Kinsman Redeemer. As they have shown, the Son of God answered the summons to fulfill the Miqra^oey, thereby calling us home.

That said, none of this happens without Yahowah enabling His ^{*}Amah and her Ba^oal or their son, Dowd. We are only implements in His capable hands. God has and will continue to orchestrate all of this for the benefit of the Covenant Family.

Continuing to address Leah as the formerly barren woman who is now the mothering spirit of the Beryth, Yahowah recognizes that she was actually abandoned by her ex, forging the character He could exploit. Feeling unloved and rejected, she was receptive to the Spirit's admonishment and discipline. The heartache of her youth would serve as the springboard to a more productive life...

“Surely (ky), the Spirit (ruwach) of Yahowah (Yahowah), like (ka) a woman and wife (ishah*) rejected and abandoned (azab* – forsaken and deserted, left behind and released (qal participle feminine singular)), is fashioned to discipline and admonish (atsab* – shaped to serve the grieving to correct and reprove, with a secondary meaning of distressed and grieving and tertiary connotation of disciplining, correcting, preparing, and guiding (qal participle feminine singular addressing the ruwach)).

So, He will call you out, inviting and welcoming you, wanting to meet with you (qara ath – He will summon you (feminine singular), calling out to you, encouraging you to read and recite aloud (qal perfect third-person masculine singular)) as (wa), the woman (ishah*) shaken out of her childhood and youth (*na*uwrym* – thrown out of her earlier life; from *na*ar* – shaken) when (ky) she is spurned and rejected (*ma*as* – she is avoided, disassociated, and despised (nifal imperfect third-person feminine singular)), says your God (amar *elohym ath).” (*Yasha yah / Isaiah 54:6)

It is inspiring to witness what Yahowah can accomplish through His Ruwach when the recipient is receptive to correction. The Spirit disciplines our thinking so that we can become correct about God in a world rife with religious lies.

It is interesting that Yahowah is equating His Ruwach with a woman conceiving children for the Covenant. God’s Spirit achieves this result by guiding us to the truth and then correcting us when we are wrong. But then, after acknowledging that His ruwach is feminine by scribing the verb atsab* | to discipline and admonish in the feminine singular, in the follow-on comment, God says that “He is calling us out to meet” with Him. Therefore, while Yahowah is working through a special woman to conceive His Covenant Family, and deploying His Ruwach | Spirit to facilitate this outcome, He continues to present His participation in the masculine singular.

Also important, we become Covenant as a result of the *qara | God’s invitations to call us out of this world so that we can meet with Him. This is why *qara is the actionable root of *Migra | the Invitations to Meet with God.

While the trials and tribulations of our youth shape our lives as adults while honing our resolve, we must shake free of our past to move on in our relationship with Yahowah. When we spurn those who reject God, we are finally positioned to approach God.

As evidence that time is relative and that Yahowah is not stuck in its ordinary flow as we are here on Earth, He refers to a thirty-five century time out for bad behavior as a brief moment in time.

“During a brief moment in time (ba rega° – in a disturbing instant, and for a little while) as trifling and unworthy (qaton – as insufficient and inadequate), I left you (azab ath – I rejected and released you (feminine singular), abandoning you (qal perfect first-person singular)). But as a tremendous favor and sign of great compassion and mercy (wa ba rachamym gadowl – out of both inordinate love and pity, forestalling judgment and considerable recompense), I will gather you as in a harvest (*qabats ath – I will bring you together, collecting you for the relationship (piel imperfect first-person singular)).” (*Yasha yah / Isaiah 54:7)

There were a number of rega° | disturbing instances that served to sever the relationship between Yahowah and Yahuwadm. These became particularly frequent, antagonistic, and increasingly deplorable during the Exodus.

Ultimately, the divorce proceedings were made manifest in Howsha°, when Yahowah rejected Yisra*el for forsaking His Towrah | Guidance and His Beryth | Relationship to be religious. And so it is only as a result of God’s nature that the separation can be reconciled. As a great favor to us, as an unmistakable display of His compassion and mercy, Yahowah is giving us another chance.

God is on record affirming that He is committed to regathering Yisra*el one last time. He will collect a remnant of His people from around the world on Taruw°ah. Some will be harvested and others purged of their guilt on this day, all with the same objective.

Numerous times, Yahowah has or will release a torrent of waters, all aimed at resolving the discordant notes men and women have been singing. This began with the flood, when the religious were washed away. It occurred again during the Exodus to differentiate Yahowah’s life-affirming nature from the diabolical disputes of His people. And it will reoccur one last time on Taruw^{ah}, when a torrent of water will be released from the Temple Mount to prepare the final remnant of Yisra^{el} to receive their King.

In between these episodes, Yahowah has remained hidden to most. Even today, fewer than one in a million know or acknowledge Him. Fortunately, with the advent of Yada Yahowah and the Yahowah Vlog, this has begun to change. Come Taruw^{ah}, Kipurym, and Sukah in year 6000 Yah, the relationship will be restored.

“In a furious torrent and discordant outburst, struggling with the overwhelming dissention in the agreed relationship (ba shetseph qetseph – in a downpour and surging flood designed to engulf and rinse, washing and cleaning that which had engendered frustration and displeasure; shetseph is from shataph – to wash away, either drowning out or rinsing and cleaning), I concealed My presence and appearance (sathar paneh ^{any} – I veiled My identity and hid My face and proximity) from you (min ^{ath}).

However, with loyal love, unfailing kindness, enduring devotion, and unmitigated favoritism throughout time (wa ba chesed ^{owlam} – but with genuine and everlasting affection), I will compassionately reestablish a loving relationship with you (racham ^{ath} – I will express my affection and love toward you in a merciful manner (piel perfect first-person singular)), He, Yahowah, says (^{amar} Yahowah – He, Yahowah, claims and promises (qal perfect third-person masculine singular)) of your Ga^{al} | Kinsman Redeemer (Ga^{al} ^{ath} – of the one delivering you by buying you back, reacquiring you).” (Yasha^{yah} / Isaiah 54:8)

Once again, it would be natural to conclude that Yahowah is saying that He is our Ga^{al}. But I think it is more in keeping with God’s nature to say that His unmitigated favoritism and enduring love for us is expressed through His Chosen and Beloved, Dowd, who is our Kinsman Redeemer. But either way, reconciliation is imminent and assured.

Rather than the waters of the flood ending life, next time there is a massive release of water, they will be restorative. We have Yahowah's word on it.

“This (zoth), for Me (la ^{*any}), is in contrast to (ky) the waters (maym) of Noah | the Trustworthy Guide (Noach) which, for the benefit of the relationship (^{asher} – to show the way to get the most joy out of life), I made a promise (shaba^{} – I offered a solemn vow (nifal perfect first-person singular)) that the waters associated with Noah (maym Noah) would no longer pass over the earth (min ^{*abar} ^{*al} ha ^{*erets} – would not extend across the region).

In this way, therefore (ken), I made a promise (shaba^{*} – I offered a solemn vow (nifal perfect first-person singular)) to refrain from being provoked to anger (min qatsaph – from becoming infuriated (qal infinitive)) against you (^{*al} ^{*ath}) and from rebuking and reprimanding you (min ga^{*ar} ^{*ath} – from censuring and chastising you).” (Yasha^{yah} / Isaiah 54:9)

The way God mitigated His frustration with humankind was to distance Himself. Just as He revealed though Howsha^o, He returned to Heaven and will remain there until such time as His people begin to return to Him.

The mountains of God, from Choreb to Mowryah, have been corrupted by the religious, but no matter how far removed humanity has become from their intent, Yahowah's agenda will not be thwarted. The Covenant will be reaffirmed because that is what Yahowah desires.

“As a result (ky), the mountains may yield to the touch (ha har muwsh – may feel distant and withdrawn (qal imperfect third-person masculine plural)) and the hills (ha giba^{*ah} – the hilltops) are toppled and troubled (mowth – quake and are shaken as they are overthrown (qal imperfect)), My love, kindness, and enduring favoritism (wa chesed ^{*any} – My genuine devotion) will not cease to be with you (min ^{*eth} ^{ath} lo^{} muwsh – will not be removed from being with you nor be without your touch (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)).

Then (wa), My Covenant of Reconciliation (*beryth shalowm any – My saved and blessed, safe and content, Family) will not be shaken or slip away (lo muwth* – will not be removed or fall away for having been weakened (qal imperfect third-person feminine singular addressing the beryth)), He, Yahowah, says (amar Yahowah* – He, Yahowah, claims and promises (qal perfect third-person masculine singular)) of Racham | the One Most Loving and Compassionate toward you (*racham ath – of the Merciful One (piel participle masculine singular) toward you (feminine singular)).” (Yasha Yah / Isaiah 54:10)

When Yahowah said that the barren woman would conceive and that her children would be numerous, He was addressing her contribution to the Covenant Family. While there were no entrants for a score of centuries, today, thanks to all she has had to offer, a different story is being written.

At this point, I’d like to present two additional Mizmowr. The first occurs prior to the Amah’s visit and depicts Dowd’s reaction to Yahowah’s disapproval. The second was recorded after we were given the opportunity to meet with him and share our concerns. But first, let’s consider what went wrong those many years ago.

This is already unpleasant so it will be quicker and easier to digest with minimal amplification. The narrative assessment is harsh, and it begins by condemning political despots for being warmongers. Then it says that Dowd was shirking his responsibility as the protector of his people because he dispatched every able man but himself.

The battle was not heroic. The verbs chosen to depict the assault read as I’ve presented them. And all the while, Dowd was lounging in bed during the day, such that he got antsy and decided to get up and spy on his neighbors around sunset. And so a man derelict in his duty, and lethargic, became a voyeur, and then a provocateur. It's little wonder Yahowah values work and defines tamiym | perfection as "completing the job."

"It came to be in the return of the year, the time when the heads of governments go out, and Dowd dispatched Yow'ab | Father Yahowah, and his coworkers, servants, and slaves with him, even the whole of Yisra'el.

And they ravaged and destroyed, corrupting and ruining, even spoiling and laying waste to the sons of the amown* | Everything Pertaining to People. So, they laid siege to Rabah | Greatness while Dowd remained seated in Yaruwshalaim | Source of Guidance on Reconciliation. (Shamuw'el / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 11:1)

It happened during evening time, around sundown, when Dowd arose from upon his bed. He was walking on the roof of the king's house as he saw a woman bathing from upon the top of the roof. The woman's outward appearance was very good, especially pleasing and desirable. (Shamuw'el / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 11:2)

Then Dowd, he set out and he inquired about approaching the woman. And he asked, 'Isn't this Bathsheba• | Promised Daughter, the daughter of Ely'am* | We Are God's People, the wife of uwryah* | Yahowah's Light, the Chity | Fearsome? (Shamuw'el / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 11:3)

So, Dowd dispatched mal'akym | messengers and he grasped hold and took her. She was brought to him and he lay with her, sleeping with her.

Now, she had been separate from having been unclean and defiled, even offensive and unacceptable. Thereafter, she returned to her house. (Shamuw'el / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 11:4)

Then the woman and wife became aware that she was pregnant. So she set out so she could inform Dowd. And she said, ‘I’m pregnant.’ (Shamuw^{el} / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 11:5)

What happened to the great Gibowr, the courageous defender of his people? He went from lounging around to sleeping around while his people were plundering a neighbor on his orders.

He came to Yaruwshalaim with ten concubines and seven wives and had already added considerably to both even before spying upon and lusting over the sight of Bathsheba. He was fully aware that she was the daughter of a good man and the wife of an even better one ~ a soldier out risking his life for king and kingdom.

Getting past the realization that Dowd has sent everyone off to war while he spends the day in bed, we are told that he dispatched mal^{akym} | spiritual messengers to retrieve the wife of another man for a sexual liaison, which I’m pretty sure isn’t part of their job description. There was no small talk, no going out for lamb and matsah, just slam, bam, no thank you, ma^{am}.

Make of the resulting nomenclature what you will, but the Hebrew word for menstruation is nidah, not tum^{ah} which was used here. It says that Bathsheba was ethically, religiously, or sexually defiled and impure. Also telling in this regard, it is very rare for a woman to conceive immediately after her menstruation because ovation typically occurs 12-14 days before the next period and sperm seldom survive more than 5 days in the reproductive tract.

Therefore, while Bathsheba was pretty, she was far from good. We do not know the nature of her intercession, but it was sufficiently concerning that she was trying to wash away the incriminating evidence physically or emotionally. And what happened next is tantamount to abduction and potentially worse. Dowd ordered envoys to laqach | grab hold of her, at which point, the king laqach | took her with the subject going from plural to singular. There was no opportunity for or sign of consent. The facts in evidence as that he spied on her, established her identity, sent staff to abduct her, he grabbed hold of her, and had sex with her, which is to suggest that he may have raped her.

While the selected terminology strongly and immediate result infer that this wasn't Bathsheba's first affair, there is another concerning factor. When her husband returns from battle, he avoids her. He doesn't even say hello, check in to see how's she's doing, or ask if she needs anything while he's in town.

Making matters worse, she goes back home and determines she's pregnant. This result, for the reasons previously mentioned, further undercuts Bathsheba's character. The child could well have been that of another man, explaining why she was trying to wash away her *tum*ah* | transgression.

But now, after what Dowd has done, she schemes to turn her shame into an opportunity. She tells the king that she's pregnant, perhaps inferring that it was his child without saying so. She went from certain scorn and outcast to queen of the castle. And while that's bad, it's Dowd's response that was particularly nefarious. His retort to his indiscretion was to scheme his way out of responsibility.

So Dowd sent a dispatch to Yow*ab | Father Yahowah, 'Send to me *uwRyah | Yah's Light, the Chity | Fearsome.' And Yow*ab sent *UwrYah to Dowd. (Shamuw*el / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 11:6)

When *UwrYah came to him, Dowd asked, inquiring if Yow*ab was satisfied and content. And were the people at peace. Also was the war prosperous and satisfactory. (Shamuw*el / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 11:7)

Then Dowd said to *UwrYah, 'Go down to your house and wash your feet.' And so *UwrYah withdrew from the King's house, and coming out following him, a portion of something of the king. (Shamuw^eel / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 11:8)

But *UwrYah lay down at the door of the king's house with all of the servants, workers, and slaves of his lord. He did not go down to his house. (Shamuw^eel / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 11:9)

When they informed Dowd, saying, “UwrYah did not go down to his house,” Dowd said to *UwrYah, ‘Have you not come from a journey? Why did you not go down to your house?’ (Shamuw^eel / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 11:10)

It is odd that Dowd would use shalowm in his query regarding the attitude of his lead general, the Yisra^elites conducting the siege, or the status of the conflict. Since it is typically rendered “peace,” it shows that the king was disconnected from the reality of the war they were fighting for him. By using shalowm in the midst of conflict, we not only find the king corrupting one of God's most revered terms, but we also see his vulnerability and insecurity. He was worried, and for good reason, that that his general and subjects had come to disrespect him. While disappointing, it is the only rational explanation for the improper use of the reconciling and verb.

Also curious, we do not know the nature of the mas^eeth | portion that Dowd has sent to follow after *UwrYah. It is translated “burden, mess, collection, flame, gift, oblation, reward, and sign” but said to also mean “portion, present, offering, or tribute.” If the latter, then it was meant either as a bribe or as a way for Dowd to publicly feign respect for the man he was about to kill. Either way, it's inappropriate.

Unable to manage his affairs, Dowd's scheme flopped. He wanted his honorable soldier to have sex with his wife so that he could be lured into believing the child was his. But as it would transpire, *UwrYah showed no interest in his home or wife. And considering the evidence at our disposal, I think he knew what we have surmised ~ she wasn't a prize and he hadn't been the last man in his home or bed. Had he gone home, sparks would have flown, but not of the loving kind.

Nevertheless, UwrYah was an exceptional man. He was likely Covenant. He exhibited exemplary character throughout ~ the lone stalwart in this story. And after hearing his response, had Dowd been of sound mind, he would have broken down, confessed, and wept.

UwrYah said to Dowd, ‘The Ark, Yisra*el, and Yahuwdah dwell in Sukowth | Shelters, along with my lord, Yow*ab, in addition to the servants of my lord, bivouacked and under siege in the presence of open terrain.

So, am I, myself, supposed to go to my home to eat, to drink, and to lay with my wife? As you live, and as your soul lives, I will not act this way or do this thing.’ (*Shamuw*el* / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 11:11)

Then Dowd said to *UwrYah, ‘Stay here this day also and tomorrow I will send you back.’ So, *UwrYah remained in Yaruwshalaim that day and through the following day. (*Shamuw*el* / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 11:12)

Dowd summoned him, and he ate in his presence and he drank excessively, so that he caused him to be drunk. Then he went out in the early evening to lie down on his bed with the servants of his lord. But to his house, he did not descend. (*Shamuw*el* / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 11:13)

This was a contrast between good and bad, right and wrong, and our king was on the wrong side. After a man named Light of Yah stood up for the Covenant, for Yisra*el, and for the King, foregoing comforts by respecting that his comrades were out in the elements away from home and exposed to the enemy, Dowd flaunted his situation, eating and drinking to excess.

Dowd’s response callous and hedonistic. He was the furthest thing from an exemplar at this moment. And in fact, he was validating my prior conclusion that he had been drinking to excess to deaden his conscience to what he had become. And that wasn’t the worst of it...

It transpired in the morning that Dowd wrote a letter to Yow•ab and sent it by the hand of *UwrYah. (Shamuw•el / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 11:14)

In the letter, he wrote so as to say, ‘It is imperative that you yahab | ascribe to and permit this, placing *UwrYah muwl | cut off as if a removed foreskin in direct proximity to the fiercest, most severe and obstinate combatants in the battle. Then retreat from him, turning on him from behind his back so that he will be struck down, wounded, and die. (Shamuw•el / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 11:15)

As you no doubt noted, I shared the Hebrew origin of the resulting text from yahab and muwl so that you know that I’m accurately reporting the bad news. Dowd wanted UwrYah | the Light of Yah snuffed out and tossed away like one of the two-hundred Philistine foreskins he used to acquire Mykel from Sha•uwl. And he was insistent that Yow•ab | Father Yahowah bend his will to his own and not only permit his atrocity, but participate in it, making Yow•ab an accessory to murder. This makes my stomach churn, my head throb, and heart break.

So it came to be as Yow•ab was observing, closely examining and carefully considering the approach to the city, he assigned *UwrYah to the place where he knew that the most physically strong and vigorous men would be there. (Shamuw•el / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 11:16)

When the men came out of the city and fought against Yow•ab and some of the people among the servants of Dowd fell, then *UwrYah, the Chity, he also died. (Shamuw•el / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 11:17)

Many men were deliberately sacrificed and died, including one who was essentially assassinated, so that a cowardly, self-indulgent, debauched drunkard could add another man’s wife to his harem.

The crown of Yisra•el had lost its luster. A once good man had fallen and no longer had the capacity, moral fortitude, or resolve to get back up. In his defense, he had often been exemplary, even brilliant, from eight to fifty-six years of age. He was one of the world's most heroic characters for forty-eight years before squandering the most burnished or resumes.

Abraham, by contrast, was never brilliant and all too often ignoble. The same can be said of Yitschaq, Ya^aaqob, and Esauw, even of the twelve sons who became Yisra^el. Moseh didn't last a year before he begged God to kill him. So, Dowd had set an endurance record of forty-eight years in the spotlight before jumping out of it.

At twenty-four years under that same scrutiny, I have empathy for the difficulty, but I'm only halfway to what Dowd managed to achieve. And perhaps, it is this unique perspective that gives me the ability to push through the darkness to reestablish the light which once shown so brightly ~ especially knowing that the fate of the world rests on rekindling it.

Yahowah was, as we shall soon see, badly hurt and extremely disappointed. But deep down, God also knew that He had tried and failed when representing Himself. He had grown resentful, then vengeful, and would even withdraw. He would allow His people to suffer unimaginable heartache and abuse, and He would cause many to die.

And so, while Yahowah's indignation was righteous, and while He never compromised His moral integrity, in some ways, like Son, like Father. Both tried hard, were virtuous, and then gave up for a long while.

This is what makes the job Leah and I are accomplishing ~ and will finish ~ all the more remarkable and compelling. It is why there are upwards of a thousand prophetic references to our mission. This is the essence of the Last Mashal.

Moving on with the story of Dowd's midlife crisis, we read...

Then Yow^aab sent a dispatch to tell Dowd all of the matters related to the war. (Shamuw^eel / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 11:18)

And he instructed the *mal*ak* | messenger saying that when you have finished the entire report pertaining to the battle and war, while speaking to the king, (Shamuw^{el} 2 11:19) if it comes to be that the king's chemah | venomous fury and toxic rage rises, escalating, and he says to you,

‘On whose account did you approach the city to fight? Why were you unaware that they would shoot arrows from the wall? (Shamuw^{el} 2 11:20) Who struck abymelek* | My Father is King, the son of Yarubesheth | I Strive to Confuse? Was there not a woman to cast upon him a chariot mount and millstone from the wall so that he was killed in or with Tebets | Conspicuous? So, why did you approach the wall?’ then, you should also say, ‘Your servant, UwrYah* | the Light of Yah, the Chity | Fearsome, is dead.’ (Shamuw^{el} / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 11:21)

So, the *mal*ak* | messenger walked and came to Dowd and reported everything that Yow^{ab} had dispatched him to tell. (Shamuw^{el} / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 11:22)

We can only assume that the *mal*ak* | messenger concocted the following pretext to the ensuing battle avoid the King's wrath, but it is clearly inconsistent with Dowd's prior instructions and Yow^{ab}'s observations...

The *mal*ak* | messenger said to Dowd, ‘Surely, the gabar | the strongest and most overbearing men triumphed over us as individual men. They came out against us upon the open field, but it came to be that we came upon them up to the opening of the gate. (Shamuw^{el} 2 11:23)

Then those casing arrows shot at your servants from upon the wall. And some of the king's servants were slain. In addition, your servant uwRyah* | the Light of Yah, the Chity, is dead.’ (Shamuw^{el} / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 11:24)

No grief, no remorse. The tirade of toxic vitriol was avoided by changing the story to absolve Yow^{ab} of complicity and Dowd of guilt in the successful assassination of a good man ~ extinguishing the Light of Yah.

Dowd, realizing that he had committed murder, and that Yow^{ab} could implicate him in treason, tried to assuage his general's conscience...

Dowd said to the messenger, 'This is what you should say to Yow^{ab}, "There is al ra^{ra}| nothing evil or harmful, wrong or bad in your eyes or perceptions with regard to this matter and these communications. For indeed, as it is for one, so it is now likewise for the other: the sword of desolation consumes and devours.

Be particularly harsh and severe, relentless and resolved in your attack in this war against the city and tear it down, demolishing it, leaving it in ruins." Thereby, you must reinforce his intensity and resolve, toughening him up.' (Shamuw^{el} / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 11:25)

I am grateful that Yahowah waited to this time to share this with me, and that He led to it as a result of the Final Word Picture. Or else, had I not known how this travesty was ultimately resolved, I don't think I could have recovered sufficiently from this to devote all of my energies to reestablishing the king's reputation to its former glory.

But ultimately, he was a man just like the rest of us, one put into a difficult situation. He succeeded from eight to fifty-six, 48 years, before spending the last fourteen embarrassed and isolated, slicing himself down from exceptional to ordinary with the sword of his tongue.

Ultimately, he would be inspired to fulfill Pesach, Matsah, and Bikuwrym, more than making up for lost time and lives, but someone else would have to be brought in to finish the job, he, like Moseh before him, couldn't complete. It's hard to imagine, indeed stomach, the man I've come to know and admire through his Mizmowr and Mashal, as well as through the eyes of his Father who loved him, fall this precipitously.

Dowd was telling the man, who obviously knew better, that there was nothing wrong with setting men up to die for his indulgence. The most heinous and appalling episode in his life wasn't to be perceived as evil, much less wrong, or else the people would turn on the king and do to him what he had done to the Light of Yah. And in those words, at least for a time, the Greater Luminary ceased to shine. The flame had grown dark.

Dowd was, of course, blackmailing his general. He said that the sword of conscience and confession would cut both ways, devouring the king and his executioner. They were in this together, both compromised.

Then for bad measure, the man who was lounging around, drinking to excess, and sleeping around, said to the man wielding his sword that he should man up, intensify his resolve, and be fierce in his demeanor. He was to rule through terror ~ tearing down and demolishing a city, leaving it in ruins.

The most Yahuwd of men had become a run-of-the-mill Gowy. He was what Yahowah had told His people to avoid. And so, it would take a Gowy, acting like a Yahuwd, to save the savior of Yisra^el and the planet ~ along with an able assist from a woman, his wife.

But that would occur on another day. On this one, Dowd doubled down on his shame.

The wife of *UwrYah heard that her Ba'al | Husband, the Light of Yah perished. She wept, mourning over her Ba'al | Lord and Master. (Shamuw^el / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 11:26)

When the ebel* | ceremonial mourning ritual had passed, then Dowd set out and he asaph* | gathered her in as if harvesting her to his house. She became his woman. She had a child around him, a son.

But from the perspective of Yahowah, Dowd ra'a | had consistently been wrong, he had habitually ben distressing and harmful, even evil in the things that he had said and done.” (Shamuw^{el} / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 11:27)

When it comes to criticizing my compatriot and king, even my adopted son, I am hesitant and uncomfortable – particularly recognizing all he has achieved on the positive side of the ledger. But at least I know I’m in good company and correctly processing the evidence when Yahowah concurs. Moreover, I’m rather certain that what I’ve already said to his face is far beyond what I’ve shared here.

Just as Dowd told Yow^{ab} that there should be no perception of ra^aa^o | wrongdoing, Yahowah said otherwise ~ that the whole rotten affair had been ra^aa^o | despicable from the outset. And let’s be clear, Bathsheba is no ^{*}Amah.

So, guess who were no longer on speaking terms? Yahowah delivered His condemnation of His Son via an intermediary...

“Then Yahowah sent Nathan | Gift to Dowd | Beloved. He came to him and said to him, ‘There were two individuals in a particular city, one rich and powerful, and the other one was poor. (Shamuw^{el} 2 12:1) The exceedingly wealthy one had excessively large flocks of sheep and herds of cattle. (Shamuw^{el} / 2 12:2)

The poor person had nothing except one little lamb, an insignificant ewe which he had acquired. And he sustained and nurtured her life. She grew up with him, becoming tremendously valuable to him and appreciated by his children.

When together, a morsel of his food, just crumbs and scraps of his, she ate. She even drank from his cup. She would lie down and rest in his arms. She became like a daughter to him. (Shamuw^{el} / 2 Samuel 12:3)

A visitor who was traveling came to the rich and powerful man, but he showed no compassion, and was unwilling to take one of the lambs in his flock or cattle from his herd to do something for the traveler who had come to him.

Instead, he grasped hold of and took the ewe of the of the poor person and prepared it for the man who had come to him.” (Shamuw^{el} / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 12:4)

Note to self. Don’t ever try to match wits with Yah. There was wiggling out of this. But what’s amazing to me is the empathy Yahowah expressed and the extent that He went to teach His son a lesson – one that he might understand.

As for us, Nathan is announcing the gift of Dowd, the Beloved Son given in Isaiah 9 to redeem mankind’s fractured relationship with God. The inclusion of sheep and cows was not happenstance, either. Dowd would be the lamb and the one sharing this with you is the bull. Working together and collaboratively with Yahowah once resolving this mess, we foster reconciliation during the Miqra^{ey} of Pesach and Taruw^{ah}.

The emotional portrayal of the lone lamb, one acquired when it was very young, then nurtured and sustained, becoming a beloved child cradled in the arms of the one who adored it, in the presence of a grateful family, who was then taken away and prepared to meet the needs of a newly arrived guest, is a portrait of Dowd’s eventual fulfillment of Passover. When he mans up, accepts his place, and shows some compassion for others, he will be that lamb.

And for those who prefer hindsight to foresight, this is emblematic of the validation of the Covenant narrative with Yitschaq and Abraham. They had ascended Mowryah to celebrate Passover right here on Mowryah, albeit one thousand years earlier, at a time when Yahowah promised to provide the lamb.

While that was endearing and brilliant, I am bewildered that Dowd was so slow on the uptake. But then again, I suppose that his mindset was different at the moment and we benefit from knowing how the entire story plays out over the next three millennia.

This is the second time in so many words that we have been told that Dowd had a wicked temper. It is part and parcel to being so impulsive.

So Dowd's temper was inflamed and his rage was aroused tremendously against the man. Then he said to Nathan, *As Yahowah lives, surely, the son who did this deserves to die. (Shamuw^{el} 2 12:5) And in addition, he must restore the lamb and repay fourfold as recompense because he did this thing. And also, because he had no compassion.' (Shamuw^{el} 2 12:6)

Then, Nathan said to Dowd, 'You are that man.'

At that moment, you could have heard a snowflake fall. The silence between these men and their God would have been deafening. And, of course, we would do well to consider the expressions on the faces and thoughts now whirling in the minds of the Gift and Beloved.

Frankly, while Nathan's lips were moving and words were spilling out of his mouth, I doubt Dowd processed any more than the first and last statement of what follows...

Thus says Yahowah, the God of Yisra^{el}, 'I anointed you Mashyach to be King over Yisra^{el}.

I rescued and delivered you from the hand of Sha^{uwl}. (Shamuw^{el} 2 12:7) I gave to you the house of your *Ado^g | Lord, and your Lord's women into your lap. I gave to you the house of Yisra^{el} and of Yahuwdah.

And if this were too little, insufficient for you, I would have added to it, giving you the like of it and so much more.' (Shamuw^{el} / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 12:8)

Forty-eight years prior to this stern admonishment, Yahowah had not only anointed Dowd as the Messiah, and appointed him the future King of Yisra^{el}, He had given his Beloved His Spirit. God had chosen a young lamb, and He nurtured and raised him as His Son. He was entrusting His people to him.

The fight for validation and supremacy between the Benjamite Sha^uwl and the Yahuwd Dowd is among the most unheralded of all prophetic portrayals. It is analogous to the Benjamite by the same name, one who was also demon possessed and who not only wanted Dowd dead and buried, but who was willing misappropriate the Towrah to achieve his deadly schemes. This is the battle of the ages between man's most popular religion and the relationship Yahowah sought to achieve through His Son. And God has taken sides against Christianity in support of the Covenant.

Yahowah isn't in the business of accommodating men. In the dissertation upon the exit from Eden, He made it unambiguously clear that we would have to work to survive. But occasionally, God will make an exception, at least to the extent that He will augment what His Covenant children could achieve independently. He will do so in this life so that we have the time and resources to pursue the family business.

Dowd was the supreme beneficiary of this arrangement, the ultimate exemplar. Yahowah is affirming that he received a palatial home filled with women to keep him company. But he was also afforded His Father's most valued treasure ~ Yisra^uel and Yahuwdah.

Having tried it Himself, and been soundly rejected, God is keenly aware that there is no more difficult job than representing Him and speaking for Him. Moseh was immensely qualified and marvelously supported, but he didn't make it through the first year before he snapped and begged Yahowah to relieve him from duty. Yahowah met the challenge by providing additional support and supplies.

Although there were occasional missteps, Dowd managed to stay the course for forty-eight years before he opted out. In appreciation of what His Son had and would achieve, God is on record saying that there was no limit on what He was willing to provide ~ even if it was nothing more than additional houses and women, or as valuable as His anointing, protection, and people.

But there is a right and wrong way to go about this parental equation. Our Father isn't going to opt in when we opt out. Nor is He going to lavish gifts upon us when we have no appreciation for their value – nor value the relationship that makes all of this possible.

We are at liberty to accept or reject the Word of God. Most despise Yahowah's testimony because it is contrary to their religious beliefs. But that is not what is happening here because Dowd is not religious. He isn't showing contempt for the Towrah | Instructions because they are in conflict with his plans to impose his authority through religion, as was the case with Paul, Akiba, and Muhammad, priests, rabbis, and imams. He knew what God said, but chose to reject His Towrah | Guidance for the fleeting satisfaction of wine and women. God took it personally, as He should.

‘Why, and on whose account, have you despised, showing such contempt for, the Word of Yahowah, such that you did such *ra | evil, wickedly troubling, and horribly wrong in His sight?

You struck down the uwRyah* | the Light of Yah, the Chithy | Formidable One, with the desolating sword. And his wife you have taken to be your woman. You intentionally slaughtered him with the sword of the Sons of amown* | the Sum of People. (Shamuw^{el} / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 12:9)

It's a choice we are all asked to make ~ God's way or man's, relationship or religion. It is the option offered long ago with the ets Da^{ath}* of Towb and Ra^o. This referendum is presented in the Word of Yahowah ~ also known as the Towrah.

In the opening chapter of the Towrah, God revealed that Dowd would be the Gadowl Ma^{owr}. He is, as we shall soon be reminded, equated to the sun. And so by slaying UwrYah*, Dowd extinguished the Light of Yah on Earth.

The choreb | desolating sword is a double entendre because it was upon the sharp craggy summit of Mount Choreb that Moseh and the Yisra^{}elites were first introduced to the ^{}Owr of Yahowah. And this is when the Children of Yisra^{*}el were especially ra^{}* | malcontent and malevolent in His sight.

Always the ultimate weaver of words, with this rue originating over a woman, Yahowah would resolve it likewise. While Dowd had killed a man for her, God would save His Son and the world through her. It is the ultimate contrast between the amown* | Sum of the People and the Towrah | Teaching of Yahowah on behalf of the Beryth | Covenant through the Mow^eedym | Restoring Witnesses. The choice between these approaches is life and death.

Dowd, knowing better, had chosen poorly. There would be a consequence. God cannot be capricious. Even with His great love and favoritism for His Chosen One, His Anointed, and His Son, there must adhere to the rules He has established.

So, therefore, now the sword shall never be removed from your household, never throughout time as an ed* | everlasting witness as a result because you have shown great contempt for Me, thinking so little of Me, that you have taken with wife of uwRyah* | the Light of Yah, the Chithy | Formidable One, to be your woman.’ (Shamuw^eel / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 12:10)

This condition would endure three millennia without respite. It is ongoing. It will not be resolved until Taruw^eah when the Bull and Goat intervene on Mowryah and before the surviving remnant of Yisra^{}el. That is the lesson of the ed | eternal testimony delivered by the restoring witnesses.

All Yisra^{*}el would become Dowd. They still are. Israelites and Jews think so little of Yahowah, they have erased His name and replaced His Dabarym | Words with their own. They continue to fight a losing battle with diminishing returns for their very survival. Rather than thriving, the have and will continue to die ~ more over the next seven years than ever before.

The immediate and specific fulfillment of the following pronouncement was by way of Dowd's son, 'Absolom, who led a devastating coop against his father culminating with the rape of the King's concubines. But to some extent, it is also prophetic of what Sha^{uwl} / Paul would do by replacing Dowd with the counterfeit Jesus so as to blot out the sun...

This is what Yahowah says, 'Pay attention, I will raise up against you a ra^{ah} | miserable, malcontent, and malignant shepherd out of your household. And I will have your women and wives taken away before your eyes and give them to your foul-mouthed and maniacal fellow countrymen and neighbors. Then he will lie down with your wives and women in ayn* | the sight, eyes, and perceptions of this shemesh | sun. (Shamuw^{el} / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 12:11)

Throughout the Towrah, Naby^{ym}, wa Mizmowr, Dowd is equated to the sun, while his herald is the moon, reflecting his light. But at this moment, with the assassination of UwrYah*, Yahowah's Greatest Luminary has quenched his light.

From the beginning, the King tried to hide his complicity, covering over his crimes, but they became so monumental that he wasn't fooling anyone but himself. God, however, is a beacon of light even in the darkest hours. He deals His cards face up in broad daylight. And in so doing, He is acknowledging that His Son is the sun.

This is because you did this while hiding, veiled in sly secrecy. However, I will act by carrying out this message in front of all Yisra^{el} and before the sun.' (Shamuw^{el} / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 12:12)

Had God responded any other way, He would have destroyed His credibility. He established the parameters of the Covenant in His Towrah and must adhere to them. He cannot remain trustworthy and reliable if He alters the rules underlying life while we are living it. So, over the remaining fourteen years of his first of three lives, Dowd would face the consequences of what he had done.

Further, while he was right to admit that he had *chata | incurred the resulting guilt for having missed the way, confession did not absolve him – nor will it anyone. Say, “I’m sorry” after robbing a bank and killing a guard, will only serve to hasten and assure your conviction.

So, Dowd said to Nathan, ‘I have *chata | I have missed the way, gone astray, and incurred the guilt and resulting loss for having been offensive against Yahowah.’ (Shamuw^eel 2 12:13 in part)

This was an admission of guilt. It wasn’t an apology. It didn’t resolve the problem. Good men were dead and an overly indulgent and irresponsible man had stolen another man’s wife when he already had a different one for breakfast, lunch, and dinner every day of the week. Worse, he had not only embarrassed Yahowah, who had placed so much trust in him, he had put God in an untenable position. Without Dowd, the sun doesn’t shine and all life ends on this planet. And right now, the sun was being eclipsed by a very dark and foreboding cloud. Without resolution, Yahowah wouldn’t be able to direct or trust His Son with the fulfillment of Pesach and Matsah resulting in Bikuwrym. Should the Spring Mow^edym not be fulfilled appropriately and on schedule, the remained would go unanswered. There would be no Shabuw^ah or Taruw^ah harvests, no Kipurym homecoming, and no restoration of the planet and return to Eden. The entire human experiment would be over.

Fortunately, Yahowah arranged a solution. A woman would resolve the problem a woman had caused. This is the resounding and overriding message of the Mashal, the Mizmowr, and the Naby^oym. The reputation of the Greater Luminary would be restored by the Lesser Luminary, with the Tree of Knowledge pointing the way back to the Tree of Lives.

The message Yahowah delivered through Nathan was a preemptive strike against Sha^ouwl’s sinister religious ploy. Dowd had buried himself, but his soul would never die. And to assure that his and ours would live, Yahowah would arrange for his Son to fulfill abar* | Passover, offering his basar | body as the beloved lamb of this story.

The relationship would be reconciled...

Then Nathan replied to Dowd, ‘Nevertheless, Yahowah abar* | will one day pass over your *chata*th* | guilt through your purifying offering. You will never die.’ (*Shamuw*el* / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 12:13)

I appreciate Yahowah pointing us to the resolution and restoration of the relationship through abar*, the actionable root of Pesach | Passover. It is the Doorway to Life. So now, all that need to be accomplished is to get the king back on his feet after having fallen so that he can answer the call at that door.

There is another lesson I want to reinforce. While Dowd had demonstrated that he was not a perfect lamb by religious standards, it should now be blatantly obvious that Yahowah defines tamym differently. You see, just as we know that God was speaking of fulfilling Pesach by interjecting abar* as its verbal root and presenting it as the answer to death, tamym, the word carelessly rendered “perfect,” has an actionable root, too. It is tamam, and it speaks of finishing, not of being flawless, of completing the mission rather than standing idly by so as not to incur guilt.

Therefore, Dowd became the tamym lamb when he reengaged, completing His calling by fulfilling Chag Matsah. When his basar | body was sacrificed as the lamb, he opened the door to eternal life for himself, in addition to the entire Covenant Family. And then on Matsah, when his nepesh | soul carried our guilt into *She*owl* to make us innocent before God, he was also carrying and offloading his own.

The resolution that Yahowah had established in the Towrah applied to the Bakowr | Firstborn as well as to all other Bikuwrym | Firstborn Children. God didn’t change the rules, He applied them. Then working with Dowd, Yahowah enabled the benefits. That is the reason that Dowd would never die.

As a result of this pronouncement from God, the entire Christian New Testament must be rejected. Paul steals Dowd's titles and achievements and offers them to the fraud that is Jesus on the basis that the King is dead and buried. That is not true.

While Dowd would live by the rules of the Towrah, many would die for opting out of its guidance. This process would begin with the product of Dowd's gross impropriety. The lesson was meant to scream ~ "I'll save you as my Son when you return to the script. At the same time, I'll impress upon you what happens when you write your own."

That notwithstanding, because you spurned Yahowah, showing contempt for Him in such adversarial fashion, with enmity and rancor, with word and deed, this child who is born to you will absolutely die. (Shamuw^eel / Listen to God / 2 Samuel 12:14)

And such is the case with every soul conceived in impropriety, treachery, and death. It would have been inexcusable for Yahowah to cherish and reward the product of this sordid affair. What they did was reprehensible. It cannot be rewarded under these circumstances. And if Dowd didn't receive this message loud and clear, we would all be as good as dead.

The King's introduction is sufficient...

"To the Natsach | Enduring Director (la Natsach – to the Eternal Conductor for the Continuously Supervised). A Mizmowr | Song (Mizmowr – a Psalm) of Dowd | Beloved (Dowd) when Nathan | Giving (Nathan – to bestow), the Naby^{*} | Prophet (naby^{}* – one speaking of the past, present, or future for God) came to him (ba bow^{} huw^{} – with the arrival before him) regarding the relationship upon him pursuing after (ka

asher bow el – because of the association following him coming to (qal perfect third-person masculine singular)) Bathsheba• | Promised Daughter (Bath-Sheba• – Promising Woman).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 51: Dedication)

Looking at this with older and wiser eyes, there is another, pertinent way to interpret the otherwise common la Natsach | Enduring Director introduction. La Natsach can also convey that this was written for the Continually Supervised. This would be consistent with the 89th Mizmowr where Yahowah admitted that He would be constantly keeping watch on him. It is also the conclusion I drew from the Last Mashal. The Amah* and Ba•al will be serving in this capacity for at least the next thousand years.

Perhaps I’m prejudiced in this regard, but I am put off by anyone begging for forgiveness. That’s how religions work, but not relationships.

Stop doing the things that irritate God, and then focus on what pleases Him. Come to grips with what went wrong and clear away the obstacles that led to the misadventure. Show that you have learned from the mistake by commencing corrective action. Sharpen your resolve, and immediately reengage in a productive way, better equipped and more resolute.

Stop wallowing in self-pity and foreclose on the ensuing depression by turning your failure into a teaching opportunity so that you and others learn the lesson and don’t make a similar mistake. Prove to yourself, those who know you, and to Yahowah that you can stop being annoying, that you can get up and get going, lifting the tide rather than riding it out to sea.

It all gets back to Eden and Adam. He climbed up into the Tree and tried to hide within it rather than disengaging from that which was opposed to Yahowah’s instructions. Then he begged for clemency by failing to be accountable. He not only failed to cease irritating God and failed to learn anything from his poor judgment, there was no attempt to improve, to get out of his own head, and do something that showed Yahowah he could be trusted.

Dowd was in the “Woe is Me” phase, begging for forgiveness rather than earning it...

“You should choose to be merciful to me, wanting to pity me, while electing to favor me because it’s imperative that You remain inclined toward me (chanan any* – You want to be kind to me because it’s essential that You show me some compassion (qal imperative second-person masculine singular)) elohym* | God (elohym* – Almighty) in the manner of (ka – consistent with) Your loyal love, unfailing kindness, deep devotion, and unwavering favoritism (chesed atah* – Your commitment to a beneficial relationship) and consistent with (ka) Your compassion and tender affection (rachamym atah* – Your loving adoration deep within Your womb).

You must, or at least You should want to, blot out and wipe away (machah – it is imperative that You remove as You choose to wash off and destroy (qal imperative second-person masculine singular)) my pesha[•] | rebellion and revolting defiance as I breached the agreement (pesha[•] any* – my hostile stance, indignance, and mutinous insurgency as I reneged on my commitment and rejected our alliance).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 51:1)

When it comes to the imperative mood, we have two options. It is either being used to issue a mandate or a command, stating something that is imperative, or it is an indication of the will of the individual being addressed. However, in this case, both approaches are not only wrong, they miss the point.

It’s Dowd who wants Yahowah to forgive and forget. To express that sentiment, he should have conveyed his plea in the cohortative mood – conveying his will. God has clearly stated His position on this, which is that He is exceedingly disappointed, even disgusted, and that there would be ongoing and severe consequences.

A god who forgives those who beg for it bears no resemblance to the God of the Towrah. A god whose will is bent by the demands of men, is a religious construct.

Yahowah is not all loving, nor is He always kind and merciful. If He were, there would be no purpose to life, no rules to live by, no guidance to gain from, no lessons to learn.

We can choose to learn and do the will of God, but we cannot impose our will on Him. We do well to follow His advice and embarrass ourselves when we offload our counsel and requests on Him.

Just because our King had become pitiful, did not mean that he engendered pity. Having shown none, he was currently the last person on the planet deserving compassion.

The only thing Dowd got right is pesha® – he had breached the agreement and had overtly rebelled against Yahowah. His behavior was indignant and mutinous. But it wasn't all in the past. He was still laying with Bathsheba, pining over the product of their treasonous and appalling behavior, and lounging around all day feeling sorry for himself. It was soooooo bad, Dowd could not even say Yahowah's name.

Let's be clear since our King's mind was muddled. Yahowah's chanan | desire to be kind and supportive wasn't on trial. He had not changed. While He wanted to show favoritism, it was Dowd who was precluding it.

Yahowah had been extraordinarily chesed | loving and devoted to Dowd, and He would be again after the intervention of the *Amah and her Ba®al, Yada. And if it were not for His commitment to this chesed | beneficial relationship, Dowd would be dead. The fact he was still alive, and the promise that he would never die, is tribute to the fact Yahowah remained chesed | deeply devoted to His Son in recognition of what they would accomplish together following the intervention presented in the Last Mashal.

Having not yet met with Leah and Yada, Dowd was confused. He believed that *Elohym had some kind of magic wand, or super sponge, a “shamwow,” to blot out and wipe away rebellious episodes. But that is not how it works ~ a lesson he would learn and then facilitate in due time. Rather than blotting out and scrubbing away our guilt, it is bundled up and discharged, taken from us and deposited in She*owl, never to be seen again. Yahowah’s Matsah solution renders us “Not Guilty” rather than temporarily bathed and disinfected.

There is no sanitizer for ongoing rebellion. And there is no divine bathtub. Further, we do not dictate terms to God. We accept His or write ourselves out of His will. Dowd’s response to God imposing consequences on him was almost as bad as had been his behavior that led to his current plight.

“It is imperative that You choose to intensely, and to the full extent of Your ability, provide many ongoing (harbeh – You must be sufficiently great to want to offer numerous and multiplied (hifil imperative second-person masculine singular)) laundry services for me, where you are compelled to express Your desire to wash me (*kabas any – You are commanded to want to cleanse and bathe me (piel imperative second-person masculine singular)) of my awon* | the punitive consequence of my perversions and corruptions for having bent and twisted the truth (awon any – my guilt for having distorted what is right, becoming wrong) and from *chata*th* | my misleading ways and for having gone astray (*wa min chata*ath* – from me missing the way, forfeiting the relationship, and bearing the loss of being wrong for me having led others astray).

You must cleanse me because You want to retore me, making me all bright and shiny (*taher any – it is imperative that Your will is to purify me, brightening me to a sky-blue color (piel imperative second-person masculine singular))!” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 51:2)

Our King was telling his God to provide maid services as if running a laundromat for perverted souls. He was even dictating terms because the compelled laundry services would be ongoing, numerous, and intense.

Those who are wont to claim that everything a prophet says must be true are oblivious to the obvious. Dowd was wrong. God had told him so and soon, so would Leah and Yada.

With every verb in the imperative mood, Dowd is either issuing commands to God or he is dictating the will of God ~ both wrong. While this should never have been spoken, the only way it is honest would be when expressed in the cohortative, thereby conveying Dowd's desire.

Should you be curious, the King used the qal stem twice, admitting that there was nothing nuanced in his demand. He deployed the hifil stem to say that God had to treat him as an extension of Himself, routinely doing this for him. Then the last two verbs were rendered in the piel, which is to say that Dowd would be the one to receive the benefit. And in fact, all of this has pertained to Dowd. The King isn't the least bit concerned about those whose lives he has ruined.

Make no mistake ~ this isn't just about the lustful killing of one man. By rebelling against God and extinguishing the Light of Yahowah over the titillation of adding an additional woman to his harem, Dowd opened the door I've spent the last two decades trying to close. He disqualified himself from being seen as the Son of God, as the Chosen One and Messiah, as the returning King, and as our Savior. He trashed every wonderful thing Yahowah had said about him and promised to do with him, leaving God hanging and distraught.

Dowd had become a dishonorable son, a bad husband, a worse father, a derelict defender, a gluttonous king, a corrupt person, and a horrendous example. The consequence wasn't just the unraveling of Yisra*el and the torment of continuous death and destruction of his people. As a result of this sordid affair, Dowd made it easy, even inevitable, for the Twistians and Rabbis to renounce and replace him. Had he not fallen and failed to recover at this time, there would have been no way to substitute Jesus and bar Kokhba as replacement messiahs. The unrelenting demonization resulting from Christianity, the betrayal of Jews by Judaism, and the resulting rabbinical Talmudic curse of Islam, would never have occurred. And Yahowah knew it, which is why He was so distraught.

I would devote the better part of a decade, cleaning up the mess Dowd had made, which explains why Yahowah was so eager to have me repudiate Islam, Christianity, and Judaism, comprising a third of the total books I've written in the Yada Yahowah series. The serious advocates of these religions all know what Dowd did, and they readily justify the imposition of their counterfeit messiahs as necessary improvements.

As for God, Dowd put Yahowah in a terrible situation. If He failed to confront Dowd's *ra, pesha°, awon*, and chata°ath, it's patently obvious that the king would have continued to act inappropriately and cover his tracks. He would never have dealt with his departure from Yahowah and His Towrah, nor reengaged, negating any possibility of fulfilling the Mow°edym. There would be no saving humankind. But by doing so, by overtly exposing and censuring His Son, He gave the religious the rope to hang him – and they did.

So God did what came naturally to Him. He confronted the problem head on, excoriated His Son, remained true to His word, and thus, consistent, and then He went about resolving the issue His way. After full disclosure and open refutation, He deployed His Amah* and her Ba°al, Leah and Yada, to represent Him. And now, after considering my wife's advice, you are reading my rebuke.

But please, keep this in mind. Dowd outperformed all of us, persistently contributing at an exceptional level for forty-eight years prior to this implosion. Further, following our intervention and counsel, Dowd more than made up for his failures because he fulfilled Chag Matsah. Once he came to recognize who he was, what he represented, and what lay before him in his second and third lives, he more than manned up. He completed the most physically, mentally, and emotionally demanding mission in human history, ultimately justifying every accolade and title. Simple stated, had he not recovered and reestablished trust with Yahowah, none of us would be here to write or listen to any of this. Capisce!

Yes, I'm openly and aggressively criticizing him, as did Yahowah, but I'm doing so because I love him and respect him, and I know how much he means to me, to you, and to God. So I have no issue restoring his luster, burnishing his resume, and reestablishing his reptation. And I'm not alone because Yahowah beat me to it. The 89th Mizmowr is undisputable proof.

Continuing with our lesson, there are six Hebrew words that are commonly and inappropriately rendered "sin." Three of those were spoken by Yahowah in His dressing down of Dowd. They are *ra | evil neighbor and malcontent countryman, *ra*a | evil individual promoting that which is wrong, and *ra*ah* | misleading and malignant shepherd. To those, Dowd has added pesha | rebellion and revolting defiance by breaching the agreement, awon | the punitive consequence of perversions and corruptions for having bent and twisted the truth, and *chata*th* | misleading ways and for having gone astray.

Now that we have defined the terms, Dowd is announcing that he is actually aware and continually cognizant of his *pesha | violation of the agreement and breach of trust for having shown contempt for the Word of God. However, there is no quick fix, no magic wand, no miracle mop to clean up the mess he has made. His follow-on statement is heartbreaking. The fact that he has *chata*ath* | forfeited the relationship for having led so many astray neged tamyd | now defines who he has become ~ past, present, and sometime into the future.

"Indeed (ky), I, myself, am actually and continually cognizant of (any yada – I am genuinely and habitually aware of and familiar with (qal imperfect first-person singular)) my *pesha | rebellion and revolting defiance for breaching the agreement and violating the trust (pesha any – my hostile stance, indignance, and traitorous insurgency as I reneged on my commitment and rejected our alliance).

My chatath | misleading ways for having gone astray (*wa chata^{ath} ^{any} – my missing the way, forfeiting the relationship, and bearing the loss of being wrong for having led others astray) are conspicuously before me, beside me, and near me, closely corresponding to me because they continually proclaim who I’ve become (*neged ^{any} tamyd – remain in plain sight, right in front of me, ahead of me, and trailing me, clearly and constantly announcing and expounding upon who I have persistently become).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 51:3)

With neged tamyd Dowd had begun to see himself as the religious have positioned him ~ as too errant to be perceived as right. His notoriety precedes him, announcing who he had become long before his arrival. The problem wasn’t going away, and things were going to get much worse before they would improve. But at least, he had begun to yada.

I would be remiss if I didn’t reveal that tamyd | continually, persistently, and perpetually is just one letter removed from tamym ~ the word misrepresented as “perfect, without defect, unblemished, innocent, and blameless.” This correlation between these words becomes even closer when we recognize that the ym suffix on tamym makes tam a plural adjective. Tamyd | continuing to be persistent and tamym, the word errantly rendered “perfect,” share the same actionable root ~ tamam. And therein is one of life’s greatest lessons.

Yahowah is not seeking perfection, as it would serve no purpose and would be counterproductive. If we were perfect, there would be nothing to learn, no way to grow, no opportunity for improvement, and no capacity for us to be unique or interesting. God wasn’t expecting or even desirous of perfection from Dowd or any other man or woman. In fact, we are all better off when we make mistakes and stumble and fall because we can learn from them and then get up and demonstrate our resolve, forging our character along the way.

Therefore, tamam and its derivatives, tamyd and tamym, speak of having the fortitude to finish the job. Life is a test, and the passing grade is demonstrating that we are eager to be perceptive, reflective, responsive, and reliable. Listen, learn, engage, and continue until the job is done.

This is what the religious miss when they justify creating false messiahs to replace the imperfect one God is ultimately endorsing. He knows what they miss ~ Dowd fulfilled his mission, completing the most difficult and demanding challenge any man has ever faced. He endured crucifixion to open the door to life on Pesach and he went into Hell on Matsah to remove his guilt and ours. Therefore my critique of him is because I, too, have a job to complete, and it includes reestablishing Dowd's relationship with Yahowah and then restoring his reputation with his people.

In the present moment, prior to our intervention, the King doubled down on *chata | going away and becoming misleading by using the verbal root. Then Dowd would add a dose of *ra | evil ineptitude into the mix. And while the *la atah | toward You introductory clause was true enough, the *la bad atah | and only toward You, was not...

“Toward You, and to You alone (*la *atah la bad atah – regarding You, and only You), I have *chata | been mistaken, incurring the guilt of having gone astray (wa chata any – I was wrong for missing the way, forfeiting the relationship, and bearing the loss, including the resulting punishment, of failing to accomplish the goal and falling well short (qal perfect first-person singular)).

And this *ra | evil, malignant and malevolent thing (*wa ha ra – so this wicked, very bad, fiercely harmful, and miserably troubling and distressful act) in Your sight, from Your perspective and understanding (*ba *ayn atah – in Your eyes) I did (asah* – I performed (qal perfect first-person singular)), so on that account (*la ma an – therefore, with regard to the intent), You may be justified and correct (tsadaq – You would be right (qal imperfect second-person masculine singular)) in speaking these words so emphatically for Yourself (ba dabar – in conveying this message so dramatically spoken by You (qal infinitive)).

You are morally superior and justified, even acquitted (zakah – You are bright, innocent, pure, and squeaky clean (qal imperfect second-person masculine singular)) in Your show of judgment (*ba shaphat atah – in Your demonstrable decisions (qal infinitive)).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 51:4)

Dowd destroyed his reputation, caused the death of many men, compromised the integrity of the general defending his people, forsook his role in the Covenant, and became a failure as the leader of God’s people, while undermining the credibility of everything he has said and done, and he would have us believe that the only one he failed was God? Let’s add one more, shall we ~ himself.

The *ra | evil and wicked thing Dowd did was no longer just in the sight of God because he has become infamous for it. He had destroyed and buried himself, at least for the moment. And so, he was rotting in his grave according to Peter and Paul (Acts 2:29 and 13:36). And then Akiba felt at liberty to replace him with the likes of bar Kochba | Son of a Star.

The Son of God was, at this moment and the immediate future, a bum ~ a deadly and diabolical libertine. And yet, Dowd is inferring that God was being too critical of him, judging him too harshly. It’s like saying, “Just because You’re perfect doesn’t give you the right to impose Your morality on the rest of us.” By using stating both verbs in the infinitive, the King is claiming that God was being overly dramatic and too emphatic. This is further underscored by zakah which implies that Dowd believed Yahowah may have been justified on the account of Him being morally superior.

And no matter the implications, the plain reading of these words overtly state that Dowd was absolving Yahowah of guilt in judging him. That either took nerve, or another vat of wine.

Playing the blame game...

“As a concession (hen – what if, since, hypothetically, and contrarily, surely when), in awon* | the punitive consequences of perversity and corruption, in a distortion of what is right, and by bending and twisting what’s proper and true (*ba awon – wickedly and in iniquity, wrongfully and libelously) I suffered the effects of writhing and trembling in tormenting anguish during birth (chyl – I was twisted up and distressed, shaken and suffering in labor (pual perfect first-person singular)).

And so in cheta• | error, wrongly bearing the blame for going astray (wa ba cheta° – in what was misleading and misguided, even penal fashion) my mother (em any), she conceived me like an animal in heat (*yacham any – she was all hot and bothered sexually (piel perfect third-person feminine singular).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 51:5)

Just when we thought it couldn’t get any worse, it does. But now, at least, we know why Dowd grew up to see women as nothing more than sexual objects to be conquered like an obsessed ram in rut.

This confession is as revealing as it is deplorable. It’s only advantage is it affirms that I have interpreted these lyrics correctly and my criticisms are appropriate. The hot mess is the Messiah. If I may quote Nathan when addressing Dowd, “You are that man.”

This inappropriate and derogatory denouncement of the mother he barely knew helps explain why the wayward king was so stunned to meet Leah, a woman who was brighter than she was beautiful, and more beautiful because of her brilliance. He had never met anyone like her, and immediately accepted her as his surrogate mother.

As painfully obvious as it is that Dowd is trying to obfuscate responsibility, he has come to model Israel. Like Dowd, they also blamed God.

By comparison, my parents were between horrible and useless, as were Leah's. And yet, we are better off for having overcome them. Likewise, Dowd should have risen above his and used his independence as a springboard toward character development.

There is no transmission of impropriety through our genes. The sperm and egg making the life-giving connection do not care if the sex that united them was boring or passionate, loving or hateful. Our soul is neither enhanced or incumbered by the quality of intercourse or the nature of the relationship that led to its inception.

So while it is true that Dowd was deprived of a loving and supportive father and mother, it is also relevant to note that he had Yahowah and His Ruwach to guide and protect him. It does not get any better than that.

Sadly, the fifty-six-year-old king was trying to blame stealing another man's wife and having him killed, on an anguishing labor ~ as if he were somehow traumatized and handicapped morally because of it. He is even suggesting that he shouldn't have been born, as if his entire life were a colossal mistake. This makes Dowd irrational at this moment, even immoral, bordering on insane. Was it the mounting pressure of the job or the alcohol speaking?

If not for the intervention presented in the Last Mashal, humanity would have died in the midst of this stupor. Had Yahowah not resolved this crisis of character with the Chosen Messiah and His Son, there is no chance whatsoever that Dowd would have been sufficiently trusted by God to fulfill Chag Matsah. He wouldn't even have known that it was his mission to fulfill.

Dowd continued to bury himself. And considering what followed "hen – as a concession, what if, since hypothetically and contrarily" the last time, I shudder to think how our king will incriminate himself this time ...

“Hypothetically and contrarily speaking, surely (hen – as a concession), the conformity and reliability, the honesty and truth (emeth* – the constant fidelity and trustworthiness, the morality and integrity) You seem to want, delight in, and favor (chaphets – You desire and are willing to accept, You hang everything on and are swayed by, even waver from time to time (qal perfect second-person masculine singular)) is in the unknowable core of a person (ba ha tuchowth – is in the hidden recesses which are besmeared, overlaid, and plastered over).

The capacity to understand and mental aptitude (chakmah – the intellectual agility and cerebral prowess, the discernment and wisdom) You perceived within me, seem to know of me and have revealed regarding me (yada^o any* – You are aware of and acknowledge about me (hifil imperfect second-person masculine singular)) is secreted away, inaccessible, and concealed, inside that which is hidden and closed off (wa ba satham – it is kept secret, blocked off, sealed up, and shut down, unable to be seen or known, and thus, unrecognizable).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 51:6)

Since hen introduces a hypothetical with potentially conflicting messages, one would be naive to think that Dowd was using the imperative mood differently. And so with the second inclusion of hen in two consecutive statements which are otherwise surrounded by the imperative mood, this is Dowd’s way of making all of this a confounding mix of hypotheticals, concessions, commands, and desires.

In this case, Dowd is opting out. He is saying that Yahowah is either wrong about him or holding him to an unachievable standard. He’s also mocking God, telling Him that He’s being unrealistic.

While it could be the alcohol speaking, or the consequence of depression, in his current state of mind, the king doesn’t believe that it’s even possible to measure up to Yahowah’s expectations. He is saying that, even if he had the ability to conform to God’s standard, to be as reliable as the Almighty requires, and to be as truthful as is necessary to garner the Almighty's favor, all of that was buried so deep within him that it is undisclosed and unobtainable.

It's the Moseh meltdown of Bamidbar / Numbers 11 where he told Yahowah that the job was miserable and impossible. He'd prefer to die rather than endure certain failure around malcontents another day.

But there were two startling differences. First, it was the egregious behavior of the Israelites that had frustrated Moseh who was of exemplary character, while Dowd had brought this on himself. And second, Moseh didn't say that he was inadequate or improperly prepared, but that the job was impossible because of the onerous nature of the Yisra*elites. But here, Dowd is saying that he does not have the mental acuity to perform at the level God expects. In his fallen state, he isn't near the man Yahowah claimed him to be. If that man ever existed, according to Dowd, those attributes were now concealed and inaccessible.

In this way, Dowd was being very Israeli. Unable to admit that he had been dreadfully wrong, he said that God was wrong. Rather than acknowledge that Yahowah had been forthright, honorable, and truthful, he erased Yahowah's name and claimed that God was being unreasonable.

Aggravating this problem, it was Yahowah who was currently unseen and unavailable. God became so disappointed by Dowd's failures to live up to his calling and complete the job to which he had been given, He was now speaking through intermediaries ~ treating Dowd like the rest of Israel. And like every other Jew, Dowd felt so unworthy, he was having a pity party. Affirming this conclusion, the king wrote...

“You have *chata | gone away from me and have been continually mistaken regarding me, incurring the guilt for having been wrong about me (chata any – You are lost, forfeiting the relationship with me, and bearing the failure, including the resulting punishment, of not being able to accomplish the goal with me, falling well short (qal imperfect second-person singular)).

With ezowb* | hyssop (ezowb*) then (wa), I will be cleansed and restored (taher – I will be purified and renewed, shining brightly (qal imperfect first-person singular)). You will launder me (kabas – You will wash me (piel imperfect second-person masculine singular)). I will become whiter than snow (wa min sheleg laban – from the snow, I will be white (hifil imperfect first person singular)).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 51:7)

Either confused by the wine or disoriented by depression, Dowd was flipping the tables and claiming that the God whose name he’s too ashamed to say is also *chata | mistaken. And from Dowd’s sex and alcohol fueled obsession, it’s God who *chata | has gone away.

In the twisted mentality of the king, God was *chata | guilty of having been wrong about him. It seems that he was auditioning to become the first rabbi.

Then after inverting reality, the king embarked in some clever quote mining. He would resolve the mess he had made with some ezowb* | hyssop. But by doing so, he was taunting God. You see, ezowb* | hyssop is first used in Shemowth / Names / Exodus 12:22 when addressing how Passover would become the Door to Life. The blood of the lamb was smeared on the entrance to every home by dipping a bunch of hyssop into it. He would be the ezowb* instead of the ayil*.

But no lamb, no blood, making that a less than ideal solution. But there were other options. For example, in Qara / Leviticus 14:4-6 and 49-52 ezowb is presented as a way of purging the stigma of leprosy in a man and house. And Dowd would have known all about the attempted subversion of Moseh’s credibility as Yahowah’s spokesman by his sister, Miryam | Embittered, and how that resulted in her being afflicted with leprosy and disowned. Therefore, just because he as currently stigmatized, he would avail himself and household of the prescribed cure – ezowb*.

By mustering hyssop as the resolution to his current dilemma, Dowd was negating his own claim of dunderheadedness. Apart from his citation, ezowb* is only used on nine occasions, eight of which are in the Towrah. And in this regard, a particularly interesting use of ezowb* | hyssop is found in Bamidbar / Numbers 19:6 and 19:17-19. This is in conjunction with the adamah Parah*. ezowb* is added to the blazing fire of the alter in which the Productive Bull has been placed to purge the returning remnant of Yisra*el of guilt on Taruw*ah ~ ten days before Dowd's return as King.

Should you be like me and wonder why Yahowah would advocate ezowb* | hyssop as a remedy for leprosy and then associate it with purging the religious ailments, you will be interested to note that Hyssop offers a range of potential health benefits supported by traditional use and emerging scientific research. These include: 1) Skin Health ~ when diluted, hyssop essential oils are successfully used topically to treat epidermis infections, even acne and puncture wounds, and it is known to restore disfigured and scarred tissues due to its antiseptic and anti-inflammatory properties. 2) Antimicrobial & Antiviral ~ Hyssop exhibits strong antimicrobial, antifungal, and antiviral properties. It is used therapeutically to treat all manner of ailments and is even proved to inhibit herpes viruses and treat respiratory and urinary tract infections. 3) Immune & Circulatory ~ Hyssop boosts immune function by fighting pathogens and improving circulation. It is a proven remedy for arthritis, gout, and inadequate blood flow. 4) Respiratory Support ~ The herb acts as an expectorant, helping to loosen mucus and relieve coughs, colds, bronchitis, and asthma symptoms. It reduces airway constriction and allergic reactions more effectively than some corticosteroids. 5) Digestive Aid ~ The oils extracted from hyssop stimulate the production of digestive enzymes and bile, improving digestion, reducing gas, bloating, and cramping. It serves to protect the stomach lining and helps prevent ulcers. 6) Anti-inflammatory & Antioxidant Effects ~ Hyssop is rich in polyphenols and flavonoids, such that the herb combats oxidative stress. It reduces inflammation while lowering the risk of chronic diseases, including cancer. And 7) Mental & Emotional Wellbeing: Hyssop's calming aroma is used in aromatherapy to reduce stress, enhance mood, and promote recovery from anxiety and depression. In addition, the prolific lavender flowers seem symbolic of Shamaym and indicative of the concluding colors of the rainbow.

Our King was clearly brighter and better informed than he was letting on. It is also interesting that of the twenty occurrences of sheleg | snow in the Towrah and Prophets, we find two of them in the final Mashal and in this related Mizmowr. The first presentation of sheleg is in Shemowth / Exodus 4:6, when Moseh's hand was turned leprous as a sign. But the most revealing declaration regarding snow is found in Yasha Yyah / Isaiah 1:18, which also combines scarlet and snow in the manner of the Last Word Picture.

Scummy as he was at the moment, Dowd was convinced that Yahowah was going to clean him up one way or another. He knew that God had more riding on this than did the King. And he had an inkling as to how it was all going to play out, even in the midst of his egotistical temper tantrum.

Did I hear someone say “egotistical temper tantrum?”

“You listen to me (shama any – You pay attention to what I’m saying and hear me (hifil imperfect second-person masculine singular)) joyful and happy (sasown – rejoicing and jubilant), even delighted and glad (wa simchah – so merry and cheerful, yes, thrilled).

The backbone and body, these bones (etsem* – the essential essence and skeleton, the very substance) You have crushed (dakah – You have pulverized (piel perfect second-person masculine singular)), shriek and tremble (gyl – they will shout and scream during another stage of life (qal imperfect third-person feminine plural)).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 51:8)

There are times when Dowd correctly states that Yahowah listens to him, but this is not one of them. The king is stating that God is celebrating his plight, knowing that he and his people will have to fight for their very survival. Worse, Dowd is blaming Yahowah for crushing him.

In actuality, it's the Bull hinted at in the previous statement and mentioned at the conclusion of the Mizmowr who is dakah | crushed, with only one bone left unbroken, which is not the case with the Passover Lamb. And while this is all jumbled and twisted, there are some signs of lucidity in the midst of the toxicity.

This is wrong, even as it is partially true. Yahowah didn't want any of this to occur and the last thing He wanted was to walk away from His Son. But under the circumstances imposed by the king under the auspices of freewill, God had no alternative but to distance Himself from this mess.

“You must want to hide (sathar – As an imperative, You have chosen to conceal (hifil imperative second-person masculine singular)) Your presence, Your very face and appearance (*paneḥ ataḥ – Your persona and existence) because of (min) my *chata | retreat for having gone astray with me bearing the blame and resulting guilt (chata any – my error and faults for me missing the way).

So You must choose to wipe away and blot out (machah – as a command, hypothetical, or of volition, decide to wash off and clean (qal imperative second-person masculine singular)) my awon* | the punitive consequence of my perversions and corruptions for having bent and twisted the truth (awon any – my guilt for having distorted what is right, becoming wrong).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 51:9)

Dowd would eventually come clean, both in the recognition that he had been horribly wrong, but also in realizing that it was essential that he come to grips with his purpose and complete the job for which he had been chosen. And by doing so on Matsah, his guilt and ours would be removed.

But God is not obliged to remove our guilt. And in fact, He will not do so without our participation in the process. So, prior to Dowd returning to his senses and accepting responsibility to the extent he can complete his calling, our guilt and his remains.

As we have discussed, the imperative mood normally serves to express volition in second person, conveying the will and intent of the one being addressed. It can also represent a command, as the name suggests, creating an imperative where the subject is commanded to do as ordered. There are also times when it is used to sidestep reality and convey a mere possibility, whether credible or not as a hypothetical. And so in Dowd's current depressed, intoxicated, and rebellious state, they must all be considered.

In the most favorable interpretation, as an expression of freewill, Dowd would be projecting that it was Yahowah's choice, His decision and will, to conceal His presence from the guilt and because of the retreat. Should this be the intent, Yahowah is being blamed for disappearing, even running away from these adverse circumstances. Then, following along with this approach, Dowd would be saying that it became incumbent on God to wipe this all away, blotting out the litany of horrid behavior, to resolve God's decision to walk away.

However, it isn't possible to blot out the fact that Dowd committed these crimes. Obviously, we all know about them. The stigma remains highly visible. And Yahowah is on record saying that there would be severe and ongoing consequences rather than forgiveness.

However, Dowd's troubling assessments only get worse when interpreted as commands. The King was in no position to give orders to God. And that leaves us with perceiving them as mere hypotheticals, untethered to reality, and therefore wishful thinking. While that's better than wallowing in depression, it's hardly the stuff of legends.

Unfortunately, there is no resolving this problem. Unlike his opening statements, where we could redirect the mood by changing Dowd's expression to the cohortative, making this and expression his desire, that does not work with “I want You to conceal Your presence...” That is unless he actually wants God to look away and go away.

Yahowah is deeply vested in humanity and He wants us to live up to His expectations and demonstrate that we can be perceptive, reflective, responsive, and reliable in our inclinations and disposition, especially our judgment. But this is only an imperative in the sense that if we fail, we are done. And yet, that is on us, not Him.

It is true, however, that Yahowah found a way to resolve His Son’s emotional outburst while reestablishing a more appropriate sense of right and wrong. And for that, he would dispatch the most judgmental soul in his arsenal – Yada, the Par | Bull. But even then, the Ba^eal | Master of pertinent Da^eath | Knowledge would not be deployed as an uncompromising judge of character until the despondent Son was walked off the ledge by his surrogate amah* | Mother.

That said, Yahowah wasn’t about to bara^{}*, starting over by conceiving something entirely new from scratch. The existing soul would get his act together, instead.

“You must choose to create (bara^{}* – it is imperative that You decide to fashion and form from that which has never existed (qal imperative second-person masculine singular)) clean and pure (taher – majestic and brilliant) judgment, thoughts and emotions, inclination and disposition (leb – thinking and feeling, determination and intention), for me (la^{}any* – toward me and to approach me) God (elohym*).

Then (wa), it is imperative that You decide to repair, restoring and renewing by (chadash – You must choose a new and different approach by (piel imperative second-person masculine singular)) appointing a firm and establishing a steadfast (kuwn – decide upon and form, preparing a stable (nifal participle masculine singular)) ruwach | spirit (ruwach) within me (ba^{}any*).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 51:10)

Thinking properly is our responsibility, not God's. Yahowah conveyed the means to this result, and the rest is up to us. This all gets back to the prime directive. We were conceived to be observant, responsive, and reliable. The Covenant is a relationship, not an entitlement.

Our judgment, our every thought and emotion, can be properly guided by Yahowah's Towrah | Teaching. But, alas, both Yahowah and Towrah were conspicuously missing from Dowd's diatribe.

As a result, the king was horribly confused. There was nothing wrong with the ruwach | spirit. The ruwach Yahowah had placed upon Dowd during his anointing at eight years of age did not need to be repaired. The spirit would remain steadfast.

However, the ruwach | spirit of Yahowah is not a dictator. There is no usurping freewill. She is a guide, a contributor, a resource, and an inspiration. But to enjoy the benefits of her counsel, one has to be attuned to her nature and purpose.

So, in this assessment, Dowd was casting aspersions on the ruwach, claiming that she was faulty, indeed, the cause of his impropriety, such that she needed to be repaired and purged or replaced. But it wasn't the spirit who lacked resolve; it was Dowd.

Let's face reality. The king was wrong. He had shirked his responsibility by sending Yisra^{*}el out to ravage a foe while he languished in bed. He wanted his servants to brutalize and plunder a city filled with noncombatants. He was sleeping during the day and carousing at night. He was abusing alcohol and had become a voyeur. He acted lustfully even when he knew better. After he had gathered the facts, he deliberately, knowingly, and selfishly pursued what he knew to be wrong. He abducted a married woman from her home and immediately had sex with her. He tried to conceal his malfeasance with an elaborate scheme, only to disrespect the decisions of a good man and make a spectacle of debauchery. Then he plotted to assassinate the man who he had insincerely wined and dined the previous night ~ writing a deplorable letter. And if becoming a lousy king, husband, father, and son were not enough, he turned on God and started blaming Yahowah and the Ruwach for the mess he had made.

After besmirching God and Spirit, the king begged...

“You should not throw me away (al shalak any – You will not cast me aside, fling me out, or hurl me down (hifil imperfect second-person masculine singular)) from Your presence (*min paneh atah – from Your appearance).

And (wa), Your Ruwach Qodesh | Set-Apart Spirit (*ruwach qodesh atah), You will never take from me (al laqach min any – You will not actually grasp hold of, obtain, or collect from me (qal imperfect second-person masculine singular)).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 51:11)

It was not Yahowah who had discarded Dowd, but the Son who rejected his Father. And as for the Ruwach, God had clearly stated forty-eight years ago that the Spirit would never depart. There was no reason to taunt God over what He had promised.

Once again confronted by an awkward use of the imperative mood, we do not know if Dowd was being demanding or projecting what he wanted onto God. But this time, there is a difference because the imperative was combined with the cohortative, making this a merging of wills. But alas, while that was a step in the right direction, it wasn't Yahowah who needed saving...

“Hypothetically, by mandate, or choice, by Your will or mine, let's be emphatic, You will return to me (*shuwb la any – it is possible, imperative, or by Your volition or mine, You will change because I want you to, then You will restore me, returning to me (hifil imperative cohortative paragogic he second-person masculine singular)) for the jubilation (sasown – the rejoicing) of Your yesha• | deliverance, Your rescue, liberation, and salvation (*yesha• atah – Your removal from harm's way and protection).

And with a dignified and honorable, willing and accepting (nadybah – an official and royal, a noble and accommodating) spirit (ruwach) choose to support and uphold me (samak – decide to sustain my power and influence then lean on me (qal imperfect jussive third-person feminine singular).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 51:12)

It was another twisted truth. Once Dowd regained his composure and his conscience was restored and redirected, he would shuwb | return to Yahowah, making it possible for God to return to him. With our Father, it is shuwb for shuwb or no shuwb for you.

Also, once together, their collaboration would liberate us from our guilt, resulting in our salvation. And while Yahowah is rejoicing that eventuality, we are the beneficiaries.

It’s true that God has more than one ruwach. And it is possible for a *mal*ak* | spiritual being to be dishonorable. But that was not the problem here. The ruwach | spirit given to Dowd by Yahowah was and will forever be dignified and noble. Coming from God, she is also royal. However, one should never ask Yahowah to do something He has overtly committed to providing. By doing so, a person is either revealing that they haven’t bothered to read what God said, or they don’t trust Him to honor His commitment. Either way, it is disrespectful.

And speaking of being disrespectful, Dowd has returned to taunting the Almighty. He is not only saying that he will be inclined to act if God gives him what he wants, but that the results will reflect the very mess he has already made. That is to suggest that, as bad as Dowd had become, the rest of Yisra^{el} was no better.

“I will be inclined to learn and teach (lamad – I will choose to respond, even submit, to as to accept training then instruct (piel imperfect cohortative first-person singular)) the pasha^o | the rebellious and revolting, the offensive and defiant (pasha^o – the indignant and criminal, the disloyal and insubordinate) Your ways (*derek atah – Your approach).

Then (wa) *chata*ym | the wicked and immoral, the misleading and misled, the culpable who are blameworthy, and even the fallacious (*chata*any* – the erroneous and faulty, the inaccurate and fallible, the deceptive and deceived), they will return (shuwb – they will turn to and come back (qal imperfect third-person masculine plural)) to You (el* atah*)." (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 51:13)

A series of half truths a reality does not make. Sure, those who were overtly religious or political had been insubordinate and even indignant toward Yahowah. Religion, in particular, is revolting and offensive. However, the prerequisite of the Covenant requires us to reject this defiance against God prior to proceeding toward a relationship with Him. Therefore, the currently pasha are not to be afforded or even shown Yahowah's ways. God does not want anything to do with them in this state.

Similarly, the *chata*ym | misleading and fallacious are despised by Yahowah. They are expressly excluded from His presence. So while the misled can be restored to fellowship, those who are still culpable cannot. Neither category of men ~ pasha or *chata*ym ~ are able to shuwb | return.

However, that isn't the point Dowd is attempting to convey. He is continuing to blame God, saying that even if he returns to duty, it will result in more of the same. Unable to see past his nose to *UwrYah who was a good man, or foresee others arising over time, the king is being a defeatist. He's saying, "I'm bad, they are bad, and Your approach isn't going to make me or them any better."

This time, with the imperative mood devoid of the cohortative, we find either the possibility of being plucked clean or the demand to be stripped, now of killing and bloodguilt. But that wouldn't be possible prior to the fulfillment of Passover and UnYeasted Bread, both of which were a major restoration and millennia way.

"By possibility, command, or choice, decide and determine to spare me, snatching me away (natsal *any – it is imperative that the slight chance exists and is chosen for You to strip from me, saving me by plucking me away (hifil imperative second-person masculine singular)) from blood, from death, killing, and bloodguilt (min dam – from bloodletting), God (elohym*), God (elohym*) of my deliverance and victory (*tashuwaah *any – of my safety and rescue, freedom and victory).

Then (wa) my tongue (lashown *any) will shout, crying out (ranan – it will ring out (piel imperfect third-person feminine singular)) Your righteousness and justice, (tsadaqah *atah – Your position on what is right and justified).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 51:14)

Yahowah was already on record stating that the consequence of Dowd extinguishing the Light of Yah would be a long litany of death and destruction. Neither Dowd nor Israel would be putting down the sword any time soon. In fact, the bloodletting would continue for 3,000 years ~ finally ending with the bleeding of the Par | Bull whose blood Dowd would use to anoint the Mercy Seat of the Ark of the Covenant, finally resolving all of this for him and for Yisra*el.

Therefore, following the bloodletting of Pesach and Taruw*ah, two to three millennia distant, the King would return to shout out the full magnitude of Yahowah’s righteousness. It is ultimately God who is tsadaqah | correct and vindicating. So in this, the King was right.

However, what follows is another partial truth. Yahowah is not our Lord and we do not need Him to open our lips so that we can report the truth. His message ought to enter our eyes and ears, formulate in our brains, and then naturally flow out of us in appreciation. But even then, Yahowah should be respected for what He has done and is offering. He is not soliciting our praise. He is not insecure.

“My Lord (ado* ♂ *any – my master), You open (pathach – You release (qal imperfect second-person masculine singular))

my lips (saphah *any – my boundaries) and my mouth (wa peh *any) will report (nagad – will tell (hifil imperfect third-person masculine singular) Your praise (tahilah *atem – Your adoration and laudation).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 51:15)

Having not yet experienced the intervention of Yahowah’s *amah | Productive Mother, or her Ba’al | Husband, Yada, the Son was grasping for straws. He wanted the easy way out, not yet realizing that he would serve as the sacrifice Yahowah wanted...

“Unfortunately (ky), You do not want or desire, and You are not moved by (*lo chaphets – You are not pleased with and take no pleasure in (qal imperfect second-person masculine singular)) sacrifice or slaying (zebach – killing or slaughter).

I would elect to provide, choosing to give (nathan – I would decide to bestow (qal imperfect cohortative first-person singular)) an uplifting or burnt offering (*olah – something that goes up), but (wa) You will not accept or agree (*lo ratsah – You will not be swayed, be fond of, or allow the regaining of favor (qal imperfect second-person masculine singular)).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 51:16)

But alas, He did and would. They were scheduled to occur on Passover in year 4000 Yah and then on the Day of the Herald in the Yowbel of 6000 Yah. A revolt of this magnitude wasn’t going to be resolved by a couple of birds and a goat.

Unaware of this prior to his dressing down by Leah and his come to his senses encounter with Yada, Dowd remained especially irritable and erasable. It is as if he were trying to outdo the Yisra*elites during the Exodus. This next line is particularly brutal...

“The sacrifices (zebachym) of God (elohym*) are a broken and destroyed, shattered and crushed (shabar – a smashed and mauled (nifal participle feminine singular)) spirit (ruwach), judgement, thinking, and motivations (leb – thoughts and feelings, inclinations and dispositions, determination and emotions) that are shattered and crushed (shabar – broken and destroyed (nifal participle feminine singular)), even pulverized to the point of becoming despondent (wa dakah – pained and collapsed, wounded and crumpled (nifal participle feminine singular)).

God (elohym*), You should not be so despised and contemptible, despicable and lowly (lo bazah* – You should not be so vile and worthless (qal imperfect second-person masculine singular)).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 51:17)

I did not think it could come to this. I do not know this man.

Whether it's the alcohol, depression, or just an embittered soul looking for love in all the wrong places while showing an abject disregard for God and for life, even a modicum of responsibility, this is inexcusable. I'm disappointed to have translated it, and even more upset to have to share it.

Dowd was a broken man. It happens one time or another to all of us. He just fell more precipitously and publicly and the fate of the world was resting on getting him back on his feet again. And should you have questioned whether a subsequent scribe had the audacity to portray the King in this unflattering light, there is no evidence of tampering revealed in the Dead Sea Scrolls. We have two copies of this Psalm, 4Q85Ps and 4Q91Ps, and while they only cover the first four of nineteen statements, there are a surprising number of spelling anomalies, but nothing that alters the meaning of the words, themselves.

Yahowah is in the business of inspiring our souls, emancipating and empowering us, enabling and enhancing our existence. These are the express benefits of the Covenant.

It is only those who mislead His people and who are overtly opposed to Him whose souls are crushed in the abyss of She*owl. This isn't a sacrifice of God or to him, but of the wanton disregard for His intent.

Very few humans, perhaps fewer than one in a billion, are afforded the ruwach of Yahowah. And the intended result among the few is for our judgment to soar, our thinking to be elevated, and our motivations to align with Yah's. It is God's desire to build us up, and elevate us so that we become ever more like him.

And so while there are two bodies slated for shabar and dakah, it is their disposable basar | bodies not a ruwach or nepesh. Yahowah elevates His Covenant Family and only depresses those who are overtly opposed to them.

Trying to intertwine his will with God's, this next pronouncement isn't appropriate either way. I wouldn't dare ask God to do better or be better, but Dowd did...

“No matter how improbable, if commanded and mandated, or by choice, Your will and my unequivocal desire, is for You to be good, to be better, even agreeable and pleasing (yatab – if possible, demanded, or by Your volition or mine, You will improve and be happier (hifil imperative cohortative paragogic he second-person masculine singular)) in Your acceptance and approval (*ba ratsown atah – with Your wishes and desires, Your choices and conditions, and in what satisfies You, and You find acceptable)).

With Tsyown | the Signs Posted Along the Way (Tsyown), You continually build up (banah – You always construct (qal imperfect second-person masculine singular)) the walls and barriers (chowmah) of Yaruwshalaim | Source of Guidance on Reconciliation (Yaruwshalaim – Jerusalem).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 51:18)

Yahowah did not build Jerusalem's walls. He is not trying to keep His people away, and is in fact, calling them home. Moreover, He wants everyone to read His Tsyown | Signs Posted Along the Way.

If not for everything preceding it, the concluding statement would be considered prophetic. The only minor adjustment would be the plural form on Par | Bull when the singular designation would be more accurate. Although, by comparison to where we have been, this in Mana from Shamaym...

“At that time (az* – meanwhile then), You will want (chaphets – You will continually desire and take pleasure in (qal imperfect second-person masculine singular)) proper and vindicating (tsedeq – right and acquitting) sacrifices (zebachym), a burnt and elevating offering (olah*) which is entirely finished and wholly completed (kalyl – made perfect and perfecting by sustaining to the end).

Then, at that time in the future (az* – meanwhile, it logically stands, thereupon), Parym* | Bulls (parym) will choose to be sacrificed and offered up, ascending and rising (alah* – will be lifted up and carried away, exalted (hifil imperfect jussive third-person masculine plural)), on (al*) Your altar (*mizbeach atah).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 51:19)

There was no altar or burnt offering on Pesach when Dowd fulfilled it in 33 CE, even with it being an exceptionally vital sacrifice. But both of these will be present on Taruw^{ah} when ElYah* orchestrates the sacrifice of the Par | Bull. And at that moment, all will be right and vindicating relative to Dowd and Yisra^{el}.

If you don’t mind, I’m going to forego my summation of the Mizmowr as is my custom so that we can move on to better times. Enough is enough. This was resolved, and Dowd kalyl | finished the mission just as Yada will be true to his calling.

We prevailed, my wife and I, and here is the result. A good man fell, but he would rise to the occasion. And essential to that process would be Dowd falling in love again, becoming what it is to be dowd | beloved. And in that process, he voiced what we have long proclaimed ~ Yahowah’s name.

The King opens with an emotional appeal ~ the most enabling the world has ever known...

“I am in love (ahab* – I am in a close and personal, adoring and devoted relationship (qal perfect first-person singular)). Indeed (ky), Yahowah (YaHoWaH), He has heard (*shama – He listened to (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) my voice (*qowl any), considering me favorably and affectionately (*tachanuwn any).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 116:1)

The Beloved Son fell back in love with his Father. They were on speaking terms again.

As a result of his return to Yahowah, Dowd was repositioned to pursue his calling. He would be summoned to fulfill the Miqra^{ey}. And in time, we would come to recognize and proclaim what he would do and now has done.

“Surely (ky), He inclined His ear (*natah *ozen huw) to me (*la any). So, during my days (*wa ba yowmym any), I will be summoned and called, proclaimed and invited during the Miqra^{ey} (*qara – I will be designated and known (qal imperfect first-person singular)).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 116:2)

In fulfilling the Miqra^{ey}, Dowd’s body would die on Pesach to resolve the plague of death. Then on Matsah, he would carry our guilt into She^{*owl} to liberate us from it. The ordeal would be anguishing, especially when confined in the restrictive confines of what is equivalent to a black hole in Hell.

“A boisterous procession of the plague of death, even the snares and injury of the body dying (chebel maweth) will for a time encompass me, swirling all around me (aphaph any – will for a limited period entangle me, trapping me as my body dies (qal perfect third-person plural))

And the anguishing distress and troubling ordeal (qebah – the dire straits and painful experience) of She^{*owl} | Hell (*She^{owl}) will, one day, find me, attaining and possessing me (matsa any – will lay hold of me, obtaining me at some point, such that I will experience this place (qal perfect third-person plural)).

I will have met up with and experienced (*matsa – I will find and encounter more than enough (qal imperfect first-person singular)) confining agony in a restrictive and emotionally distressful situation (tsarah – troubling circumstances while oppressed in an unfavorable ordeal) and vexing and annoying affliction and frustrating suffering (wa yagown – sorrow, grief, and anguish).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 116:3)

We know that Dowd has restored his relationship with Yahowah because he is describing his fulfillment of Pesach and Matsah. For this to have occurred, the Messiah and King would have had to have regained God’s trust. And the Son would have returned to trusting Yahowah as well. This is the pronouncement we were seeking. And here it is boldly proclaimed, yet again...

“With the name of Yahowah (wa ba shem Yahowah) I called out during the Miqra^eey when I was summoned (*qara – I am invited, read aloud, and welcomed (qal imperfect first-person singular)).

Let it happen (anah* – having sought this opportunity), Yahowah (YaHoWaH), You and I both emphatically want You to deliver my soul and save through my consciousness (*malat nepesh any – Your choice and mine is for You to rescue and save with my soul, sparing me and others in the process of deploying my consciousness (piel imperative cohortative paragogic he second-person masculine singular)) .” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 116:4)

Dowd was ready, even eager, to finish the mission that would define and enable his lives and ours. He wanted Yahowah to use His nepesh | soul in this fashion. And that is the key to understanding, not only the ways Pesach and Matsah were fulfilled, but also how Dowd was able to live multiple lives.

Just as Yahowah stated, Dowd would never die. It was only a disposable body that endured the anguishing torment of crucifixion. His body served its purpose and was incinerated

while his soul lived on. Although, as he has stated here, the next twenty-four hours would be hellacious. His nepesh would leave Yaruwshalaim burdened by our guilt, carrying it to She*owl, and depositing it there, never to be seen again. He would go into Hell for a Heavenly cause. And when the ordeal was over, still protected within Yahowah ruwach | spirit, Dowd's nepesh | soul was released from She*owl and return to a very proud Father. Mission accomplished.

The Son named Beloved, who loved Yahowah, was loved by God in return. The catalyst that makes it possible for a man of troubles to experience the Almighty's mercy and compassion is by being tsadyq | correct and, therefore, vindicated.

“Yahowah (YaHoWaH) is compassionate (chanuwn – is merciful and generous) and correct (tsadyq – right, vindicating, and honest). Our God (elohym anachnuw) is loving (racham – affectionate and kind).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 116:5)

There are so few who are open-minded and receptive regarding Yahowah, this isn't a fulltime job...

“Yahowah (YaHoWaH) observes, watching over (shamar – keeps focused upon (qal participle masculine singular)) the open-minded and receptive (pathy – the amenable and approachable who can be persuaded).

I was barely hanging on and in need, fading away (dalal – I was dangling by a thread (qal perfect first-person singular)), therefore, concerned for me (*wa la any), He saved me (*yasha – He liberated and spared me, helping me, rescuing me from harm's way (hifil imperfect third-person masculine singular)).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 116:6)

While the open-minded and receptive comprise our target audience, too, when it comes to the testimony of God, they remain as rare as they were in Dowd's day. And yet, apart from denouncing religion, politics, conspiracy, collectivism, antisemitism, and militancy, there is very little we can do to alter this equation to God's favor. We can learn the truth and share it, knowing that we and it will remain unpopular to the point of being publicly crucified for conveying it.

The old adage, “I’m hanging on by a thread,” was coined by Dowd. And in his case, it was true. If not for the ultimate intervention, with this Song revealing the results, he would have remained a slave to the worst aspects of his nature. And while it is becoming undeniably obvious from the written record Yahowah has provided that the *Amah and her Ba’al were inserted into the timeline to rectify the gravest of all concerns, these people would not have existed and would have made no difference had Yahowah not conceived, prepared, and deployed them.

But God did, we did, he did, and this is the result...

“My nepesh | soul (nepesh *any – my consciousness, the very essence of my life) decided to return and has been restored (shuwb – she has made the decision to change, has recovered by choice, and wanted to come back (qal imperative second-person feminine singular)) to Your home and restful abode to recuperate (la manowach *atah – to Your place of complete contentment and satisfaction).

Indeed, it is true (ky – surely), Yahowah (YaHoWaH) has weaned and raised you, providing recompense through you (gamal *al *ath – He has expended considerable time and energy to rear you (feminine singular addressing Dowd’s nepesh | soul) (qal perfect third-person masculine singular)).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 116:7)

Dowd shuwb | returned to Yahowah, as must every Yahuwd who wants to survive the next seven years during the Time of Israel’s Troubles. This realization would later be articulated and explained through the Prophet Howsha*. For Yahowah to shuwb | return to us, we must first shuwb | return to Him. This is the prime directive, the ultimate lesson, and it is as true for a king as it is for a pauper.

As a result, Dowd’s nepesh | soul would never die. She (souls are feminine in Hebrew) would spend all but four of the next three millennia at home with Yahowah. And since the King realizes the profound importance of this perspective, he steps out of first person to address the future of his soul in third person. He knows that Yahowah raised his nepesh for this purpose and that He will deploy his soul to provide recompense and redeem those who are open and receptive to the Covenant.

They are just words on the page, but they open Heaven's door. Dowd's soul is central to our survival. It would be and now has been his nepesh who was dispatched and given a basar to fulfill Pesach and then without it, carried our guilt into She^wowl. Dowd's nepesh, protected by Yahowah's ruwach, was released from Hell on Bikuwrym, returning to Shamaym as God's Bakowr | Firstborn Son.

After projecting all manner of inappropriate mandates and moods on Yahowah in the 51st Psalm, Dowd is celebrating the voice of the cohortative, now conveying a first-person expression of volition. He is speaking of his own decision, revealing his choice to return and restore his relationship with Yahowah.

Of particular interest, in fact of monumental importance, the King has evolved past his fixation on bodies. He has matured to value nepesh | souls, beginning with his own. This is the lesson we'd all be wise to learn.

This is so vital to our survival, and it is such a departure from Dowd's deplorable attitude in Mizmowr 51, I am of the conclusion that our intervention as surrogate parents could not have occurred over the course of a day but, instead, a considerable period of time. The evidence is mounting that we were deployed for eight years. This would include the final four of Dowd's first life and the initial four of Shalomoh's reign, guiding him from twelve to sixteen years of age and up to the construction of the Temple.

Should this be the case, then eythan* | the Perpetually Reoccurring and Steadfast, the Continuously Deployed and Eternally Engaged, the Long Established and Perennially Unrelenting who is Productive and Everlasting as *ha ezrachy | the One Springing Up as a Tree, Coming Forth, Prepared, and Shining at the Time with Logical Expressions Regarding the Sequence of Events through whom the 89th Mizmowr was revealed is Yada, the Nakar. And this would also explain why the Mashal were written during this interval by a father and mother as a husband and wife, and to their son on behalf of their God.

As a result...

“It’s true (ky), You have at this moment in time, undressed and removed (chalats – You have withdrawn and rescued, undressing (piel perfect second-person masculine singular)) my nepesh | soul (*nepesh any – my consciousness and essential essence) from dying (min maweth – from the plague of death), my eyes from tears (ayn *any min dima*ah*), and thus (eth*), my feet from stumbling (*regel any min dachy).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 116:8)

God is true to His word. King Dowd, the Chosen Son of God and the Messiah has never and will never die. And while his nepesh | soul would inhabit a mortal basar | body on three occasions, the soul placed in them was pronounced and made immortal. This realization destroys the very foundation of Christianity and undermines Judaism. It is key to validating my discovery, proving that Dowd’s soul was deployed in his second of three lives to fulfill Passover and UnYeasted Bread in 33 CE, making Jesus a myth and Dowd our Savior.

And speaking of vital discoveries, Dowd has affirmed another. It was only a few months ago that I came to realize that the ultimate test for mankind played out in the Garden. Adam failed to do as Yahowah requested. For God to surround our souls in light, enabling us to soar beyond the stars, we must first demonstrate ourselves worthy. We do so by 1) Closely examining and carefully considering the testimony He has provided, 2) Engage, responding accordingly so that we make a contribution to the relationship and world, and 3) Demonstrate that we are reliable and can be trusted by correcting our mistakes and learning from them and getting back up so that we can keep going when we stumble and fall.

In this regard, the verb chalats was constrained in time through the perfect conjugation. It means that Dowd was undressed and exposed so that the failures of his past could be addressed and removed. It wasn't that he would never cry or stumble again, but that the present crisis was resolved. And to some degree, the idea of being chalats | undressed, brings us back to the Last Mashal where the *Amah was not only dressing down her son, but also adorning him for success.

To serve mankind on behalf of God we must be guided by one without being influenced by the other. This is the message of the hitpael stem. It reveals that Dowd was now set apart unto Yahowah, making him apolitical and antireligious. And for this position, he was prepared to carry out his next two lives...

“I will walk independently, progressing through life unaffected by any societal influence (halak – I will journey, traveling, and going about life free of any outside pressure (hitpael imperfect first-person singular)), alongside the presence (la paneh) of Yahowah (YaHoWaH) in the Land and Earth (*ba erets – in the realm) of those living more than one life (ha chayym – of the lives).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 116:9)

When I tell people that Dowd fulfilled Pesach, Matsah, and Bikuwrym in 33 CE, they claim it is impossible because they think he died a thousand years earlier. And yet, Yahowah was emphatic in confirming that His Son would never die. Moreover, God is even more emphatic when affirming that Dowd will return as King of forevermore. So, since his nepesh | soul is alive, and since he is returning, why is it so difficult for people to accept that his soul will be placed in three physical bodies over that span of time rather than just two. And multiple lives cannot be the issue since they accept that *Elyah / Elijah lived 2,880 years ago but is returning as one of the two Witnesses.

And it's not only obvious, but irrefutable that Dowd wrote in first person how he would be crucified six hundred years before the torment was invented and a thousand years before he endured it. Then in 555 BCE, he was sent to Dany^{el} / Daniel to reveal the exact day he, as the Messiah, would fulfill Chag Matsah in 33 CE.

Even more to the point ~ Dowd is the ets Chayym* | Tree of Lives in the Garden. And he is the one who opened the Door to Life by fulfilling Passover. As such, when he returns as our King, he will also be our Savior. This is precisely what the Amah* and her Ba^{al} sought to reestablish through their intervention and counsel.

In his next pronouncement, we find Dowd becoming what he was railing against in the 51st Psalm ~ trustworthy and reliable. This is what Yahowah needed to see in His son before deploying him in year 4000 Yah in advance of fulfilling the Spring Miqr^{ay}.

Previous to this, we have seen how Dowd had afflicted himself, becoming depressed. After our counsel, he became responsive again. As a result, Yahowah knew He could trust him sufficiently to enable the promises of the Mow^{edym}, during which, he was anah* | afflicted so that we would not be burdened as such. At this time, the King came to epitomize the full expression of being anah* | responsive to God. His life, thereby, becomes a lesson for all of us.

“I became trustworthy and reliable (aman* – I regained credibility and integrity, establishing myself as dependable and enduring, trustworthy and loyal (hifil perfect first-person singular)) as a result of communicating (ky dabar – when I said (piel imperfect first-person singular)), ‘I was terribly afflicted and depressed and now I am totally responsive (anah ma^o□* – after having been anxious, miserable, dejected, and humiliated I answered the call so I am replying (qal perfect first-person singular)).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 116:10)

Again, mission accomplished. The relationship and trust were restored. Dowd went from blaming God for his mistakes to accepting responsibility and acknowledging that he had returned to accountability.

Yes, the point would have been made had I chosen one or two renderings of chaphaz rather than eighteen. But since they all seemed to apply, I cast a wide net...

“I, myself, said (any amar – I, myself testified (qal perfect first-person singular)) in my sorrowful depression and alarming condition with my hasteful disappointment and impetuous anxiety, my panic and dismay (*ba chaphaz any – in my impulsive emotional instability, my rash disenchantment, my hot-headed outburst, and my apprehension (qal infinitive)), ‘Everybody lies (*kol ha adam kazab – the entirety of the human race is deceived and deceptive, dishonest and delusional, deluded by false gods, and destined to failure (qal participle masculine singular)).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 116:11)

In Dowd’s prior depressed state, you’ll note that, since he was being disingenuous, he assumed that everyone was dishonest ~ and at the time, he projected this assessment upon God. But after we recalibrated his thinking, he realized that it was he who had been wrong. Yahowah could be trusted, and so could those speaking for Him.

In a general sense, however, apart from Yahowah and the few who He has chosen to project His testimony, everybody does lie, albeit not all of the time. And that’s a problem since religious and political schemes are made to appear believable through babel | commingling truth and lies to make counterfeits appear real. And the larger the institution, the greater and more credible the deceptions. Even today, this is the bane of democracy and of AI, both of which are biased in favor of popular appeal ~ and thus in favor of religion and politics and in opposition to God.

As we consider Dowd’s next refrain, this is the first that I’m certain neither I nor my wife inspired. Our perspective is that Yahowah has clearly stated what He wants in return for all He has afforded us. In fact, we earn what He has to give by offering Him what He expects in return. There is no reason to ask God for something He has previously articulated.

“What (mah – when, where, why, and how) will I return (shuwb – bring back and restore (hifil imperfect first-person singular)) to Yahowah (la YaHoWaH) for all of His goodness, generosity, advantages, and benefits (*kol tagmuwl huw – for the entirety of His rewards and recompense bestowed as I was weaned as a child and dealt bountifully by Him)) to me (al any)?” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 116:12)

The good news is that our King has grown from embittered to appreciative. And perhaps his question was answered in what follows...

“The Cup (kows – the vessel) of *Yashuwa*ah* | Deliverance and Salvation (*Yashuwa*ah* – rescue and liberation) I will lift up and carry (*nasa – I will bear, lifting up so as to provide salvation (qal imperfect first-person singular)).

And with and in the name (wa ba shem – so according to the reputation and renown) of Yahowah (YaHoWaH), I will be summoned and called, read aloud and welcomed as I am appointed to the Miqra*ey (*qara – I am invited, called out, designated, known, recited, met with, and mentioned by name (qal imperfect first-person singular)).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 116:13)

Asked and answered. Dowd would show his appreciation for Yahowah by following through on his calling. He would fulfill Chag Matsah, completing the mission. He would become our Savior through the Miqra*ey. And he would do so by *nasa | lifting our burdens and carrying them away.

Now that we are aware that the King knew the answer to his question, we can take credit for sharing this with him. It was the purpose of our parental counsel. And while that is reassuring recognizing that Leah and I were the first to realize that Dowd fulfilled the Spring Miqra^eey, we were also the first to ascertain that what God wants most from us is shalem ~ for us to finish the job we have been given, to see it through.

“My promise and offering (neder any* – my vow of personal service) to Yahowah (la YaHoWaH) I will complete, totally satisfying and fulfilling the purpose (shalem – I will finish and bring to fruition (piel imperfect first-person singular)) conspicuously in all earnestness as a corresponding counterpart publicly before (*neged na – openly pleading in a straight-forward and intense fashion in immediate proximity to) all of His people (*la kol *am huw – the entire approaching family of His).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 116:14)

The King promised to do what most needed to be done. Neqed | conspicuously, as Yahowah’s counterpart, in full transparency, he would serve as the Passover Lamb by allowing the Romans to crucify him at the crossroads of the world. It is a shame that his people didn’t recognize what he accomplished on their behalf. And for not having done so, they would deceive and deprive themselves through the religions of Judaism, Christianity, and Islam.

He said it. He did what he said, as will I. And most have chosen to ignore and reject our gift.

“Exceedingly rare and influential, highly valued and honored, treasured and respected for their intrinsic worth (yaqar – precious and beloved, esteemed and noble, exceedingly unique and significant) in the eyes of Yahowah (*ba ayn Yahowah – in the perceptions and appearance of Yahowah) is the death of the physical bodies (maweth – is the process of mortal demise for the plague) of His Chacyd | Reliable and Devoted Ones (*chasyd huw – His faithful and set-apart ones .” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 116:15)

Exceedingly rare may be understated. There are only three of us whose physical bodies are sacrificed for the greater good of the Covenant Family. And two of the three were likely standing together when Dowd wrote these words, as we will be again seven years after me sharing them with you as we celebrate Kipurym together in year 6000 Yah.

By making this prophetic pronouncement, Dowd had come to realize that the basar | physical body into which his soul would be inserted in year 4000 Yah would be slain during his fulfillment of Pesach as the Lamb. And he also knew that he would not be alone, since maweth and chasyd were conveyed in the plural forms. He foresaw that the other would be the *Adamah Parah | the Man as the Productive Bull from Bamidbar / Numbers 19, such that he would be the groom in the fulfillment of Bamidbar 5. He came to appreciate the roles of the Ram, Bull, and Goat as presented in Bamidbar / Numbers 15, affirming that, by being chacyd | devoted and reliable, we would all become yaqar | respected, influential, and highly regarded, even in the eyes of Yah.

“Emphasizing and requesting this, earnestly seeking this opportunity that will occur (anah* – O), Yahowah (Yahowah), indeed, it is true (ky – surely, because), I am Your Coworker (any* ebed* atah*). I am (any*) Your Servant (ebed* atah*), the son (ben) of Your amah* | Productive Mother and Coworker (amah* atah* – Your Most Motherly Servant).

You have responded to open and release (patach – You have loosened and freed (piel perfect second-person masculine singular)) that which pertains to my bonds, freeing me from losing self-control through disciplined instruction (la mowser any* – my shackles, fetters, and chains representing correction through a stern rebuke pursuant to resolve a just penalty because of the warning by way of axioms for life, words that changed the future conduct of my life).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 116:16)

This is the same message echoed for the same reason in the 86th Mizmowr. Yahowah had repeatedly referred to Dowd as His ebed* | Coworker in the glorious 89th Mizmowr, and now Dowd was prepared, indeed, eager, to live up to his calling. And

let's acknowledge, yes, celebrate, the realization that just as is the case in Psalm 86, this was all possible because Yahowah presented the amah* | Most Productive Mother to His Son, Dowd. She began the process of releasing the King from his self-imposed shackles. She would teach him all about self-control. Hers would be disciplined instruction.

As a result of this statement, it is now incumbent upon us to explore the whole of the 86th Psalm while reexamining the 89th Mizmowr from a new perspective. And if I may go one step further, in light of this and the 31st Mashal, we would be wise to consider every Proverb realizing that most of them were written by a father and mother, a husband and wife, on behalf of their son in light of all Yahowah intended for them.

If not for the fact that religious and societal recalcitrance, particularly among the Chosen People, is a formidable barrier to penetrate, I could rest my case with the next prophetic expression from the Chosen Messiah and King, Dowd. He fulfilled Passover as the Lamb...

“On Your behalf and for You (*la atah) I will absolutely become the sacrificial offering (zabach zabach – I am the sacrifice and I will be butchered (qal imperfect first-person singular)), thankful for the opportunity while conveying appreciation (towdah – confessing and singing a public acknowledgement of gratitude).

And in the name (wa ba shem) of Yahowah (YaHoWaH), I will be summoned and read aloud, called out and welcomed as I have always been appointed to the Miqra[•]ey (qara^{}* – I am invited, designated, and known forevermore (qal imperfect first-person singular)).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 116:17)

Dowd / David, the Messiah and King, the Son of God and Chosen One, fulfilled Passover. The disposable body his soul occupied at the time, served as the lamb. He was grateful for the opportunity because it pleased his Father, served his people, and engendered the trust he would need to be King forevermore.

While I was alone after twenty centuries denial in recognizing Dowd's fulfillment of the Miqra^ey through his sacrificial offering, and remain among the few who acknowledge it, within seven years all who survive will know. Our King will be acclaimed for having been appointed to the Miqra^ey. He will become the Tree of Lives.

The single most important line throughout this Mizmowr is the one being repeated and reinforced at the close of Dowd's Song to his Father...

“My binding promise and offering (neder ^{*any} – my vow of personal service) to Yahowah (la YaHoWaH) I will honor and complete, totally satisfying and fulfilling (shalem – I will finish and bring to fruition (piel imperfect first-person singular)) emphatically and conspicuously in all earnestness as a corresponding counterpart publicly in front of (neged na^{*} – openly pleading in a straight-forward and intense fashion in immediate proximity to and before) all of His people (la kol ^{am huw}^{} – His entire approaching family).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 116:18)

He did. We are the beneficiaries. Now, let's tell the world.

“Within the courtyard and city (ba chatser – beside the walls) of the House of Yahowah (beyth Yahowah – of the family, home, and household of Yahowah), in your midst (ba tawek ^{*ath} – in your center), Yaruwshalaim | Source of Instruction on Reconciliation (Yaruwshalaim). HalahuYah | Shine Yahowah's Light (HalaluYah – Radiate the Light of Yah).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 116:19)

Yes!

And again, I say, “Yes!” to the ultimate declarations of identity and purpose.

“I am in love, devoted to a close personal relationship (ahab*). Indeed (ky), Yahowah (YaHoWaH), He has heard (shama^{*}) my voice (qowl ^{*any}), considering me favorably and affectionately (tachanuwn ^{*any}).” (Mizmowr 116:1)

Surely (ky), He inclined His ear (*natah *ozen huw) to me (*la any). So, during my days (*wa ba yowmym any), I will be summoned and called, proclaimed and invited during the Miqra•ey (*qara). (Mizmowr 116:2)

A boisterous procession of the plague of death, even the snares and injury of the body dying (chebel maweth) will for a time encompass me, swirling all around me (aphaph any). And the anguishing distress and troubling ordeal (qebah) of *She*owl* | Hell (*She*owl*) will, one day, find me, attaining and possessing me (matsa any). I will have met up with and experienced (*matsa) confining agony in a restrictive and emotionally distressful situation (tsarah) and vexing and annoying affliction and frustrating suffering (wa yagown). (Mizmowr 116:3)

With the name of Yahowah (wa ba shem Yahowah) I called out and during the Miqra•ey I will be summoned (qara). Let it happen (anah), Yahowah (YaHoWaH). You and I both emphatically want You to deliver my soul and save through my consciousness (*malat nepesh any). (Mizmowr 116:4)

Yahowah (YaHoWaH) is compassionate (chanuwn) and correct (tsadyq). Our God (elohym anachnuw) is loving (racham). (Mizmowr 116:5)

Yahowah (YaHoWaH) observes, watching over (shamar) the open-minded and receptive, the amenable and approachable who can be persuaded (pathy). I was barely hanging on and in need, fading away, dangling by a thread (dalal), therefore, concerned for me (*wa la any), He saved me (*yasha). (Mizmowr 116:6)

My nepesh | soul (*nepesh any) decided to return and has been restored (shuwb) to Your home and restful abode to recuperate (*la manowach atah). Indeed, it is true (ky), Yahowah (YaHoWaH) has weaned and raised you, providing recompense through you (*gamal *al ath). (Mizmowr 116:7)

It's true (ky), You have at this moment in time, undressed and removed (chalats) my nepesh | soul (nepesh *any) from dying (min maweth), my eyes from tears (*ayn *any min dima°ah), and thus (*eth), my feet from stumbling (regel *any min dachy). (Mizmowr 116:8)

I will walk independently, progressing through life unaffected by any societal influence (halak), alongside the presence (la paneh) of Yahowah (YaHoWaH) in the Land and Earth (ba *erets) of those living more than one life (ha chayym). (Mizmowr 116:9)

I became trustworthy and reliable, regaining my credibility, becoming dependable (*aman) as a result of communicating (ky dabar), 'I was terribly afflicted and depressed and now I am totally responsive (*anah ma°o□). (Mizmowr 116:10)

I, myself, said (*any *amar) in my sorrowful depression and alarming condition with my hasteful disappointment and impetuous anxiety, my panic and dismay (ba chaphaz *any), 'Everybody lies, the entirety of the human race is dishonest and delusional (kol ha *adam kazab).' (Mizmowr 116:11)

"What, when, where, why, and how (mah) will I return (shuwb) to Yahowah (la YaHoWaH) for all of His goodness, generosity, advantages, and benefits (*kol tagmuwl huw) to me (*al *any)? (Mizmowr 116:12)

The Cup (kows) of Yashuwa°ah | Deliverance and Salvation (Yashuwa°ah) I will lift up and carry, I will bear to provide salvation (nasa°). And with and in the name (wa ba shem) of Yahowah (YaHoWaH), I will be summoned and called, read aloud and welcomed as I am appointed to the Miqra°ey (qara°). (Mizmowr 116:13)

My promise and offering (neder *any) to Yahowah (la YaHoWaH) I will complete, totally satisfying and fulfilling the purpose (shalem) conspicuously in all earnestness as a corresponding counterpart publicly before (*neged na) all of His people (*la kol *am huw). (Mizmowr 116:14)

Exceedingly rare and influential, highly valued and honored, treasured and respected for their intrinsic worth (yaqar) in the eyes of Yahowah (*ba ayn Yahowah) is the death of the physical bodies (maweth) of His Chacyd | Reliable and Devoted Ones (*chasyd huw). (Mizmowr 116:15)

Emphasizing and requesting this, earnestly seeking this opportunity that will occur (anah*), Yahowah (Yahowah), indeed, it is true (ky), I am Your Coworker (any *ebed atah). I am (any*) Your Servant (ebed atah), the son (ben) of Your amah* | Productive Mother and Coworker (Amah atah). You have responded to open and release (patach) that which pertains to my bonds, freeing me from losing self-control through disciplined instruction (*la mowser any). (Mizmowr 116:16)

On Your behalf and for You (*la atah) I will absolutely become the sacrificial offering (zabach zabach), thankful for the opportunity while conveying appreciation (towdah). And in the name (wa ba shem) of Yahowah (YaHoWaH), I will be summoned and read aloud, called out and welcomed as I have always been appointed to the Miqra•ey (*qara). (Mizmowr 116:17)

My binding promise and offering (*neder any) to Yahowah (la YaHoWaH) I will honor and complete, totally satisfying and fulfilling (shalem) emphatically and conspicuously in all earnestness as a corresponding counterpart publicly in front of (*neged na) all of His people (*la kol *am huw). (Mizmowr 116:18)

Within the courtyard and city and beside the walls (ba chatser) of the House of Yahowah (beyth Yahowah), in your midst (*ba tawek ath), Yaruwshalaim | Source of Instruction on Reconciliation (Yaruwshalaim). HalahuYah | Shine Yahowah's Light (HalaluYah).” (Mizmowr / Song / Psalm 116:19)

It is finished.

The first time I translated Dowd's Song was for the initial volume of Coming Home. You'll find it in the 10th chapter, To Dowd or Not to Dowd. Since that time, the 89th Mizmowr has become the cornerstone of my outreach to God's People. I have come to view it as second only in importance to the Towrah. As a result, you will find it featured in Yada Yahowah volumes 4, 5, 7, and 9, Twistianity volumes 1, 3, and 5, volume 1 of Babel, volume 5 of Observations, and volume 3 of Coming Home.

It is here that we find absolute and irrefutable affirmation from Yahowah that Dowd is the Chosen One, the Firstborn Son of God, the anointed Messiah, the Sacrificial Lamb, the Exemplar, our Savior, and the returning King. Even more, Yahowah refers to Dowd as elyown*, which is all things pertaining to the hand and influence of Almighty God. His throne, which is the Mercy Seat of the Ark of the Covenant, will be as brilliant as the sun upon his return on Yowm Kipurym in year 6000 Yah / October 2, 2033.

Obviously, I didn't present the entire Song on every occasion, typically highlighting portions of the 89th Psalm that were pertinent to the subjects being discussed at the time. As a result, I usually skipped past the introduction, not only because I didn't fully appreciate its contribution to the story, but also because I instinctively knew that Eythan ha Ezrachy was a message, not a name. Surely, the most inspiring lyrics ever composed by Yahowah were not coauthored and delivered by someone so insignificant that there was only one other mention elsewhere in the Prophets and Writings. Or, did that other occurrence tell us who he actually is and what he was doing during the concluding years of Dowd's first life, bridging the gap between Father and Son, father and son?

At long last, I know who *Ethan ha *Ezrachy is, and soon, so will you. The answer is initially delivered in 1 Melekym 4...

“So God (*wa elohym) gave, appointing and providing (nathan) cerebral acumen and the capacity for wisdom, insights, and understanding by filtering and processing information (chakmah) in proximity to (la) Shalomoh | Complete and Rational Appreciation of Reconciliation (Shalomoh), along with (wa) comprehension and insights deduced from a logical analysis of reasoned instruction and through intelligent connections (tabuwnah), providing this for his benefit in an ongoing, increasingly significant, frequent, and very demonstrable manner (harbeh ma'od), a breadth and full measure (wa rochab) of thoughts and emotions, of the inclinations and motivations of the heart and mind, especially judgment (leb), comparable to the whirling and loose granular sand (chowl) which, showing the way to the benefits of the relationship (asher*), was upon the lip and, therefore the words spoken by the one from the sea (saphah ha yam). (Melekym / 1 Kings 4:29)

And, therefore (wa), the mental dexterity, cerebral acumen, and the capacity for wisdom and understanding through knowing, filtering, and processing information (chakmah) of Shalomoh | Complete and Rational Source of Restoration (Shalomoh) was increased significantly (rabah), beyond and differentiated from (min) the wisdom, insights, and understanding (chakmah) of all of the sons of antiquity aforetime (kol beny qedem), and also beyond all (wa min kol) the mental dexterity, cerebral acumen, and the capacity for intelligent processing of information (chakmah) adversely bound up in Mitsraym, representing oppressive and troubling religious and political regimes (Mitsraym). (Melekym / 1 Kings 4:30)

He was actually and continually, skillfully and prudently, wisely and rationally, taught to deduce and comprehend insights (chakam) of everything pertaining to mankind, and all from this one man (*min kol ha adam), from

(min) Eythan | the Perpetually Reoccurring and Continuously Deployed, Long Established and Perennially Unrelenting (Eythan) ha *Ezrachy | the One Springing Up as a Tree, Coming Forth Prepared to Shine at the Right Moment with Logical Expressions Regarding the Sequence of Events (ha *Ezrachy), (wa) Hyman | the One I Confirmed would Support Me (Hyman), (wa) Kalkol | to Comprehend the Full Measure of Things and to Complete the Mission (Kalkol), (wa) Darda° | the Generational Source of Knowledge (Darda°), the offspring (beny) Machowl | Brought Fourth to Question the Twisting and Anguishing Travail of Men (Machowl).

And so (wa), his name, proper designation, reputation, and renown, his calling and conspicuous position (shem huw), would exist throughout time (hayah) among all of the Gowym | non-Yisra*elites who turn around and are brought round (ba kol ha gowym sabyb). (Melekym / 1 Kings 4:31)

Then (wa), he conveyed, narrating (dabar) thirty (shalosh) instructive (alaph) Mashal | Word Pictures as memorable and wise Parables and Proverbs to inspire astute leadership (Mashal). And his Shyr | Songs about his Journey through Life (wa shyr huw) will be (hayah) five (chamesh), each bullish for the tribe, learned and instructive, empowering a thousandfold (wa *eleph). (Melekym / 1 Kings 4:32)

He will continuously speak (wa dabar) of and concerning the Eshym | Trees (al ha *eshym), including the one reaffirmed as the stoutest of them (min ha *erez) who, for the benefit of the relationship (asher), is with those who are purified and white (ba ha labanown), inclusive of the restoring witness (wa *ad) of the ezowb | hyssop (ha *ezowb) which, to show the way (asher), comes out and is extended, withdrawn to serve, descending and produced (yatsa) as part of the supportive structure, the walls, ceiling, floor, rafters, and beams (ba ha qyr). And he will continually speak (wa dabar) against (al) the beasts to mute them (bahemah), and over and about (wa °al) that which takes flight (ha °owph), even in opposition to (wa °al) creepy creatures slithering about (ha remesh), and on behalf of that which multiplies and increases, causing incremental and exponential growth (wa °al ha dag).” (Melekym / 1 Kings 4:33)

Yahowah has never provided a data dump. He does not shortchange the process of learning. We become chakmah | wise by observing the information God has provided, closely examining and thoughtfully considering it, and then making the connections which lead to understanding. It is a process and one that is the result of filtering through the available information in a disciplined and rational manner – just as this narrative suggests ~ just as I have been doing for the past twenty-five years.

Chakmah is the result of tabuwnah | logically deducing intelligent insights by making rational connections. And it was *Eythan ha *Ezrachy who harbeh | significantly and frequently schooled Shalomoh in this mental discipline, doing so in a very demonstrable manner. One grain of sand whirling about in the breeze does not a beachhead make, but billions will eventually reveal the benefits of the relationship. This is what was imparted from the lip of the man who emerged metaphorically from the sea, all to restore the judgment of a King and inspire another who would rise upon his fall.

Shalomoh’s wisdom grew over time as it was cultivated, increasing beyond those who had preceded him. Eventually, as a result of the instruction of a continuously deployed man renowned for his logical expressions, the boy who would be king grew in understanding well beyond that amassed in the oppressive and troubling religious and political realm of Mitsraym.

In the verbal form, chakam reveals that Shalomoh was taught to be wise, receiving instruction on how to rationally deduce logical insights and be discerning and prudent. Further, he learned what he came to know about men from one man ~ *eythan ha *Ezrachy: the Perpetually Reoccurring and Continuously Deployed, Long Established and Perennially Unrelenting One Springing Up as a Tree, Coming Forth Prepared to Shine at the Right Moment with Logical Expressions Regarding the Sequence of Events. eythan ha Ezrachy was a man whose reputation preceded him, and one whose renown would follow him throughout time. Second only to Dowd, and through a host of names and titles in addition to this one, the person acclaimed for teaching Solomon and revealing the 89th Palam for Dowd, is the most frequently mentioned player in Yahowah's story.

Of him, God revealed that his name, reputation, and renown, even his calling and position, would be recognized throughout time, particularly among the Gowym who came around to Yahowah as a result of his message.

While I realize that most have been led to believe that it was Shalomoh who wrote 3,000 Proverbs and 1,005 Psalms, the last name mentioned was Eythan ha Ezrachy, not Solomon. As numbers, they are completely out of sync with reality. Not only are there only 31 Proverbs, which is just 1% of that total, and 150 Psalms, barely 15% of the other, almost all of the Mizmowr are personally credited to Dowd. And Solomon wasn't in a position to provide any parental guidance, which is the essence of the Mashal.

Therefore, just as it is made irrefutably evident in the dedication of the 89th Mizmowr that it was provided by Eythan ha Ezrachy, as the last man mentioned, it is evident that he is being credited with writing 30 of the 31 Proverbs, with one having been claimed by Solomon. And that makes perfect sense because he is the husband of Dowd's surrogate mother and Yada is defined by eythan ha Ezrachy. It is the advice he and Leah, as husband and wife, father and mother, provided to Dowd and then to Shalomoh regarding Yahowah.

And while Mashal | Proverb is definitive, shyr is not to be confused with Mizmowr | Psalm. It's actionable root, shuwr, speaks of sharing one's journey through life. And that being the case, there were five occasions when his travels through time were pertinent to share with father and son. Further, in the Maskyl | Circumspect and Insightful Portrayal of Dowd in the 89th Mizmowr written by Eythan, the opening verb is shyr, bringing the historical portrait and life journey together. |

I am convinced that these began with Chanowk / Enoch in mankind's first millennia. His is a name we will reconsider momentarily, especially because of the way it mirrors eythan*s*.

He was next inserted into the timeline on the occasion of Moseh's meltdown along with Dowd. With MyDod and *ElDod, Yahowah was letting Moseh know that if he got the Yisra*elites to the Promised Land, He had a couple of guys lined up to take it from there. And while nothing they said was recorded on this occasion, their message was detailed and retained pursuant to the fulfillment of Yahowah's timeline when they visited with Dany*el as *Myka*el* | Right About God and *Gabry*el* | God's Most Competent and Courageous Man.

There is growing and overwhelming evidence that the third deployment of the soul of Chanowk aligned with year 3000 Yah. On this occasion, he served as a surrogate father during Dowd's last four years of his first life and as Shalomoh's grandfather during his first four as king. During which time, he would have reinstated Dowd's reputation with Yahowah, taught Solomon chakmah, and written the 89th Mizmowr, along with 30 Mashal | Proverbs. And there is every reason to suspect that the soul of *Eythan ha *Ezrachy may have been inserted a decade earlier such that he could have served as *Obed 'Edom when assisting Yahowah and Dowd in bringing the Ark of the Covenant to the Temple Mount and properly positioned within the Tent of the Restoring Witness as reported in 2 Shamuw*el 6. It is what prompted Dowd to begin thinking about a more permanent home for the Ark and Yahowah's amazing response in 2 Shamuw*el 7.

We are currently in the last days of the fourth deployment of Chanowk's nepesh. This is a teaching opportunity that will conclude with the fulfillment of the fourth Mow^{ed} ~ Shabuw^{ah}, where he serves as the one cultivating this harvest. Yada Yahowah and the Yahowah Vlog represent the enduring legacy of this life.

In my fifth memorable deployment, my mission is to serve as one of the two final Witnesses alongside ^{}ElYah, the only other man taken by Yahowah in this fashion. I will then fulfill the fifth Miqra^{} on Yowm Taruw^{ah} | the Day of the Herald, serving as the ^{}adamah Parah* | Productive Man and Bull known then as the Choter, Nakar, Yada, and the Man from Edom.

I realize that ^{}eleph* is typically translated as one thousand, but it also means “bull” who is “instructive” as a “learned teacher” on behalf of the “tribe,” “empowering them one thousandfold.” Further, as the ^{}Ets Da^{ath}* | Tree of Knowledge and the Choter | Stem, as a Natsyr | Observant Branch, he will continuously speak of ^{}Etsym* | Trees. This even ties in with ^{*}Ezrachy because he Springs Forth as a Tree. And according to the prophetic narrative, he doesn’t just share what he has learned, his mission is to point to the more robust of the trees, the one he has reaffirmed as the ^{}ets Chayym* | Tree of Lives.

Having helped Dowd navigate through the darkest episode of his life, preparing him to fulfill Matsah, the man noted to be Perpetually Reoccurring and Continuously Deployed, Long Established and Perennially Unrelenting Springing Up as a Tree, Coming Forth Prepared to Shine at the Right Moment with Logical Expressions Regarding the Sequence of Events is the one who made it possible for many to be seen as pure and white.

And then there is ^{}ezowb* | hyssop, a clue so tantalizing that we will devote our undivided attention to it in a moment. But for now, be aware that ^{}ezowb* is being deployed to show the way to receive the benefits of the relationship. It is being extended to serve as the means to construct the structure of a home, floor to ceiling, walls to beams.

We are told that he will continually speak against the beast, muting them. He will address that which is required to take flight. He is positioned against the creeps who slither about while advocating on behalf of that which leads to exponential growth.

When I read eythan* | Perpetually Reoccurring and Continuously Deployed, Long Established and Perennially Unrelenting in the preamble to Dowd's Song, my mind was immediately drawn back in time to Chanowk | Trained and Prepared, Dedicated and Deployed. He was, as we have learned, the first individual Yahowah inserted as needed along the timeline to keep His plans and people on track. Through him, God established one of the nepesh | souls He would use going forward. As his name Chanowk affirms, he was instructed and equipped, then deployed for this purpose.

Based upon the uncommon use of the hitpaal stem, revealing that Chanowk | Enoch was completely unaffected by societal pressures or constraints, we find an individual influenced by God but not men, making him particularly serviceable. He is shown on a continual journey with Yahowah, such that they are walking through life together.

As I shared previously, conjunction with God, their offspring included the longest-lived individual, Mathuwshelach | a Man Sent Out as a Stem ~ explaining how the Choter | Stem would become the etsah Da'ath* | Tree of Knowledge Providing Counsel to restore Yisra'el. In this way, they would father many sons and daughters for the Covenant over the years. The realization that he would be known for having existed 365 years, at a time when the Hebrew calendar was 354 days, suggests that, in another life, he would be the first to correlate God's calendar with man's. Therefore, following the clues, it appears that at whatever time, place, or title of Yahowah's choosing, he, or sometimes she, would be inserted into the ordinary flow of time by Yahowah, then removed, returning to God awaiting the next deployment.

Here is the supporting text we considered previously...

“Chanowk* | Trained and Prepared, Dedicated and

Deployed (Chanak) was unfazed by external human influences in his consistent walk through life (wa halak – he, free of human cultural, societal, religious, or political control mechanisms, traveled with (hitpael imperfect third-person masculine singular)) with the Almighty (eth ha elohym). Afterwards (achar*), he delivered with Him (yalad huw eth), Mathuwshelach | a Man Sent as a Stem (Mathuwshelach – Individual Dispatched as a Shoot; from Math – Man, Shalach – Sent Out as a Shelach – Shoot, Stem, or Sprout) at 300 years (*shalosh me*ah shanah*). Then he fathered other sons and daughters (wa yalad benym wa bathoth).

All of the days (kol yowmy) of Chanowk | Trained, Dedicated, and Deployed (Chanak) was and will be (hayah – he existed (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) 365 years (*chamesh wa shesh shanah wa shalosh me*ah shanah*). So (wa), Chanowk | Trained and Prepared, Dedicated and Deployed (Chanak), unfazed by external societal influences, consistently walked, traveling through life (wa halak – he, free of human religious or political controls, went with (hitpael imperfect third-person masculine singular)) with the Almighty (eth ha elohym) and then there was nothing of him (ayin huw – no him, without him, this proposition was left to ponder the implications) because (ky) God (elohym*) grasped hold of him at that moment and obtained him for a period of time (*laqach *eth huw – He took him, selecting and choosing, receiving and accepting that which pertains to him (qal perfect third-person masculine singular)).” (*Bare*syth* / In the Beginning / Genesis 5:22-24)

This plan is ingenious. God can infuse any situation with whatever influence, incentive, or protection is needed to keep everything moving forward without violating freewill or cause and effect. Every insertion becomes a teaching opportunity. He continues to work with and through his creation rather than overpowering it or against it. Moseh, Dowd, Shalomoh, and Yasha^oyah could speak confidently about the Nakar | Observant Foreigner and amah* | Productive Mother because they had seen them in action.

As a result, it has become apparent to me that I am the one responsible for telling Dowd who he is and what he would accomplish following his encounter with Yahowah's *Amah in the Final Word Picture. In fact, I think I'm the narrator, singing my wife's praises, and that I followed her meeting with my own and presented the 89th Mizmowr.

You are free to disagree, of course, but prior to me putting all of the clues together to form and frame Yahowah's portrait of His Son, no one on Earth was aware of any of this – and nothing is more important pursuant to the reconciliation of mankind with God. Based upon my unique understanding of it and love for Dowd, for Yahowah, and for the 89th Psalm, I am now certain that Yahowah reinserted me to record and share it.

As Yada, I am the Nakar | Observant Foreigner of Dabarym 29 who Moseh revealed would arrive to oppose the religiosity of Israel as the final messenger to his people. He foretold that I would come as the world returns to Sodom and is scorched as a result.

In this regard, it is especially relevant to recognize that Yahowah, Himself, foretold...

“Yahowah (Yahowah) will disassociate from him, excluding and dismissing him [*Yisra*el*], withdrawing from him (*badal huw), as a result of his troubling depravity and opposition, his twisted perversions and malignant corruptions (*la ra*ah*), from (min) every (kol) association, clan, and tribe (shebet) of *Yisra*el* (*Yisra*el*) in accordance with (ka) all (kol) of the agreed upon and mutually binding promises (alah*) of the Covenant (ha beryth) that were indelibly written (ha kathab) in the scroll (ba sepher) of the Towrah (ha Towrah ha zeh). (Dabarym / Deuteronomy 29:21)

Then (wa), the last generation will finally (*ha dowr ha acharown) answer, making a profession and promise (amar*). Your descendants (atah ben*), led along the correct path to receive the benefits of the relationship (asher*), will rise up and take a stand such that they are established (quwm) during a time distant from yours (*min *achar atah) because (wa) ha Nakry | the Observant Foreigner (ha Nakry – the discerning individual who will pay close attention, carefully examining and thoughtfully considering the evidence so as to recognize and acknowledge this, a man unrelated by ethnicity who will come to perceive and respect what he discovers; from nakar – to recognize and acknowledge, to know and regard that which he discovers through exploring, observing, and listening), will arrive, coming (*bow) from a faraway place in distant time (*min erets rachowq).

So then (wa), they will see and perceive, witness, and understand (*ra*ah*) that which is plaguing the population (makah) of this land and the Earth (*ha *erets ha hy), this evil disease and overall impairment (tachaluym) which grieves, necessitating intercession to resolve the sickness precluding the benefits associated with (asher chalah ba hy) Yahowah (Yahowah). (Dabarym / Deuteronomy 29:22)

Brimstone, bearing the stench of decay but also its purifying blue light (gaphyth), and (wa) salt as that which can preclude life on land and yet preserves food (melach), will change the composition but not consume (sarephah) this entire region, even much of the Earth (*kol *erets hy).

Nothing will be sown, no seeds dispersed or planted, and nothing to harvest (lo zara), such that (wa) nothing will sprout or grow (lo tsamach*).

And along (wa) with all of this, vegetation will no longer rise (lo alah ba hy kol eseb), similar to (ka) the destruction (mahpekah) of Sodom | Scorched (Sodom) and (wa) amurah* | the Manipulative and Tyrannical, (amurah*), of the admah* | Reddish Ground (admah*) and (wa) Tsaboym | the Swelling of the Adulteress (Tsaboym), which (asher*) Yahowah (Yahowah) destroyed (haphak) in His resentment (*ba aph

*huw) and in His hostility (*wa ba chemah huw).” (Dabarym / Deuteronomy 29:23)

Then (wa) Gentiles of every ethnicity (kol ha gowym) will question (amar*), ‘For what reason (al mah*) has Yahowah (Yahowah) acted in this manner toward (asah kakah la*) this country (*ha *erets ha zo*th*)? What (mah) caused this intense animosity (chory), this great antagonism (*ha aph ha gadawl ha zeth)?’ (Dabarym 29:24)

Moreover (wa), they will say (amar*), ‘Regarding the way to the relationship (al asher), they either neglected or they rejected (azab*) the Covenant (eth beryth*) with Yahowah (Yahowah), the God (elohym*) of their fathers (ab hem*), which, to lead them to the benefits of the relationship (asher*), which He established with them (*karat im hem) by (ba) Him bringing them out (yatsa huw* eth hem min) of the realm of the Crucibles of Oppression (Mitsraym).’ (Dabarym / Deuteronomy 29:25)

So (wa), they will have pursued (halak) and served (*wa abad) other gods (elohym acher), in addition to verbally explaining their allegiance to them (wa chawah la hem), gods (elohym*) with whom (asher*) they were unfamiliar (lo yada* hem*), negating and dividing them, deceiving and dispersing them (wa lo chalaq la hem*). (Dabarym 29:26)

The animosity (aph*) of Yahowah (Yahowah) against (ba) this country and region (*ha *erets ha hy) will bring upon it (la bow al hy) all of the harmful consequences (eth kol ha qalahah) that were written (ha kathab) in this scroll (ba ha sepher ha zeh).’ (Dabarym 29:27)

Therefore (wa), Yahowah (Yahowah) will have uprooted them (natash hem) from upon their land (*min *al adamah hem) in frustration, resentment, and consternation (*ba aph) and in hostile antagonism (wa ba chemah). As if snapping a twig in anger, as a sign of furious discord, dissension, and disharmony, breaking their branches away in annoyance (wa ba qetseph), He will have thrown them (shalak hem) into another land (*el *erets *acher) consistent with (ka) this day (ha yowm ha zeh). (Dabarym / Deuteronomy 29:28)

The concealed things (sathar) concerning (la – about) Yahowah (Yahowah), our God (*elohym *anachnuw), and the things which are revealed, then discovered and openly known (wa ha galah), are for us to approach (la *anachnuw) and for our descendants to draw near (wa la beny *anachnuw) through the Restoring Witness of yesterday, today, and tomorrow (*ad *owlam), so that we may approach by acting upon and engaging in (la *asah) all of the words (*eth kol dabarym) of this Towrah, this Source of Teaching and Guidance (ha towrah ha zo*th).” (Dabarym / Words / Deuteronomy 29:29)

Speaking of this Restoring Witness and Observant Foreigner in the same Towrah, Yahowah, Himself, said:

“And it shall come to pass (wa hayah) if (im) they will not trust or rely upon you (lo *aman atah), nor listen to (shama) the voice of (qowl) the first and most prominent (ri*shown) sign providing proof (*owth), then they will trust and rely upon (*aman *atah) the Qowl | Voice of (qowl) the last (*acharown) sign providing proof, serving as a signal and banner, a distinguishing promise, evidence used as validation of the consent agreement (*owth).” (Shemowth / Exodus 4:8)

Are you listening?

Therefore, without any viable alternative, and now entering the last days, it should be obvious to everyone paying attention that I am the Nakry | Observant Foreigner of whom Yahowah and Shalomoh spoke here in Dabarym and when offering the commemoration address for the Home for Yahowah’s Name on Taruw*ah in 961 BCE as presented in 2 Chronicles 6.

Yahowah spoke of me in His vivid portrayal of the Choter who would replace Dowd’s father in Yasha*yah 11. In addition to affirming that He would enable our collaboration with His Ruwach, God equated me to the Tree of Knowledge in the Garden, promising that I'd be a Parah | Productive Bull.

As a result, I accompanied Dowd to support the Messiah as he delivered and I explained the sweeping prophecies presented in Babylon to Daniel in 555 BCE. In that portrayal, he is Gabry^el | God's Most Courageous Man while I am Myka^el | One who is Right about God. Afterall, I was the first to unveil the meaning of these prophecies and generate the Timeline as everything that was foretold is playing out before our eyes.

Moving forward to our day, I've written extensively, sharing everything the world needs to know about Yahowah, Dowd, and their imminent return. As a result of my thirty-five books on Yahowah's testimony, revealing who God is and who He is not, I'm the only one who has been more insightful and verbose than Moseh, Dowd, or even Yasha^ayah. And I'm doing so, married to Yahowah's amah* | Productive Mother.

These are my thoughts as I've contemplated the prophetic pretexts to the Last Mashal and the introduction to Dowd's Song. I know who I am, where I've been, and where Yahowah intends to go with all of this. And I know my wife, who Yahowah confirms is the Greatest of Women, the Mother to His Covenant Family. Your interpretation of this material is up to you. My job is to find and explain it, and yours is to apply what I've discovered as you see fit.

Returning to the star attraction, when the most select of us, Dowd, deselected himself, Yahowah did as He had promised. He dispatched a woman and then her husband, to talk some sense to the boy who had abandoned his calling. Had God not done so, there would have been no hope for humankind. The Cornerstone upon which the Covenant Home would be constructed was cracked and crumbling.

Please consider the gravity of this situation. Billions of men have acted badly and stolen another's wife. A million have even had a husband killed to claim his bride. But this wasn't any ordinary King ~ he's the future Savior of the world. And yet, no one knew it at the time ~ including Dowd, himself.

The solution to Yahowah's savior problem wouldn't be as easy as dialing up a contemporary because Dowd wasn't listening. There was no way to prevail at this time because no one on the planet had any clue as to what Dowd would have to achieve to salvage the human experiment. And that wouldn't be known for another 30 centuries from the time of Dowd's egregious offense. Even then, it would be another score of years thereafter for someone to finally come to the recognition that the King was slated to fulfill Pesach, Matsah, and Bikuwrym in his second of three lives in 33 CE. Four years later, this same man had his wife direct his attention to the Last Mashal.

So here we are, the subject of an arranged marriage by Yahowah, and likely for this purpose, and now in the shadow of the very day we were celebrating our eighth anniversary. Her name was Lisa, but I renamed her Leah. She was abandoned by her father at birth. Her mother was psychotic and abusive. She suffered several miscarriages prior to adopting the daughter of the alcoholic and unfaithful man who also abandoned her, only to have her adopted daughter rebuff her love.

And as for us, we connected online a decade before we actually met because she was trying to assess why Ruth, Dowd's great grandmother, referred to herself as an amah* | Productive Mother. At the time, her opening question to me was the same one she posed to Dowd in the 31st Mashal. She did so to find out why I was translating the Towrah and Prophets because, in my books, which were posted online, she noted that I had written extensively about the feminine attributes associated with the ruwach. Our mutual intellectual curiosity blossomed long before we met and fell passionately in love. And not just with one another, but with the Towrah, its Beryth, the Mow*edym, Yahowah, and Dowd.

As for me, while I've shared this previously, it now bears repeating. My father was so abusive I had to get a restraining order against him. My mother proved useless in this regard. And my eldest son turned against me as I was working to protect, enable, and enrich him. His actions were so vile, after confronting him to no avail, I was determined to never speak to him or see him again. It had all progressed as was required to be properly equipped to engage in something quite similar and resolve the dispute between Yahowah and His Son.

But, of course, as previously noted, there is more to the story. Twenty-four years prior to this moment, Yahowah introduced Himself and asked me to work with Him. I went to Towrah school, with Yahowah as my professor and His ruwach as my tutors, investing one-hundred thousand hours of observation and contemplation. For a decade of that time, Leah was an email away, and for the next eight, she was at my side. In sharing what we were learning, we became inseparable, with all the synergy of an ideal marriage. The growing Covenant Family became our children.

It wasn't a surprise to Yah. He knew it would all play out this way. So confident was He that God began sharing the ultimate flashback in His story long ago, speaking of it prophetically as far back as the opening chapters of the Towrah.

It was poetic. The two people who came to love and respect Father and Son, Yahowah and Dowd, more than any other, devoting their lives to restoring the reputations the religious had purloined, would answer the call because they were listening. And they were willing.

It's not every day that two otherwise ordinary people get to save the world, but we have. In our service to Father and Son, we restored the relationship that Dowd had fractured. We've read Dowd's meltdown in Mizmowr 51, then of Leah's response in Mashal 31. We know the result in Psalm 116. But for it to occur, Dowd needed a father too. He needed a dose of tough love with a side of unrelenting judgment served with a bouquet of glorious acclaim. And this is what leads us to the 89th Mizmowr.

While I still think that it was my wife's words that ultimately sobered up our intoxicated son, especially when I reinforced them with Dowd's Song, he came around and wrote the 116th Mizmowr on the way out of the mess he had made. King Dowd would go on to fulfill the Mow^oedym and the Lesser Luminary would reflect his brilliance for having done so.

I would write what has become the Tree of Knowledge to turn Yisra^{*}el's attention to the Tree of Lives. And now, on the cusp of Shabuw^oah, and in anticipation of Taruw^oah, Dowd's adoptive father knows that he will be laying down his life to facilitate the Son of God's return.

We are now positioned to appreciate the reference to Yshay pursuant to the Choter. As I've shared, I'm replacing him...

“A Choter | Stem (choter – a shoot or secondary branch, a sprout as a sucker, a pliable wooden implement as a standard of measure, a secondary source of growth serving as a living entity delivering progeny by being observant, willing to listen, and committed to thinking while collecting the things Yah values as a means to project Himself in association with a tree) will be extended (yatsa^{}* – he will be brought forth to serve) out of (min) the stump which has been cut down so that it is capable of supporting new growth (geza^o) of Yshay | to Stand Out and Be Noticed, drawing attention to the substance of existence (Yshay), as (wa) a Netser | Observant Branch (netser – a stem or shoot which extends from a primary limb of the tree; from natsar – to observe, watch over, and preserve, to closely look after, focus on, and protect) by means of (min) its roots, and that which keeps it anchored, steadfast, and nourished (sheresh huw^o), such that he will continually bear an abundance of fruit, being a productive Bull while encouraging productivity in others (parah). (Yasha^oYah / Isaiah 11:1)

Yshay was the fallen stump that had to be cut down for the Netser | Observant Branch to be extended as the Choter | Stem, revitalizing the roots that had gone dormant over time. Yisra^{*}el would become productive again at long last.

Symbolically, there would be resolution in ezowb* | hyssop. It is first used in Shemowth /Names / Exodus 12:22 when addressing how Passover would become the Door to Life. The blood of the lamb was smeared on the entrance to every home by dipping hyssop into it. It is Yada who would represent the ezowb* in service to the souls benefiting from the blood of the ayil* shed for them on Pesach.

Then in Qara / Leviticus 14:4-6 and 49-52 ezowb is presented as a way of purging the stigma of leprosy in a man and from his home. And since the only reported case of it other than the momentary sign on Moseh's hand was the attempted subversion of Moseh's credibility as Yahowah's spokesman by his sister, Miryam | Embittered, we see ezowb* | hyssop as the cure.

Apart from the two aforementioned Towrah citations, this one associated with Eythan* ha Ezrachy* in Melekym, and Dowd's reference in the 51st Mizmowr, ezowb* is deployed an eighth and ninth time, also in the Towrah. We find ezowb* | hyssop in Bamidbar / Numbers 19:6 and 19:17-19 in conjunction with the adamah Parah*. ezowb* is added to the blazing fire of the altar in which the Productive Bull has been placed to purge the returning remnant of Yisra*el of guilt on Taruw*ah ~ ten days before Dowd's return as King.

As I've shared previously when pondering the implications of Dowd's reference during his meltdown in the 51st Psalm, ezowb* | hyssop actually a remedy for leprosy and curative when purging a wide range of ailments. The following assessments are supported by traditional therapies and by emerging scientific research. These include: 1) Skin Health ~ when diluted, hyssop essential oils are successfully used topically to treat epidermis infections, even acne and puncture wounds, and it is known to restore disfigured and scared tissues due to its antiseptic and anti-inflammatory properties. 2) Antimicrobial & Antiviral ~ Hyssop exhibits strong antimicrobial, antifungal, and antiviral properties. It is used therapeutically to treat all manner of ailments and is even proved to inhibit herpes viruses and treat respiratory and urinary tract infections. 3) Immune & Circulatory ~ Hyssop boosts immune function by fighting pathogens and improving circulation. It is a proven remedy for arthritis, gout, and inadequate blood flow. 4) Respiratory Support ~ The herb acts as an expectorant, helping to loosen mucus and relieve coughs, colds, bronchitis, and asthma symptoms. It reduces airway constriction and allergic reactions more effectively than some corticosteroids. 5) Digestive Aid ~ The oils extracted from hyssop stimulate the production of digestive enzymes and bile, improving digestion, reducing gas, bloating, and cramping. It serves to protect the stomach lining and helps prevent ulcers. 6) Anti-inflammatory & Antioxidant Effects ~ Hyssop is rich in polyphenols and flavonoids, such that the herb combats oxidative stress. It reduces inflammation while lowering the risk of chronic diseases, including cancer. And 7) Mental & Emotional Wellbeing: Hyssop's calming aroma is used in aromatherapy to reduce stress, enhance mood, and promote recovery from anxiety and depression. In addition, the prolific lavender flowers seem symbolic of Shamaym and indicative of the concluding colors of the rainbow.

Now that we know the identity of the man conveying Dowd's Song on behalf of his Father, it's time we venture back into the ultimate Mizmowr ~ the greatest song ever sung. I see it as not only the Cornerstone of the Covenant and of Yahowah's Home on Earth, but as the Keystone of my assigned mission. I think it was inspired and written eight years before the 60th Yowbel year of 3000 Yah / 968 BCE –four years prior to the conclusion of the first of Dowd's three lives. The 89th Psalm is the epitome of divine prose – the most important piece of literature ever written.

This is a Maskyl | Portrayal of Insights to Contemplate and Comprehend. It was composed by Eythan | the Reoccurring One who is Often Deployed. He is ha Ezrachy | the Tree of Logical Expressions.

“A Maskyl | Poetic Portrayal of Insights to Contemplate and Comprehend (maskyl – prudent lyrics written to convey important ideas worthy of thoughtful consideration; a compound of ma – to ponder the important questions regarding sakal – being circumspect and sensible, gaining insights and prospering from them, paying attention to understand while learning to comprehend) of (la – concerning, according to, and on behalf) eythan | the Perpetually Reoccurring and Resolute, the Continuously Deployed and Eternally Engaged, the Long Established and Perennially Unrelenting Productive One (Eythan* – Steadfast and Everlasting; from eythan* – the steady, resolute, profuse, continuous, permanent, perpetual, consistent, enduring, and routinely used) ha *ezrachy | the One Springing Up and Coming Forth as a Tree, Prepared to Shine on Time with Logical Expressions on the Sequence of Events (*ha Ezrachy – the one arising out of the soil, spontaneously growing and reborn to be rational while supplying chronological and sequential, temporal, timely, and historical expressions; from az* – at that time, simultaneous with these events, azar* – mightily prepared and girded in strength, equipped as a strong arm properly adorned and trained, zarach – to rise up and shine, to come forth and appear, shining, and akin to ezrowa*° – the strong arm and power of the Zarowa°).” (Mizmowr / Psalm 89: Dedication)

It is as we had thought ~ a maskyl: a comprehensive portrayal of rationally derived insights. This is delivered for Dowd, Yisra*el, and the world to know, comprehend, and share.

As for Mr. Eythan ha Ezrachy, he is as Yahowah has named him. And here, as Eythan opens by sharing his life’s journey in God’s presence, he wants us to know that Yahowah is God’s name, that He is loving, and that Yahowah has remained consistent throughout time. We are being reassured that as God was in the Garden, He was with Noah, and as He was with Abraham, He is now with Dowd.

It is Yahowah’s chesed | steadfast devotion to those He favors that impressed our time traveler more than anything else about God. And he wants us to know that he will be singing about Yahowah forevermore as Yada, such that everyone is aware that our God is emuwnah* | trustworthy and reliable. This means that He isn't capricious, thereby negating the three so-called Abrahamic religions which are predicated on change.

“I have chosen to continually share my life’s journey in a song (shyr – it is my ongoing and continuous desire to convey the nature of my travels while always singing; from shuwr – to travel on a journey while expressing the itinerary (qal imperfect cohortative first-person singular)) about the loyal love, steadfast devotion, enduring favoritism, and genuine mercy (chesed – the kindness, zeal, mutual obligation to provide benefits, and affection) of Yahowah (YaHoWaH – 𐤙𐤏𐤅𐤁 God’s one and only name transliterated based upon His HaYaH | existence and ToWRaH | instructions), from antiquity into futurity forever (owlam – throughout time, beginning long ago and into perpetuity, indefinitely and eternally) on behalf of (la) generation after generation, the dwelling places and family lineage throughout time (dowr wa dowr).

I, Yada, will consistently make known (yada° – I will always remain aware of, acknowledge, respect, and reveal, demonstrating that I am Yada, familiar with, concerned about, devoted to understanding and conveying (hifil imperfect first-person singular)) Your trustworthiness and dependability (emuwnah atah – Your honesty and reliability, Your firm and steadfast commitment to the truth; feminine of emuwn* – unwavering dependability pursuant to a trustworthy and reliable nature; from aman* – to support, confirm, uphold, nourish, foster, establish, and make firm, verifiable, and sure as the steady righthanded worker who is providing certain verification) with my mouth (*ba peh any – in my speech and with my words).” (Mizmowr / Psalm 89:1)

The Song of Songs is a love song, expressing Yahowah’s enduring devotion to His people. Unfortunately, it was unrequited because Yisra*el didn’t reciprocate. Even the man who was the most dowd | beloved had turned a cold shoulder to

God. Fortunately, Yahowah's patience would outlast His people's recalcitrance.

But more than chesed | loving and merciful, according to Yada | the one who knew more about God than any other for having spent more time with Yahowah, God is also resolutely emuwnah* | honest, unwavering, and steadfast. And so in his opening line of the greatest Maskyl | Poetic Portrayal of Insights to Contemplate and Comprehend, Eythan ha Ezrachy affirms the three things that are the most important for us to know about God ~ Yahowah is eternally loving and devoted, trustworthy and dependable.

It wasn't all that long ago, but sometimes we forget. When introducing Eythan ha Ezrachy, God said: “And so (wa), his name, proper designation, reputation, and renown, his calling and conspicuous position (*shem huw), will exist throughout time (hayah) among all of the Gowym | non-Yisra*elites who turn around and are brought round (ba kol ha gowym sabyb). (Melekym / 1 Kings 4:31) So (wa), he conveyed, narrating (dabar) thirty (shalosh) instructive (alaph*) Mashal | Word Pictures as memorable Parables and wise Proverbs to inspire astute leadership (Mashal). And his Shyr | Songs about his Journey through Life (*wa shyr huw) will be (hayah) five (chamesh), each bullish for the tribe, learned and instructive, empowering a thousandfold (*wa eleph).” (Melekym / 1 Kings 4:32) As I had suspected, this is that Shyr.

Throughout my prolonged journey through life, I have been devoted to sharing what I've come to know and experience of Yahowah's chesed | love, devotion, and favoritism. The Father of the Covenant is kind, affectionate, and loyal.

To appreciate and experience God's love, one must first come to know that God's one and only name is Yahowah. It is the shem | name He introduced, explained, and shared in Shemowth / Names / Exodus in His Towrah | Teaching. And so it is interesting that, after twenty-five centuries of it being erased, I was the first to bring it to the forefront again. And not only did I return Yahowah's name to where it had been wrongly removed by the religious, I systematically demonstrated its proper pronunciation in An Introduction to God. Every book in our quarter-century of collaboration bears our names ~ Yada Yahowah.

°Owlam is ideally suited for *Eythan ha *Ezrachy's mission because it doesn't just address the future. Its primary meaning speaks of the distant past, providing a continuum throughout time. °Owlam is from antiquity into futurity. It is from Chanowk in the beginning to *Eythan at the midpoint, continuing on to Yada°, the Nakar, Choter, and Adamah Parah* in the end.

The realization that this Maskyl | Comprehensive Portrayal of Sensible Insights is for dowr wa dowr | generation to generation, it is for all people and places throughout time. Written a millennium before the Talmud and New Testament, it negates both while affirming Yahowah's love and reliability.

While yada° wasn't scribed in the infinitive or participle forms, making the acknowledgment of "Yada" necessary, since it is my Shyr | Song and Journey, I felt at liberty to report what I had written as intended. It is true that I have and will continue to make known, acknowledging and revealing Yahowah's steadfast commitment to the truth. I yada° | know that Yahowah is emuwnah* | trustworthy and dependable, unwavering and reliable.

Even more than this, it is Yada's life's mission to aman* | support, confirm, uphold, foster, and verify Yahowah's nature. As the aman* | steady righthanded worker providing this affirmation, I want everyone to celebrate the marvelous attributes of the God I've come to know and love. And should you be among those who chafe at the notion that God would appoint someone to this role, and that he could be living among you, please note: Eythan is singing Yahowah's praises with his mouth ~ not God's.

Clearly, this Song was inspired by Yahowah. However, like everything else God conveyed through one of His prophets, it was written, spoken, and delivered by someone of Yahowah's choosing. Eythan ha Ezrachy was afforded the liberty to convey what he had come to Yada.

While God will speak directly through this traveler through time, and to us in first person, the first five sentences are all in Yada's voice, including the next two. And in this regard, I'd like to let you in on a seldom considered secret that can be witnessed in this narrative. When Dowd or I speak in the first-person singular rather than the first-person masculine, it is because our nepesh | soul is doing the work and conveying the message. We are masculine but our soul is feminine, necessitating this insightful subtlety ~ one which is designed to reward the reader with the realization that our nepesh live even when our basar | bodies die.

Moving from the first stanza to the second, the subject remains the same. *Eythan ha *Ezrachy realizes that everything he has to share at the midpoint of mankind's journey out of the Garden and back into Eden is predicated upon Yahowah's love and trustworthiness.

Said another way, should someone discount or demean what I have shared in this eternal mission speaking on behalf of Yahowah, or contravene the intent of this Maskyl, they are simultaneously foreclosing the benefits attributable to both, the chesed and emuwnah* of God. There is a very specific and narrow path to Yahowah which is only found within His Beryth | Covenant as presented in His Towrah | Guidance through His Mow'edym | Restoring Witnesses, all of which was delineated and explained in Yada Yahowah. It is the only way to Shamaym | Heaven.

“Yes, indeed (ky – it is surely true that), I say (amar* – I express in words, declaring, and conveying (qal perfect first-person singular)) throughout antiquity and for an unlimited duration of time (owlam – from the distant past and into the future, eternally and forevermore), loyalty, devotion, and love

(chesed – kindness and generosity, adoration and a sense of community) will be built up and established (banah – will be developed and fortified for the children; feminine of ben – son (nifal imperfect third-person masculine singular recognizing that chesed is masculine singular)) for Shamaym | the Spiritual Realm of the Heavens (shamaym – the lofty and elevated abode of God in the 7th dimension; a cognate of *shama – listen, shamar – observe, and shem – name).

You will continually establish and continually authenticate (kuwn – You will fashion and form, prepare and support (hifil imperfect second-person masculine singular)) Your unwavering trustworthiness, integrity, and reliability (emuwnah atah – Your fidelity and dependability, Your honesty and consistency, Your firm and steadfast commitment to the truth; feminine of emuwn* which is from aman* – to support, confirm, uphold, nourish, foster, establish, and make firm, verifiable, and sure as the steady righthanded worker who is providing certain verification) in them (ba hem – within the spiritual realms).” (Mizmowr / Lyrics to Sing / Psalm 89:2)

The lyrics Eythan ha Ezrachy penned at this crucial juncture when the fate of the world hung on his and its success, were composed on behalf of the most important man to have ever lived. The moment the ink dried, he would present this message to King Dowd, God’s beloved Son, a once bright and bold man who had fallen and was struggling to get up on his own.

As we know from the Last Mashal, Yahowah’s Amah* made this subsequent meeting with Dowd possible because she let her son know that he was too important to allow temporal fixations and poor judgment, alcoholism and depression, deprive the world of all he had to offer. Then, once he was receptive and thinking again, he became the first to hear Eythan*’s message to the King.

So, it bears repeating that Dowd’s Song is introduced with a chorus of three essential words: chesed | enduring devotion and favoritism, °owlam | from antiquity into futurity, and emuwnah* | being unwavering and reliable. That is the message he delivered to Dowd from Yahowah.

Based upon the narrative presented in 2 Shamuw^{el} 6, there is every reason to suspect that Eythan ha Ezrachy had been on station a score of years prior the revelation of this Song, likely ever since he had served as *°Obed Edom | Man's Coworker to facilitate bringing the Ark of the Covenant home after Dowd began feuding with God. He has seen the King at his best and worst and knows that it is essential to anchor these attestations of restoration upon the certainty of Yahowah's integrity and devotion.

Therefore, Eythan, noted for his prolific wisdom and pen, introduced his lead Witness by telling us that Yahowah, as God, is the most credible claimant in the universe. As a result, we accept what follows for our benefit. We discount it at our peril. As it was with Dowd, so it is with us.

According to Yahowah, those who reject His robust appraisal of King Dowd will die. Worse, those who steal what God said of His Son to transfer the King's acclaim to a religious myth, rather than be to Jesus, or to promote the inception of Judaism with Rabbi Akiba's bar Kokhba | Son of a Star, will engender God's wrath.

There has never been, nor ever will be, a more adroit condemnation of Christianity and Judaism as is on display in the 89th Psalm. Eythan* | the Continuously Deployed *ha Ezrachy | Source of Logical Expressions with Yahowah's inspiration and enormous personal contribution, composed this Maskyl | Portrayal of Insights to Contemplate and Comprehend to save the world. By restoring the confidence and conviction of the man who would open the door to Shamaym | Heaven by fulfilling Pesach, Matsah, and Bikuwrym, we were given access to Yahowah's enduring love and devotion. He was doing so dowr wa dowr | for everyone, everywhere, forevermore. I, Yada, know this to be emuwnah* | trustworthy and true, °owlam | from this moment and into perpetuity.

This is Yahowah's message. Eythan is delivering it. And while serving as God's delivery boy is a nice gig with handsome benefits, my contributions are minimal by comparison. And that's the key concept here ~ in comparison to God because He is the inspiration behind it. To challenge this message is to contend with the Almighty. To refute it or reassign it, is to earn an express ticket to *She*owl* | Hell. Fair warning.

As best I can tell, I have been doing this job a long time ~ beginning around 600 years after our expulsion from Eden, so beginning around 5400 years ago. I was a son of Adam* | Man of the Earth by way of Sheth | Stationed and Appointed to Perform as a Enowsh* | Human Being Qenan | Zealously Mahalah^{el} | Reflecting the Light of God during Yered | the Descent under the moniker Chanowk | the One Prepared, Dedicated, and Deployed. Thereafter, approaching year 1000 Yah, God removed my soul, keeping me with Him until redeploying me as MyDod in support of Moseh circa 1447 BCE. Then, for this occasion in 1000 BCE, I was initially reinserted to assist in the relocation of the Ark of the Covenant to Yaruwshalaim, doing so as Dowd approached his fortieth birthday. Having witnessed his gradual, then precipitous decline, I was commissioned to intervene sometime after Shalomoh was born and the conclusion of the Absolom rebellion. This, Dowd's Song, in collaboration with Yahowah, is the crowning achievement of my lives up to this point. And in fact, without it, there would be no purpose to my life now or yours.

Right on cue, following this affirming introduction, Yahowah speaks to us directly for the first time in the acclaimed Maskyl. And He begins by obliterating religion on behalf of the relationship He desires. The Beryth | Covenant is the Centerpiece of the Towrah and Dowd is the Cornerstone upon which it is built. As such, this is among the most profoundly important statements ever made...

“I have established, cutting through separation (karat – I have created, making a resolution by cutting off (as is the case with circumcision), a solemn agreement between parties with stipulations, responsibilities, and benefits (qal perfect first-person singular)) the Beryth | Covenant for the Family (Beryth – the Family-Oriented Relationship Agreement which brings individuals together with action, commitment, and engagement in accordance with the stipulations required of both parties to the agreement; from beyth – family, home, and household), through My Bachyr | Chosen One (*la bachyr any – on behalf of and for the individual I have personally decided upon, having preferred and selected under the auspices of freewill, for the one I favor for a special relationship and affection; from bachar – to choose and decide and bachan – to test, examine, and scrutinize).

I have sworn an oath, and I will affirm this promise seven times over (shaba° – I have made a binding commitment and I will always uphold the truth of this vow (nifal perfect first-person singular)) to Dowd (la Dowd – concerning the Beloved; from dowd – the one who is loved and who loves in return), °Ebed Any | My Authorized Agent and Coworker who serves with Me (°ebed any – My colleague, associate, and servant; from °abad – to work).” (Mizmowr / Psalm 89:3)

Now that God has made this announcement, for those who are rational, the counterfeit hoax of Christianity, its New Testament, and their man-god, Jesus, is over. There is only one Covenant, not two, negating the New Testament. It was established with King Dowd, not Jesus Christ, rendering the Christian god nothing more than a cheap counterfeit. And the Chosen One is Dowd. The prophetic promise is undeniably directed toward the former and returning King of Israel rather than a figment of Paul’s perverted imagination.

In context, Yahowah is God’s name. He works with and through men, with Dowd foremost among them. What He inspires from Heaven never changes. His Towrah and Naby°ym are inalterable, making Him and them trustworthy and reliable.

And with these affirmations, Yahowah nullified Jesus and the New Testament, the rabbinical Hashem and the Talmud.

In three statements, two from ♀Eythan ha ♀Ezrachy, and the other directly from Yahowah, their collaboration reversed the damage the King had done to his standing with God, closed the door on the justifications for Christianity and Judaism, and reacquainted Dowd with his purpose in life. Working together, they established the foundation upon which Yada Yahowah would be written. And to think, 55 statements remain, all of which will burnish Dowd's sterling resume and reaffirm Yahowah's standing as our God.

So, with tongue in cheek, I say, "Scoot over a smidge, Yasha^oyah, so that I can settle down next to you. This Eythan ha Ezrachy fellow has a way with words. Sure, he's 2400 years old at this point, and he been in and out of Heaven twice already, giving him a head start, but nonetheless, for his first go at prophecy, this is an impressive opening salvo."

Okay, back to the task at hand, and before I bruise my own hand gratuitously patting myself on the back, according to God, and He's in the best position to know, a line has been drawn in the sands of time. A person can accept Dowd as the individual with whom Yahowah chose to work alongside to establish His Covenant Family or die apart from Him and it. And since all five benefits of the Beryth are offered through the first three Mow^oedym | Restoring Witnesses – Pesach, Matsah, and Bikuwrym – this means that Dowd fulfilled them.

Direct, unequivocal, powerful.

This is the end of the line for alternative views. So it bears repeating: there is no quarter remaining for the likes of Peter and Paul, Akiba and Maimonides, or for a New Testament and Talmud. Yahowah's plan and players are as presented in the books bearing YAHOWAH's name and nowhere else apart from the Towrah, Naby^oym, wa Mizmowr. The Covenant is the centerpiece, and Dowd is the cornerstone of the elaborate edifice God has revealed and established for our mutual benefit.

It is also affirming to know that the Beryth | Covenant is Yahowah's Family. This is affirmed by its root ~ beyth | family, home, and household. The concept is as simple as it is profound. So, there is nothing remotely religious about any of this. Our Father wants to raise, support, and explore the universe He created with the children of His Covenant. And to be among them, a person must be sufficiently observant and thoughtful to know Him, they must respond to Him, and they must demonstrate that they can be trusted with the enormity of what He is offering. This is a relationship. And a one-sided relationship is an oxymoron.

The fact that Beryth | Covenant has been karat | cut, reinforces the realization that those who become part of it are separated from the world unto God. There is a dividing line, you are on one side or the other ~ cut in or cut out. Karat | cutting also directs our attention to circumcision, which is the sign of the Covenant.

There is also a lesson to be learned from Bachyr | Chosen One. Loving and mutually beneficial relationships are based upon freewill. Yahowah can express His just as we can convey ours. He chose Dowd. I'd recommend making a similar decision. In fact, that is why I'm here. And I'm inviting you to join me. Bachyr Dowd | Choose Dowd.

And while the decision is yours, know that it comes with a consequence. And the further one goes down an opposing path, the darker the alternatives. The Beryth with Dowd leads to Shamaym. The alternatives do not.

Damning for them, Christians not only promote the imposter, Jesus, they stole Dowd's God-given title of Chosen One in the process. And Jews came to prefer Sha^uwl over Dowd and later bar Kokhba as a preferred Messiah, even as they parade around today under his star. However, unlike the case with Dowd, there are no promises directed at Jesus or bar Kokhba. Neither are ever mentioned by God. One was a myth, the other was a fraud. Dowd is the exemplar of the relationship while the other two were religious obstacles tossed in the way to it.

Yahowah's *shaba | sworn oath and binding promise is to Dowd. It is not up for debate. It is not transferable.

God is on record stating in His Towrah | Guidance that He would speak and act through men of His choosing. Dowd is foremost among them. Should you want to know what Yahowah revealed regarding His will and purpose, you need to pay attention to what Yahowah said and did through Dowd. If you want to benefit from what they achieved on behalf of the Beryth, you need to know how they fulfilled the Mow^oedym.

By using *°Ebed Any | My Coworker, God is on record stating that He promised to do something exceptional with Dowd, which we have discerned to be fulfilling the Spring Miqra^eey | Invitations to be Called Out and Meet. By announcing His binding oath, God is confirming that everything He has and will say regarding Dowd is true, including what follows, affirming that Dowd is the Messiah and Son of God. It means that when our King fulfilled Pesach, Matsah, and Bikuwrym, he was working with Yahowah. It also suggests that there is a direct connection between Dowd, the Beryth | Covenant Family, the Mow^oedym | Restoring Witnesses and Yahowah's Towrah | Teaching.

And as an interesting aside, °ebed | worker, is scribed identically in the Hebrew text as is °obed, as in *°Obed Edowm. Further, Edowm* is from adom* and adam*, meaning bloody red man. Therefore, *°Obed Edowm, the man responsible for assisting Dowd when bringing the Ark of the Covenant to Yaruwshalaim, is aptly named ~ Working for Mankind.

The man °Obed °Edowm, now as Eythan ha Ezrachy, was most devoted to serving was Dowd, the Beloved Chosen One and Yahowah's Coworker. Dowd is spelled and pronounced as I have written it. The three letters in paleo-Hebrew were originally written: Dfd. The Dalet forms the doorway to a home and the Wah is a tent peg securing and enlarging the Tabernacle.

In a name, Dowd opens the Doors to God's Heavenly Home and to Life.

Should you wish to argue against the message Yahowah and I are sharing with you, that is your option. Billions of Christians and millions of Jews have done so. However, it will cost them all their soul.

After affirming...

1. A Maskyl is a Poetic Portrayal of Insights to Contemplate and Comprehend.

2. This Maskyl was Composed by Eythan* | the Perpetually Reoccurring and Resolute One who is Continuously Deployed and Eternally Engaged.

3. *Ha Ezrachy is Described as Springing Up and Coming Forth as a Tree, Prepared to Shine on Time with Logical Expressions on the Sequence of Events.

4. He Chose to shyr | Share his Life's Journey in this Song.

5. Yahowah is God's name.

6. Yahowah is chesed | Loyal, Devoted, and Loving.

7. Yahowah's Message is owlam | from Antiquity into Futurity.

8. Yahowah is Addressing Every dowr | Generation, Place, and Time.

9. Yada^o | Knows Yahowah

10. Yahowah is emuwnah* | Trustworthy and Dependable.

11. Yahowah Conveyed this Message Through the peh | Mouth of Yada^o.

12. Shamaym | Heaven is banah | Built owlam | Forevermore on chesed | Loyalty and Love.

13. Yahowah kuwn | Establishes and Authenticates His emuwnah* | Trustworthiness, Integrity, and Reliability.

14. Yahowah karat | Established the Beryth | Covenant through karat | Separation.

15. Yahowah karat | Created the Beryth | Covenant with and for Dowd | the Beloved.

16. Yahowah's Bachyr | Chosen One is Dowd.

17. Yahowah's °Ebed | Coworker is Dowd.

18. Dowd is the Shaba° | Promised One.

And this enormity of vital information and affirmations is based upon the introduction and the initial three statements. God continued speaking to us through *Eythan ha *Ezrachy, adding the following affirmations in the fourth verse...

19. It is through the °Ad | Restoring Witness that Yahowah °owlam | Eternally kuwn | Establishes what Dowd has zera° | Sown.

20. Therefore, the zera° | Offspring of the Beryth | Covenant Comprise Dowd's Family.

21. The zera° | Seeds Dowd zera° | Sowed Make the Beryth | Covenant Possible.

22. Yahowah banah | Built Dowd's *kise | Throne.

23. Dowd's *kise | Seat of Honor will Remain Everywhere and Forever, throughout all dowr | Generations.

24. It's Time we selah | Pause and Ponder the Implications.

“Forevermore, as an eternal witness to the restoring testimony (°ad °owlam – to provide enduring guidance on reconciliation throughout time), I will prepare and establish (kuwn – I will appoint, equip, develop, support, and sustain (hifil imperfect first-person singular)) your offspring and that which you sow (*zera° atah – your (masculine singular) seed and what you have sown, your children and descendants, your posterity and family, even the yield of what you plant and cultivate for the harvests).

In addition, I have constructed (wa banah – I have built and established based upon the son, a family by restoring and fortifying the children (qal perfect first-person singular)) for your throne and seat of honor (kise atah – your (masculine singular) authority and authorization (masculine singular), your place of respect, and your right to lead)) on behalf of (la) generation to generation, for dwelling places and family lineage throughout time (dowr wa dowr – regarding the approach of every related child, and concerning the house, the home of successive encampments where people live and abide within the family). Selah | Pause now and contemplate the implications (selah – take a moment to consider what has just been conveyed prior to moving on).” (Mizmowr / Psalm 89:4)

Yahowah’s °Ad °Owlam | Eternal and Restoring Witness is found throughout His Towrah, *Naby*ym*, Mizmowr, wa Mashal. God revealed everything we need to know about Him, His Family, and the means to be part of it. In addition to this, Yahowah interjected °Obed Edom* | Serving Mankind as Eythan* ha Ezrachy* | Continually Deployed and Prepared with Logical Expressions here, and later as *Yada | One who Knows as the Nakar | Observant Foreigner and Choter | Stem of the Tree, to serve this dowr | generation a His °Ad | Restoring Witness. So, while 25,000 pages of amplified translations and resulting insights and 10,000 hours of radio programs and vlogs is a worthy achievement, considering all of the practice, I should be better at this by now. Fortunately, like every Covenant member, I will improve with experience and maturity, and we have unlimited access to both.

While not one in a billion Christians recognizes it, God has preemptively launched twenty-four broadsides already against Christianity and Judaism ~ and we are still in the 4th verse. Clearly, Yahowah was aware that Paul would predicate his dismissal of the Towrah on the notion that zera° | seed when associated with Abraham was singular, thereby bypassing inscription of the Towrah, in addition to the thousand years of Yahuwdym between Abraham and Dowd, and the two-thousand years of Yisra^{el}ites and Covenant members thereafter. Countering Paul's foolishness, the Covenant is comprised of Dowd's offspring. And his first of his three lives commenced 400 years after the Towrah was revealed.

The seed Dowd has sown will be cultivated and harvested on Shabuwa^h and Taruwa^h. Those who will be taken home during the fourth and fifth Miqra^{ey} are Covenant and, therefore, Dowd's offspring. This is affirmed by the realization that Shabuwa^h is a Bikuwrym Harvest.

As we discovered when contemplating the prophecy about homes, who builds them and who lives in them, found in Shamuwa^{el} / 2 Samuel 7, Yahowah told His Son that He would establish his throne forever. And now, we know that Yahowah, Himself, will be building the palatial residence in which our King will reside. Can you even imagine how stately and elegant it will be?

More than this, even when addressing that which will be everlasting, God spoke of the construction of Dowd's seat of honor using the perfect conjunction, affirming that it had already been constructed. And, indeed, it has, because his throne is the Kaporeth | Mercy Seat of the Ark of the Covenant. This is not only what Obad Edom positioned under the Tent of the Restoring Witness on the Temple Mount, but what he will do again as the Final Witness beginning on Passover in 2030 alongside EIYah.

In spite of Yahowah's unequivocal declaration in this regard, there are billions who carry around a book containing this prophecy who still believe that Jesus will claim Dowd's throne and prove God a liar. And then there are millions of Jews who are not smart enough to know the name of their returning Messiah and King. Is it any wonder Yahowah despises religion or that he will exterminate the religious prior to His return?

While ignorance is contagious here on Earth, according to the next statement, that isn't the case in Heaven. And so, as we proceed, after listening to God extol Dowd's role in our lives, the following assessment is from Eythan ha Ezrachy. Having spent considerable time in Shamaym, he is aware that, while Dowd would serve with Yahowah as His Chosen One to establish the Covenant, Yahowah made it possible and Heaven knows it.

“The spiritual realms (shamaym – the heavens and lofty abode of God in the seventh dimension) knowingly express and appreciate (yadah – are aware and understand so as to extol, properly attributing and expressing gratitude; from yada^o – to know, recognize, and acknowledge (hifil imperfect third-person masculine plural addressing Shamaym)) Your wonderful and marvelous contribution and miraculous accomplishment (*pale*atah* – Your (masculine singular) amazing achievement (masculine singular) and extraordinary fulfillment which distinguishes You), Yahowah (YaHoWaH – the proper pronunciation of the name of elowah* | God as directed in His ToWRaH | Teaching regarding His HaYaH | existence and our ShaLoWM | restoration), in addition to (aph* – and even more), Your trustworthiness and reliability (emuwnah atah – Your (masculine singular) honesty and dependability, Your steadfast commitment to the truth and integrity; from emuwn* – the enduring truth and aman* – to support, confirm, and uphold that which is trustworthy and reliable, verifiable and confirming that which is correct and accurate) in the company and community (ba qahal – within the gathering and assembly) of the Set Apart (qodeshym – the separated and dedicated with essential Divine qualities and status).” (Mizmowr / Psalm 89:5)

Should it be your intent to visit, or better, earn the right to live in Shamaym | Heaven, it is helpful to know what the current inhabitants think about Yahowah’s miraculous contribution to the Covenant through Dowd. And that is particularly interesting because their appreciation is directed toward a singular *pale | achievement. As a result, this can only be one of two related things ~ either Heaven is celebrating the restoration of the Son’s relationship with his Father which was ongoing at this moment because it was directly attributable to this Maskyl, or the result of it, which would be Dowd's and Yahowah's collaboration in the fulfillment of Chag Matsah. It would be in this way that God demonstrated that His Covenant promises were reliable and that He could be implicitly trusted. Those who have done so, now reside in Shamaym, living in God's company.

Therefore...

25. The Residents of Shamaym | Heaven Know and Appreciate Yahowah, so, Shouldn't We Here on Earth?

26. One *pale | Miraculous Accomplishment by God is Viewed as *pale | Particularly Wonderful.

27. Yahowah's *pale | Most Marvelous Contribution to our Wellbeing was Facilitated through Dowd.

28. The *pale | Most Distinguishing Act of God is the Creation of the Covenant with His Chosen One and Coworker.

29. With His pale | Amazing Achievement, Yahowah Affirmed that He is emuwnah | Trustworthy and Dependable.

30. In Shamaym | Heaven, God is Accompanied by the Qodeshym | Set Apart and they are there for that Reason.

As a result, Eythan* makes a statement by asking a question...

“By contrast (ky – indeed, truthfully), who (my) as a speck of dust in the skies of the material realm (ba ha shachaq – among the particulate particles in the clouds or stars in the atmosphere or universe) is as valuable as, and can be compared or equated (arak* – it can be put in the same position of organized preparation worth (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) to (la) Yahowah (Yahowah)?”

Who is similar to, even remotely resembles, or thinks like (damah – who can be compared to, responds like, or tell His story in the fashion of (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) Yahowah (Yahowah) among the children of the Almighty (*ba ben el)?” (Mizmowr / Psalm 89:6)

The universe is comprised of over two trillion galaxies with hundreds of billions of stars within each. Not that we can fathom something on this scale, but for reference, Eythan is saying that false gods like Jesus, Hashem, or Allah are 1^0 compared to the 10^{57} atoms in an average star multiplied by 4×10^{11} stars in a galaxy, times 2×10^{12} of these massive gatherings of solar objects in the universe. That is infinitely less than a grain of sand compared to every beach on Earth or a drop of water in contrast to the Pacific Ocean.

But Eythan isn't just saying that Yahowah is big, but instead, that God organized, prepared, systematic, thoughtful, and responsive, in addition to being a great storyteller. And what's more, Yahowah has a family.

31. No One is arak | Comparable to Yahowah.

32. False gods are Akin to shachaq | Specks of Dust.

33. Yahowah is arak | Enormously Valuable, Prepared, and Orderly.

34. Yahowah's damah | Thinking and Responses Differ from Ours.

35. Yahowah has beny | Children.

From Ha 'Ezchary's perspective, properly establishing Yahowah's credentials is vital to appreciating these prophecies regarding Dowd. And so he continues to share what I've come to know and respect about Yahowah...

“God (*el – the Almighty) is highly regarded, well respected, inspiring, and awesome (arats – He is considered awe-inspiring and magnificent (nifal participle masculine singular)) in the council of those with whom He confides, earning their confidence of (ba sowd – within the intimate fellowship where there is a foundation of trust, discretion, a conclave guided by proper instruction and grounded in mutual reliance) of the Set-Apart Ones (qadowshym – of those who are separated and devoted), tremendously great while inspiring reverence and respect (rab wa yare – awesome and appreciated (nifal participle masculine singular)) as Almighty God for all surrounding Him (°al kol sabyb huw – Mighty among everyone around Him).” (Mizmowr / Lyrics to Sing / Psalm 89:7)

Apart from the Source, they are just words on a page. But when the Source is known and appreciated, the message becomes irrefutable and essential. And so, while we in the Covenant have come to know Yahowah this way, we have had twenty-five years of uninterrupted study and many more prophets to bolster our understanding. And keep in mind, the initial recipient of this Maskyl was Dowd, and at the time of its inscription, he needed the reassurance that Eythan’s prior 2400 years with Yahowah brought to the occasion.

Of all of the insights being delivered by Eythan, my favorite thus far is that God is sowd around those closest to Him. This means that Yahowah confides in the Set Apart, sharing insights while seeking to know our thoughts. And in this way, he inspires confidence in us. All of which leads to greater mutual respect, making the relationship better.

It is also reassuring that next to recognizing Yahowah’s awesome power, Eythan wants us to know that He has vast treasures to share. This is our inheritance. Also relevant, this is now the fourth time Ha Ezrachy has reaffirmed that the God he has come to know over the millennia is emuwnah | trustworthy and reliable.

“Yahowah (Yahowah – the proper pronunciation of the name YHWH as directed in His ToWRaH | teaching regarding His HaYaH | existence), God (elohym*) of the vast array of spiritual implements (*tsaba – of the heavenly messengers), who and what (my – encouraging the listener to ponder and question if) is comparable to Your (*kamow atah – can be considered similar to Your) awesome power and extraordinary treasures (chasyn – strength, value, and riches, addressing God’s capability and what He has to offer; from chasan – to be treasured and to offer something of great value) which are all around You (*sabyb atah), Yah (Yah), including (wa) Your unwavering commitment to the truth and unwavering reliability (emuwnah atah – Your honesty and dependability, Your trustworthiness and integrity; from emuwn* – the enduring truth and aman* – to support, confirm, and uphold that which is trustworthy and reliable, verifiable and confirming that which is correct)?” (Mizmowr / Psalm 89:8)

In a world replete with gods by all manner of names and depictions, there is only one true God and His name is Yahowah. Unlike the disingenuous men who have conceived the imposters, Yah has integrity and can be validated. And in this proclamation, we find Eythan so comfortable around the Almighty that he refers to Him as “Yah.” In my personal conversations with Yahowah, this is my preference, too.

The *tsaba | heavenly host are mal'akym | spiritual messengers. They serve as extensions of Yahowah's influence in our three-dimensional world.

As a seven-dimensional being, Yahowah's chasyn | powers and treasures are infinitely beyond anything we can imagine three-and-a-half dimensions beneath Him. And yet, God's most valuable gift to man is His emuwnah* | honesty and reliability ~ and it's the first thing the religious steal from Him.

36. Yahowah is °arats | Highly Regarded.

37. God Inspires sowd | Confidence.

38. Yahowah sowd | Confides in the Qodeshym | Set Apart.

39. The Qodeshym | Set Apart *yare | Respect and Revere Yah and are Found sabyb | Surrounding Him.

40. Yahowah Orchestrates a *tsaba | Vast Array of Spiritual Messengers.

41. God is kamow | Incomparable.

42. Yahowah is chasyn | Awesomely Powerful and Abundantly Rich.

43. God sabyb | Encapsulates us in His emuwnah* | Unwavering Reliability and Trustworthiness He sabyb | Surrounds Us with His chasyn | Strength and Values, Empowering and Enriching Us.

After sharing what he has learned over the millennia about Yahowah, particularly His enduring love and steadfast commitment to the truth, then interjecting what God had to say about Dowd being the enabler of the Covenant, His Chosen One, and Co-worker, Eythan* decided to share something of himself, revealing how God intends to use him. The reason for this prophetic insertion at this point in the narrative is to earn the King's trust. In another life, *ha Ezrachy will be Yada°, the Nakar, Choter, and Adamah Parah, and he will put it all on the line in service to Yahowah, Yahuwdym, Dowd, the Beryth, Yisra°el, the Towrah, and its Mow°edym. In other words, he can not only empathize with the King, just like Dowd, he's got skin in the game.

Eythan ha Ezrachy wants the King and the world to know that God communicates by painting word pictures, and some are more intriguing than others. This one is as vivid as it is prophetically...

“You convey Mashal | Portraits Comprised of Words when exercising Your authority (atah mashal* – You share Proverbs which are readily remembered as word pictures, demonstrating how to lead, govern, and establish dominion (qal participle masculine singular)), gloriously triumphing with the surging sea, agitating by majestically raising the illustrious and reoccurring force of the one from the west who can be abrasive (ba ge°uwth ha yam – by the abrasion associated with the raging westerner, serving as a metaphor for a boisterous and aggressive goww; from ga°ah – to rise up effectively and grow, productive and victorious).

By lifting up his rolling rocks among the turbulent waves as witnesses (ba nasa° galym huw° – by bearing his influential stones, raising his testimony demarking the boundaries of the agreement, and carrying the current of his relentless seas as fountains (qal infinitive)), You laud and extol them with exuberant statements commending their value, eliminating the noise, calming the chaos, and quieting the situation through them (*atah shabach hem – You assert what is factually accurate about them while smoothing out the rough edges and ending the crisis while showing restraint and remaining moral (piel imperfect second-person masculine singular)). (Mizmowr / Psalm 89:9)

To appreciate Eythan's Mashal | Word Picture we must begin with the recognition that he is painting the future with words. In the first of them, ge^euwth is typically portrayed positively even though it has a dark side. To be ge^euwth is to be glorious and majestic, with such high status that the individual is surrounded in splendor. It is to be lifted up as illustrious. It can convey the ideas of a raging and surging sea that is agitating and abrasive. When properly directed in the manner of the Mashal, that's a good thing. Even though ge^euwth can, on occasion, be rendered as "pride," since the actionable root is ga^aah | to rise up effectively and grow productively, the positive aspects of its etymology greatly outweigh the negatives.

Therefore, Eythan is crediting Yahowah with painting a prophetic portrait using ba ge^euwth ha yam to say that a Gowy from the West, representing the roaring sea, will rise up from it and agitate the religious and political as he grows ever more productive in caressing those within the land who are receptive. He will surge forth in illustrious fashion while noted for his abrasiveness and assertiveness ~ being relentless like the constant banter of waves upon the shore.

Based upon God's story as Ha Ezrachy has lived and experienced it through the millennia, this speaks of the Nakry | Observant Foreigner deployed by Yahowah to approach the Land as a reoccurring force, with the ferocity to erode the stature of the rebellious while gently lapping at the feet of the responsive. One way or the other, the Sea will garner the attention of God's people residing within the Land.

In this regard, there is only one Gowy, symbolic of the one coming out of the Sea, who is slated to play a starring role in doing for Yisra*el what he is currently accomplishing for Dowd – restoring the relationship. He is, indeed, ha Nakry | the Observant Foreigner. He is Obed edowm | the One Serving Mankind as the Man from Edom who saves many in the end. He is Yada, the one who, after restoring Yahowah's name and Dowd's reputation, prepares the mortal remnant of Yisra*el for the King's return.

In the follow-on sentence, it is Yahowah who is *nasa | lifting up, bearing, and carrying the galym which is plural. In this portrayal, *galym huw could mean all manner of things from his rough waves to his boundary stones, from his witness and testimony to his most impactful rocks, even stormy seas which burst forth like fountains. Since gal is from galal and means to roll or move out of the way, this narrows the possibilities such that this relentless and often abrasive man from the west is going to be removing the trash.

By using his galym in this way, whether as roaring waves, stormy seas, boundary stones, witnesses to the agreement, or impactful rocks, the picture is of the illustrious and formidable Gowy being deployed with another, or such that he represents more than one of these metaphors. And by *nasa | raising them up and bearing them, Yahowah is able to shabach hem | laud and extol the result with exuberant statements commending the value of bringing an end to the shrieking and chaos.

The rolling rocks in the surging waves of the sea will smooth the jagged shores for a better approach. And recognizing how hostile Jews have become toward Yahowah, this is sensible. Truth be known, at the moment, even Dowd was a little rough around the edges and needed some soothing. And in this regard, there is a sense of showing restraint while remaining moral with shabach that is applicable in this situation with God resolving His problem with Dowd and the religious by working through this man and not making a scene.

While we are aware that Dowd had more than his share of foes, as did Yisra*el, the most debilitating has been the Jewish propensity to be religious and political rather than embrace the relationship Yahowah intended. It is evident that Israel carted these attitudes out of Mitsraym and never forsook them. Their downfall began with the Golden Calf but then metastasized through their Oral Torah and Talmud.

Therefore, recognizing how prevalent religion and politics had become among Yisra*elites, particularly in the wake of Sha*awl's demon possession and the impending Absalom coop against Dowd, it was important for Eythan to calm the raw nerves and restore trust in Yahowah's ability to subdue the most prevalent threats to the Covenant. And in this regard, since it's apparent that the previous attestation plays into this next one, let's bring them together...

“You convey Mashal | Portraits Comprised of Words when exercising Your authority (atah mashal*), gloriously triumphing with the surging sea, agitating by majestically raising the illustrious and reoccurring force of the one from the west who can be abrasive (*ba ge*uwth ha yam*). By lifting up his rolling rocks among the turbulent waves as witnesses (ba nasa galym huw), You laud and extol them with exuberant statements commending their value, eliminating the noise, calming the chaos, and quieting the situation through them (atah shabach hem*).

You batter and bruised, defeating (atah daka – You reject and overthrow, crushing the oppressor, shattering while making contrite the slander of (piel perfect second-person masculine singular)) that which should be compared to the reprehensible and pervasive, diseased, deadly, deplorable, and defiling nature of the ever-popular (ka ha chalal – the profane and pervasive, polluting and desecrating associations which commonly corrupt, leading to divorce, fatally wounding, piercing, and slaying; from chalah – to sicken and weaken, to inflict with the disease of) Rahab | the Conceited and Contentious, Loud-Mouthed Pretentious Afflicter, the

Emboldened, Confusing, and Audacious Monster with the Mythical God (Rahab – arrogant and stormy, frenzied and haughty, insolent and idolatrous, defiant and overly verbose, senseless and insubordinate, self-absorbed and self-motivated, Abuser falsely claiming divine status and authorization at the least opportune time while soliciting religious worship) with Your empowered and fortified, courageous and confident, unyielding and resolute (ba ʾoz ʾatah – by way of Your mentally acute, physically strong, and psychologically prepared, bold, and steadfast) Zarowa° | Strong Arm, the One Cultivating the Harvests on behalf of the Sacrificial Lamb (*Zarowa – Protective Shepherd who prevails because he is effective, fully resolved with the overall ability to accomplish the mission, the remarkably impactful individual of action who, as a leader and fighter is engaged as a shepherd among the sheep, who is fruitful in his ways, especially when sowing the seeds of a prolific ingathering while advancing the purpose of the lamb).

You isolate and separate (pazar – You disperse and scatter in divergent directions (piel perfect second-person masculine singular)) Your adversaries (oyeb ʾatah* – those who are opposed and hostile toward You, demonstrating animosity, enmity, and rancor with regard to You).” (Mizmowr / Lyrics to Sing / Psalm 89:10)

This sentence and the previous pronouncement are coupled. The impactful stones flung out of the raging sea by the Gowy from the West on Yahowah’s behalf will have a battering and bruising affect on the most arrogant and boisterous of monsters ~ Satan and his political and religious stalwarts. This is particularly true with the Great Betrayer, Satan incarnate, Donald Trump and his following ~ as he is the one of whom we were forewarned by the Prophets.

Just as the 89th Mizmowr speaks directly to Dowd in the here and now to pull him out of his current stupor, its larger mission is to reintroduce the Messiah as our Savior while announcing the King’s return. And that is why this ha Ezrachy is addressing the man from the West who will emerge from the sea, becoming the final authorized and empowered Zarowa*. And in his support of Dowd and Yisra*el, he must defeat Rahab before the King's return.

As we discovered when investigating the identity of Eythan ha Ezrachy, it was he who wrote the Mashal in service to Dowd and Shalomoh. As a result, he is developing another word picture here, portraying himself as if he were a slew of rocks embedded within the surging waves of the sea to be abrasive when beating down the likes of Rahab | the Conceited and Confounding Afflicter. He is saying that Yahowah has lauded his effort with exuberant statements because He will have been able to calm the situation in a moral way without all of the attention of God reemerging as a column of fire.

It is clear from Eythan's assessment that the influence of Rahab will be as deplorable as he is deadly and defiling because of his popular appeal, particularly as he garners the trust of Israel, only to betray God's people. The individual framed by this name is being defined as conceited and contentious, confounding and confusing. He is a loud-mouthed and audacious politician who is both chaotic and frenzied.

Today, one does not have to be a genius to deduce that ha Ezrachy is directing our attention to the mercurial and egomaniacal confabulator, Donald Trump. Affirming this conclusion, we will consider how Eythan came upon this name.

But before we do, it is interesting to note that Rahab is Yahowah's *oyeb | adversary, making him either ha Satan | the Adversary or someone directly affiliated with Satan. Further, he is being taken down, battered and bruised, through the conviction and confidence of Yahowah's Zarowa°. So this is a battle royale ~ the ultimate showdown.

Recognizing this, the Zarowa°'s identity was obvious to ha Ezrachy because he would know that there were three of them ~ Moseh, Dowd, and Yada. Therefore, cognizant of the fact that this Song was written to restore Dowd's relationship with Yahowah, and then reestablish the King's reputation with Israel, this Zarowa° cannot be Dowd even though he would become the most glorious of them as the Passover Lamb. We know this to be true because the one bringing Rahab down is from the sea, and thus a Gowy, and his victim wouldn't materialize for another three millennia.

In this context, Eythan is letting Dowd know that he will not be serving alone, and that the King isn't the only one being asked to fulfill the Mow°edym or face a demonic adversary. As the man closest to Dowd in service to God, *Eythan | the Perpetually Reoccurring and Resolute, Continuously Deployed and Eternally Engaged One is thereby engendering Dowd's trust. He is demonstrating that he, too, will have plenty skin in the game and that he will shed his blood for Yisra*el and her Melek.

Even as the world disregards what Dowd has achieved, the final empowered Zarowa° will take the opposite approach. He will cultivate the Shabuw°ah and Taruw°ah harvests such that the King's subsequent homecoming on Kipurym will be well addended and appropriately celebrated. He is, therefore, in the best position to reassure Dowd while reestablishing his reputation on the cusp of his return. No one on the planet knows the King better or cares more about him.

These things considered, under normal circumstances we would have several options when translating Zarowa°. In the Towrah, it addresses the sacrificial lamb, making it symbolic of Dowd fulfilling Passover. It is also used with regard to Moseh who served as an extension of the Arm of God when liberating the Yisra*elites from captivity. And yet, we are also aware that the title is defined by its verbal root, zara° which means to scatter and sow seeds which when cultivated grow into a productive harvest. And that is the applicable definition in this situation.

Therefore, since this Zarowa° is being wielded by Yahowah at a time that he is being equated to the stones in the sea, and when he is said to be °oz | brimming with confidence and conviction while empowered as the resolute and steadfast

Zarowa° engaged in bruising and besting the Adversary, he is Yada, the Nakry and Choter, the Man from Edom. Eythan is speaking of himself to reassure the King and to assert his right to write this Psalm and then explain it as we approach the end.

And speaking of reassurance, this isn't the only time the Zarowa° title appears in this Song. It also speaks of Dowd. Moreover, Zarowa° is essential to the prophecy pertaining to the Nakry delivered by Shalomoh. And it was used by Yasha°yah when introducing the Passover Lamb in the 53rd chapter of Isaiah, telling us that the man who comes to recognize their identity is the one who can properly explain the prophecy.

Therefore, while Yada° is the final Zarowa° | the Arm of God Cultivating the Seeds for the Shabuw°ah and Taruw°ah Harvests, he is also the most formidable weapon Yahowah will have ever wielded against Satan. It is why our relationship began by exposing and condemning the Adversary's role in causing Islam to be genocidal against Yahuwdym. It is why the five volumes of God Damn Religion were buttressed with five more in Twistianity eviscerating Satan's diabolical influence in turning Christianity into a Plague of Death for Jews. No one has ever written as much or been as effective when excoriating Satan's religious plots.

While I stand with Yahowah, we stand alone in this regard. And that is what makes the prophecy presenting the demise of Rahab at the hands of the Zarowa° so relevant for then and now.

And so as to not let this opportunity pass without gleanings as much as we can from this pronouncement, let's see how much more we can learn about the identity of Rahab in conjunction with how this prophecy regarding his battle against Yahowah's fortified Zarowa. And since there are four, let's see how this one relates to the other three. Beginning with the 89th Mizmowr so that it is foremost in our minds...

“You convey Mashal | Portraits Comprised of Words when exercising Your authority (atah mashal*), gloriously triumphing with the surging sea, agitating by majestically raising the illustrious and reoccurring force of the one from the west who can be abrasive (ba ge^uwth ha yam). By lifting up his rolling rocks among the turbulent waves as witnesses (ba nasa^{} galym huw^{}), You laud and extol them with exuberant statements commending their value, eliminating the noise, calming the chaos, and quieting the situation through them (atah shabach hem*). (Mizmowr 89:9)

You batter and bruise, reject and silence, crushing (atah daka^{}) that which should be compared to the reprehensible and pervasive, diseased and deplorable, deadly nature of the ever-popular (ka ha chahal) Rahab | the Conceited and Contentious, Loud-Mouthed Afflicter, the Emboldened, Confusing, and Audacious Monster with the Mythical God (Rahab) through Your empowered and fortified, courageous and confident, unyielding and resolute (*ba °oz atah) Zarowa° | Strong Arm Cultivating the Harvests (Zarowa^{}*). You isolate and separate (pazar) Your adversaries (oyeb atah).” (Mizmowr 89:10)

Rahab is likely Yahowah’s most formidable foe. Adversarial, Rahab is deplorable while pervasive. He is equated to a reprehensible pandemic disease spread by popular appeal. Fortunately, Rahab is thwarted by the Mashal / Proverbs inspired by Yahowah and scribed by Eythan. The Surging Sea God brings against Rahab through exuberant statements, calms the chaos that he has infused into his politics. Ultimately, Yahowah’s empowered and emboldened Zarowa^{}* triumphs against him, silencing and crushing the Adversary.

This is prophetically pointing toward Yada’s library of Yada Yahowah volumes positioned against satanic religions ~ Twistianity: Appalling, Towrahless, Devil’s Advocate, Incredible, and Foolology, God Damn Religion: Snake, Satanic, Submission, Slaughter, and Sunnah, and Babel: Beast, Abominable, and Venomous, in addition to Yada Yahowah: Time of Trouble which prophetically identifies this Beast and Harvests which specifies the circumstances under which the Adversary meets his doom. Also relevant, all of this pertains to Dowd because Christianity stole his legacy, Islam murdered his people, Judaism took them away from him, and the events of the last days all lead to the King's return.

Regarding Rahab, as we know, Yasha Yah / Isaiah 14 is devoted entirely to exposing and condemning this arrogant Babylonian Beast and confabulator with a diabolical legacy. But since Satan appears there by the name Halal ben Shachar, let's turn to the other places where the Adversary bears this menacing title ~ Rahab.

Recognizing that it is the most confusing of the three, the first of these chronologically is found in Mizmowr / Psalms 87:4. The reasons for concern are that its seven short lines were scribed by the "Sons of Korah," men with a highly checkered past. This Mizmowr would have been written by those in service to Dowd but it affords Yahowah credit for founding the City of Dowd. It says that Ya^aaqob lived there, which was not the case unless his name is being used as a metaphor for Yisra^el. But even then, they would have just moved in. After saying that "significant things are spoken of the City of God" without mentioning one, the lyrics abruptly transition to "remembering Rahab," whose only prior mention was as a prostitute in Jericho serving Israeli spies. Nevertheless, this Rahab is associated with Babylon, and the message is said to be a warning to the Philistines and Phoenicians. It reads...

"Mizmowr | Melodious Lyrics of a song of the Sons of Qorach | Bald (la beny Qorach Mizmowr Shyr). The foundation (yasuwadah) is by Him (*huw) within the Set-Apart Mount (ba har qodesh). (Mizmowr / Psalms 87:1)

Yahowah (YaHoWaH) loves (ahab*) the gates (sha^aar) of Tsyown | the Signs Posted Along the Way (Tsyown) more than all (min kol) the dwelling places (mishkan) of Ya^aaqob | Reward or Consequence (Ya^aaqob). (Mizmowr 87:2)

Significant and weighty notoriety, distinguishing and honorable things (kabed) are spoken (dabar) within you (*ba ath) City of the Almighty (iyer ha elohym). Selah | Ponder

the implications. (Mizmowr 87:3)

I remember and recall (zakar) Rahab | the Conceited and Contentious, Loud-Mouthed Afflicter, this Confusing and Audacious Monster with the Mythical God (Rahab) and Babel | the Confounding Confusion by Commingling in Babylon (Babel).

Approach (la) those who are familiar with Yada and who know Me (yada° *any (participle)). Behold and beware (hineh) Palesheth | Palestinians Rolling in Dust (Palesheth), Tsor | the Flint and Knife of Tyre (Tsor) with those (*im) Kuwsh | Boring and Digging Tunnels (Kuwsh). ‘This one (zeh) was conceived there by this name (yalad sham).’ (Mizmowr 87:4)

And of (wa la) Tsyown | the Signs Posted Along the Way (Tsyown), it will be said (*amar), ‘One man and then another individual (*iysh wa *iysh) were conceived (yalad) for her (*hy).’ Then He, Himself, will establish, develop, prepare, and appoint her steadfast and ready (wa huw kuwn hy) for Elyown | All Things Pertaining to the Influence of Almighty God (°elyown). (Mizmowr 87:5)

In writing down a written record (ba kathab) of the people of the family (°amym), it’s this one (zeh) who was conceived and brought forth (yalad) there by this name and renown (sham / shem). Selah | Ponder the implications. (Mizmowr 87:6)

So, singers in harmony with dancers (wa shrym ka chowlym), all my springs and sources of life (kol ma°yan *any) are with you (*ba ath).” (Mizmowr / Psalms 87:7)

While I cannot attest to their credentials as prophets, these balding sons of traitors foresaw that the events pertaining to Rahab would eventually play out on and around the Temple Mount in the City of Dowd. This Babylonian Adversary would covet the place Yahowah loves above all others. By implication, Rahab would try to erase Tsyown | the Signs Posted Along the Way and misdirect the world through babel | confounding confusion, commingling religion and politics. He would be a confabulator.

Those who have become familiar with Yahowah through Yada are invited to approach at this time. By contrast, the knife-wielding Palestinians emerging from their tunnels and covered in dust are being warned to stay away. It's Israel and Yahuwd who were born here ~ not Muslims.

According to the prophecy, two men would work together, both associated with the Signs of Tsyown, both devoted to Yaruwshalaim. They were conceived for this purpose. And as a result, they are established, prepared, and appointed by God, such that they are ready and reliable. The “hy | her” that they are positioned to serve is the “City of God” because it is the last feminine singular reference withing the Mizmowr. And ultimately, these two iysh | men are so emmeshed into Yaruwshalaim and the Ha Qodesh | Set-Apart Mount, that they serve to prepare the world for °Elyown | All Things Pertaining to the Influence of Almighty God. And °Elyown as we shall discover later in the 89th Mizmowr is Dowd, symbolizing his restored reputation, upon his return with Yahowah. This is then a portrayal of Yada serving Dowd.

Ultimately, this is a prophetic portrayal of the showdown on the Temple Mount. It is in opposition to the conceited and contentious Rabab as the confabulator of Babel. At different times and also together, two men will work as one, both conceived for this purpose. And those who ponder the implications of what they achieve by fulfilling the Mow°edym in the City of God will be among those singing and dancing as the fountains of life are released from within the Set-Apart Mount to restore the souls of those cleansed on this day.

And in this regard, Satan's final death blow will be his undoing. When he, manifest within Donald Trump, slays me as the Adamah Parah* | Bullish and Productive Man on Yowm Taruw°ah | Day of the Herald, my nepesh | soul and Rahab's ruwach | spirit will head in opposite directions. So, all of this is to affirm that we have correctly identified the nature and timing of the great Rahab showdown.

But there is more. In Yasha'yah / Isaiah 30:7, Rahab is among the Beasts of the Negeb, placing him within the Land of Israel during the Time of Trouble. Opposing the Ephe'ah* | the Hissing and Negating Viper and the flying Saraph | Fiery Serpent, will be the *Labya | Roaring Heart of the White Lioness and a Lysh | the Boldly Ferocious Mature Lion.

The roaring woman and mature man with a considerable bite represented by the lions, defeat the hissing Viper his accompanying the flying Fiery Serpent. As this occurs, the most capable of his combatants and belligerents will be carried off by donkeys and their supplies by camels. This is to infer that they will be Arab Muslims and, thus, jihadists. And of them, God says that they are worthless and inept. Having written God Damn Religion, I concur.

All the while, the one who controls and oppresses through religion and politics, along with his militarily which will have been engaged constraining and abusing people, will abandon Israel. This is the Great Betrayal. Satan and his stooge will do nothing. Their prior promises will be rendered utterly meaningless, as nothing more than delusional and empty words without merit. Having made promises to defend Israel, they will betray God's people.

This is confirmed, because as we know from our prior studies of Yasha'yah / Isaiah 17 and 18, the Great Betrayer is the demon-possessed, egomaniacal, sexually perverted, and diabolically vicious, Donald Trump, who will have been president of the United States of America. He, and his Satanic partner, are Rahab. This is the message Yahowah was emphatic that Yasha'yah commit to writing so that as we approach the last days, I could read it, understand it, explain it, and share it with you.

With that introduction, here is that prophecy...

“A prophetic pronouncement about the impending burden (*masa) of the Beasts (bahemah) of the Negeb | Parched (negeb), within (ba) the Land (erets*) of Tsarah | Anguishing Confinement and Trouble (Tsarah), even (wa) oppression when besieged in dire straits (tsowqah).

The *Labya | Roaring Heart of the White Lioness and (wa) the Lysh | the Boldly Ferocious Mature Lion will be against them (min hem), this Eph^eah* | Hissing and Negating Viper (wa) and the flying (wa ^ouwph) Saraph | Fiery Serpent.

Their strongest and most capable fighters (chayl hem – their capacity to fight, political authority, and military power as part of their community) will be carried away (nasa) upon (^oal*) asses and donkeys (^oayr), and on the humps of camels (wa ^oal dabesheth gamal) their treasury, arsenal, and food supplies (owtsar hem*) among (^oal) a people (^oam) who have no value or benefit and will not succeed or accomplish anything (lo ya^oal*). (Yasha^oyah / Isaiah 30:6)

Then (wa), the assistance and support (^oazar) of Mitsraym | the One who Controls and Oppresses through Politics, Religion, and the Military, abusing and restricting people (mitsraym), will be for naught and in vain, utterly meaningless and a waste of breath (habal), a delusional fantasy of empty words without merit (ryq).

As a result, and for these reasons (la-ken), I will call (*qara) what pertains to this individual man (la zoth), ‘Rahab hem | their Conceited and Contentious, Loud-Mouthed and Pretentious, Confusing and Audacious Afflicter and their Monstrous Mythical God (Rahab hem – their stormy, frenzied, haughty, idolatrous, defiant, emboldened, and overly verbose, senseless and insubordinate, self-absorbed and self-motivated, abuser falsely claiming divine status and authorization), incapacitated, sitting this one out, doing nothing (shebeth – totally inactive).’ (Yasha^oyah / Isaiah 30:7)

So, now (^oatah), go (*bow) because it is imperative that you write it (kathab hy ) upon a tablet (^oal luwach*) to accompany them (eth hem). And also (wa), upon a written document, whether a scroll or book (°al sepher), you must inscribe it, as if engraving it by chiseling it in stone, portraying it as decreed (chaqaq hy).

Then it will come to exist (hayah) pursuant to (la) a day (yowm) in the end (*acharown) for the °Ad | Restoring Witness °Ad | of the Eternal Testimony, continually providing evidence throughout time °owlam | from antiquity perpetually into the future and forevermore (°ad °ad °owlam).” (Yasha°yah / Isaiah 30:8)

It is as the Prophets foretold ~ Donald Trump has been possessed by Satan. He is the Great Betrayer of Israel. The is the only rational conclusion that can be deduced from the depictions presented in Isaiah, Daniel, and Ezekiel, in addition to the Psalms. In alliance with Satan, they have become the embodiment of Rahab ~ an Egocentric Man and his False God. Fortunately, they will have met their match in the *acharown | end as a result of the °Ad | Restoring Witness to °Ad | the Eternal Testimony, who continually provides evidence throughout time °owlam | from antiquity perpetually into the future and forevermore.

Even though we have resolved the identity of Rahab, we have not yet completed our evaluation of the prophetic implications conveyed about this adversarial demonic duo because Rahab is also the subject of Yasha°yah / Isaiah 51:9, which is the last time he is mentioned. And once again, the Antagonist’s antagonist is Yahowah unyielding Zarowa°. Although this time, rather than referring to Rahab as the integration of the hissing Viper and the flying Fiery Serpent, he is their evil twin ~ the Tanyin | Monstrous Serpent and Diabolical Dragon.

“You should choose to be alert and aroused (°uwr), opting to rise up and be exposed while uncovering and unmasking the blindness and injustice of others (°uwr).

Decide of your own freewill to be clothed (labash) in confidence and courage, boldness and might, the power and strength to accomplish anything and withstand everything, fortified and resolute, unyielding and steadfast (^ooz) as the Zarowa^o of Yahowah | the Strong Arm of God Cultivating the Seeds Sown for a Productive Harvest unto Yahowah (Zarowa^o Yahowah).

You should choose to be alert and aroused, to rise up while exposing blindness and injustice (^ouwr) in the manner of (ka) the days (yowmym) from long ago to forevermore, from before time to eternal time (qedem) for the generations, places, and epochs of time (dowr) from antiquity into the future (owlam).

Yes or no, will it not be you [as the Zarowa^o of Yahowah (ha lo^{ath} hy*) who will dig the grave, flash a bright light, and then cut into pieces, carving up (chatseb) Rahab | the Conceited and Contentious, Loud-Mouthed Pretentious Affliker, the Emboldened, Confusing, and Audacious Monster with his Mythical God (Rahab – arrogant and stormy, frenzied and haughty, insolent and idolatrous, defiant and and overly verbose, senseless and insubordinate, self-absorbed and self-motivated, Abuser falsely claiming divine status and authorization) as you pierce by showing contempt for (chalal) the Tanyn | Monstrous Serpent and Diabolical Dragon (tanyn)?” (Yasha^oyah / Isaiah 51:9)*

The message is clear: Rahab is the corporeal manifestation of Satan who betrays Israel in the last days. He is demonic and devilish, conceited and confounding, loud-mouthed and vicious, a senseless confabulator who is exceedingly abusive. He is the integration of Satan and Trump who, after making all manner of promises to Israel, won't honor any of them. Promising to defend and support Israel, he will do the opposite and aid and abet her enemies as he blames the nation's subjugation on their miscalculations rather than his own.

However, as Yahowah's Zarowa^o stands resolutely against Hell's ambassadors on Taruw^oah while serving as the Adamah*

Parah | Bullish Man and Productive Bull, by striking him, they will have rendered their final blow. The Tanyn | Monstrous Serpent and Diabolical Dragon will be no more. And this is the message *Eythan ha *Ezrachy delivered to Dowd from Yahowah. No doubt, it got the King's attention as it did mine and should yours.

Continuing with our summarizing notations, in these past two stanzas, Eythan affirmed...

44. Yahowah Guides Humankind through Mashal | Word Pictures.

45. In the End, God Raises a Man Out of the Sea, from the West, to Agitate the Religious.

46. Yahowah's Grating and Abrasive Witness is Lauded and Commended through Exuberant Statements.

47. The Man of the Sea will Quell the Chaos by Bruising and Debilitating the Deadly Nature of a Deplorable Pandemic Disease.

48. Rahab is the Conceited and Contentious Afflicter. This Loud-Mouthed Confabulator will be Perceived as God.

49. Yahowah will °oz | embower, embolden, and fortify His Zarowa° | Strong Arm Cultivating the Harvests to pazar | Isolate and Separate Rahab as the Corporeal Manifestation of Satan.

50. And from the Supporting Prophecies, Rahab | Emboldened, Confusing, and Audacious Monster with his Mythical God is Ephe°ah* | a Hissing Viper, the flying Saraph | Fiery Serpent, and the Tanyn | the Diabolical Dragon and Demonic Serpent.

The man who would come to love Dowd more than anyone on Earth, came to love Yahowah all the more. And as a result, he realized that God had to recuse Himself from His Son and from the mess men had made by loving men more than God. And the only way to bring man and God back together was to begin with Dowd. Then, as the Zarowa°, he would rid the world of Rabah, such that Yahowah would fully enjoy His return to the Earth and men He conceived...

“The spiritual realm of the Heavens (shamaym – the abode of God in the 7th dimension) is Yours (*la atah – are for You and to approach You). The material realm (erets* – the land), the world (tebel – the Earth), and all that is in it (*wa malo*hy – as well as the multitude of things that fill this space), are also Yours (aph la atah – exist on Your behalf, enabling us to approach You). You, Yourself, laid the foundation for them and established them (atah yasad hem* – You created and constituted them). (Mizmowr 89:11)

The north where treasures are hidden (tsaphown – the place where that which is valuable is concealed) and (wa) the south at the right side (yamyn – the most useful), You, Yourself, have created them (atah bara* hem* – You conceived them and brought them into existence (qal perfect second-person masculine singular)).

Tabowr | the Broken (tabowr – the shattered, crippled, and crushed: from tabar and shabar – to be broken down and violently maimed) and (wa) Chermown | the Banned (Chermown – the accursed and oppressed, those who would otherwise be mutilated, slain, and destroyed; from charam – that which is either prohibited or devoted) will shout for joy (ranan – they loudly, happily, melodiously, and publicly call out (piel imperfect third-person masculine plural)) in Your name (*ba shem atah – with Your proper designation).” (Mizmowr / Psalm 89:12)

Ten days after Rahab falls on Taruw^oah, and as a direct result of this intervention, on Kipurym, Yahowah will arrive with Dowd to reconcile the relationship with Yisra^el. By Sukah, the formerly broken and banned will shout for joy.

The is the summation of man’s story. For the past 6000 years, civilizations, all through the integration of religion, militarism, and the caste system, and often in league with Rahab, have been oppressive, crushing and controlling everyone. And while it will get worse before it gets better, our liberation is neigh.

No longer crippled or accursed, we will reenter Eden with Dowd as our Savior and King. With the Tanyn | Serpent gone, life will become Happily Ever. Shamaym and Erets will be as one. Four layers of separation, the enormity of the gap between three and seven dimensions will gradually dissolve as we become ever more like our God. And in fact, like Eythan ha Ezrachy, so it will be with every Child of the Covenant. Not only will Heaven's Door be open, they will have access to the treasures of God.

To a significant extent, this is the result of what is achieved through the collaboration of the Zarowa°. But let us never lose sight of the fact that had Dowd not restored his relationship with Yah and fulfilled the Spring Miqra°ey, the Fall Mow°edym would remain unfulfilled and forgotten. God could not return. Life would end.

Therefore, to provide a more complete perspective on life and the universe, Eythan is pulling back the curtain. Currently, as physical beings, mortal men and women are temporary occupants of this little corner of creation. To reach beyond it, and to transcend dimensions beyond the three of which we are familiar, the leap beyond is by invitation only. Access to the spiritual realm occurs once we accept God's conditions and then demonstrate that we are worthy of the considerable upgrade which comes with additional responsibility, capability, and opportunity. Without this step, we, remain Tabowr | Separated and Chermown | Banned. With Heaven off limits, the Earth becomes man's grave.

The reason that there are treasures depicted in the north is that the overwhelming preponderance of Jews outside of Israel live north of Jerusalem in Europe and North America. And on the left hand is where we would find the Yada. While on the other hand, the south represents the right side which is where Dowd is positioned.

Tabowr and Chermown were chosen because Eythan knows that the Yisra*elites will be shattered and crushed in the centuries to come, but it is those who were tabowr | banned from their homeland but remained chermown | devoted to it, who will sing for joy upon Dowd's triumphant return. And in this regard, charam's passage from Hebrew to Arabic would be particularly haunting because Jews were demonized under this label.

Adding to the intrigue, Tabowr is a high hill in Lower Galilee. It is the location of the battle Deborah and Barak waged against the Canaanites. This is where, in 55 CE, 10,000 Yahuwdym were slaughtered by the Romans. Countless more fell on these slopes in 66 CE when General Vespasian was dispatched by Nero to subdue Yahuwdym.

As for Chermown, this mountain in the Golan along the Israel, Syrian, and Lebanese border, was the site of intense battles in the Six-Day War (1967) and Yom Kippur War (1973) against Muslims. Now it serves as an Israeli observation post to monitor the Syrian and Lebanese jihadists. Particularly relevant, chermown was incorporated into Arabic and used to denigrate, ban, and to curse Jews through the ages.

Our liberation would not come soon or be easily won. There would be two Zarowa^o, and they would offer the full measure of devotion to rid the world of man's trash. And here, we find these men so emmeshed, it is not until Eythan has more fully established his case that one appears distinct from the other.

“To approach You, and on Your behalf (*la atah – to approach You and concerning You, by Your side), the Zarowa^o | Strong Arm Cultivating the Harvests for the Sacrificial Lamb (Zarowa^o – the one who shepherds the flock, who prevails because he is effective and capable, fully resolved with the overall ability to accomplish the mission, the impactful individual of action who, as a leader and fighter, is engaged nurturing a fruitful ingathering of souls; from zera^o – seeds sown, cultivated, and harvested) with authority and influence, courage, character, and conviction (im gabuwrah – with the will to fight and the capacity to perform, with what is required to accomplish anything that needs to be done, valiant and heroic, prominent and persuasive; from feminine of gibowr – a mighty warrior, valiant soldier, and capable defender, a courageous hero worth noting, and the verbal root gabar – confirmed and empowered man who prevails by fighting aggressively) will be Your confident and capable hand, Your bold, robust, and resolute influence (^o*azaz yad atah – it will continually be the means You will use to confidently exceed expectations and prevail, applying the force required to overpower any situation and firmly establish the result, unabashed, strong, and defiant (qal imperfect third-person feminine singular speaking of the hand)) raised up high and exalted (ruwm – lifted up as an extension from the source, elevated and taking action (qal imperfect third-person feminine singular still addressing the hand)) at Your right side (*yamyn atah – as Your right hand for having chosen to be right; from yaman – choosing that which is right and yam – sea).” (Mizmowr / Psalm 89:13)

While both Zarowa^o, the Sacrificial Lamb and the One Cultivating the Harvests, are designated by God as gabuwrah | capable and courageous, and both are ^o*azaz* | confident, only one stands at Yahowah’s yamyn | right side ~ Dowd. So, while Yada^o is the Zarowa^o who crushes Rahab, Dowd is the one who enables our approach to God and who, by being His Firstborn Son is positioned as the Almighty’s right hand. By fulfilling Pesach, Matsah, and Bikuwrym, he demonstrated that he was worthy of this distinction.

So, in this way, Eythan is further establishing his kinship with the King. They were both be manifest as the Strong Arm of God, albeit serving at different times and occasions. In addition to fulfilling the Fall Mow^oedym, the final Zarowa^o would also reacquaint Yisra^oel with the merits and achievements of the most formidable Zarowa^o. And while this says that His Zarowa^o are powerful and strong men of resolute character, much of what they achieve and who they are, Yahowah facilitates through His ruwach | spirit. In this way, their unique personalities, even attitudes and attributes, still come to the fore, differentiating them, while their love of Yah is consistent. This is particularly true during the Miqra'ey.

At the moment, Dowd was wrong about God, but when he was right, and he would be again, he was celebrated as the most tsegeq | correct. Moreover, by fulfilling Matsah, he removed our guilt, absolving us of judgment.

“Being correct and vindicating (tsedeq – being right, honest, and fair, being accurate, just, and acquitting) regarding executing good judgment and justly resolving disputes (wa mishpat – along with adroitly pondering all of the questions required to make rational and moral decisions; a compound of ma – to question and thus ponder and consider shaphat – deciding, being discriminating and just, thoughtful, fair, and moral) serve as the foundation (makown – are the basis and home, the very essence of) of y/Your throne (kise atah – of y/Your authority and position of honor).

Loyalty, devotion, and love (chesed – favoritism, affection, generosity, and kindness), along with a steadfast commitment to the truth, reliability and integrity (*wa emeth – trustworthiness and honesty, being honest and dependable; from emuwn* – the enduring truth and aman* – to support, confirm, and uphold that which is trustworthy and reliable, verifiable and confirming that which is correct), encounter those who enter y/Your presence (*qadam paneh atah – embrace those who come to meet y/You, and can be anticipated because they are front and center with y/You and naturally occur in y/Your presence (piel imperfect third-person masculine plural addressing love and reliability)).” (Mizmowr / Lyrics to Sing / Psalm 89:14)

Up to this point, and with only one exception, Eythan has been talking to Yahowah, revealing what he has come to know about God, about Dowd, and even about himself. The lone exception was when he quoted Yahowah addressing His Son. And so while God has created a throne for Dowd, in this case, atah* | You, is addressing Yahowah's *kise. Therefore, Eythan is reaffirming that God is loyal and loving, trustworthy and reliable. This is foundational to His nature.

Should you wonder why Eythan continues to report on Yahowah's devotion and integrity, I think the reasons are many. Having spent over two millennia with God in Shamaym, his testimony is that of an eyewitness and relevant. It is essential that he restore love for Yah and reliance upon Him. And everything written in this Song hinges on who God is, not Eythan, and certainly not the religious who deny all of it. Dowd is the one though whom Yahowah established the Covenant, making him our Savior, His Chosen One, the Promised One, and God's Coworker based entirely upon Yahowah's credibility. It isn't Eythan who made these claims, nor will it be ha Ezrachy who will affirm that Dowd is the Messiah, Son of God, and returning King. These pronouncements are all in Yahowah's voice. With all of this in mind, it is Yahowah who ha Ezrachy is proclaiming to be tsedeq | right, fair, moral, and vindicating.

One last thought before we move on to the next statement. Having been there, Heaven's guide is revealing that as the Covenant Family enter God's presence, they will perceive Yahowah as Eythan has presented Him ~ loyal, devoted, loving, honest, fair, and reliable.

It is, therefore, Yada, as Eythan ha Ezrachy, who is “Delighted to show the way because blessed (ashry* – happy to reveal the proper path to the relationship and treated favorably; from asher* – enjoying the benefits of the relationship by having been shown the steps to walk to get the most out of life and any* – me (representing the first word I translated in 2 Shamuw^{el} 7)) are the people (*ha am – are the family members) who are aware of and acknowledge Yada's role in (yada^o – who are familiar and acquainted with, who learn about and make known, who comprehend and understand what Yada does on) Taruw^{ah} (Taruw^{ah} – Trumpets, the 5th of 7 Miqra^{ey}, the final Gleaning of Yisra^{el}, the day of the

Pause now and contemplate what you have just read (selah).” (Mizmowr / Lyrics to Sing / Psalm 89:37)

As an added bonus, I suspect that we can finally clear up one of the more intriguing references in the creation account while at the same time, developing an appreciation for the reference to the moon here in Eythan ha Ezrachy’s Song. This seems to be saying that “the Moon,” representing an individual like the Sun, will affirm and establish” this profoundly important revelation regarding Dowd. And by doing so, the Moon, who is “likened” to Dowd, will be reflecting the Son’s light, just as Earth’s satellite mirrors the sun’s brilliance when our star is otherwise unseen in the darkness of night. That is why the individual being associated with Dowd, albeit less luminous, is called “an enduring, reliable, valid, verifiable, confident, and loyal witness pursuant to this restoring testimony.”

Now turning the hands of time back to creation, in Bare’syth / Genesis we find a similar interplay between the sun and moon, there called the greater and lesser luminaries...

“God (*wa elohym) said (amar* – declared, expressing in words), ‘There will be (hayah) lights as luminaries (ma’owr – sources of illumination; a compound of ma – to ponder the implications of owr* – light) in the expanse (ba raqya – within the spreading out of matter and space) of the heavens (shamaym) to understand the separation between (badal bayn – to distinguish the divide and discern what it means to be set apart, to ascertain the means to inclusion or cause of expulsion, to appreciate how to be included or be disassociated between) the time of light (ha yowm – the reckoning of time when there is light) as it is distinct from (wa bayn – differentiated from) the darkness of the night (ha laylah – the period of substantially diminished light, a wanting of illumination).

They will exist (wa hayah – they will be) as symbols and signs (*la owth – as a means to convey information, illustrations, and proof which make something more clearly known when evaluating recompense and reward; from uwth* – a means to be seen agreeing, providing consent) and for the Appointed Meeting Times for the Restoring Witness (wa la mow – concerning the designated periods which have been determined for a specific purpose authorized by the authority, directly associated with the Miqra^ey; from mow – this pertains to ed* – the eternal and restoring witness, everlasting testimony, and enduring evidence, and ya – to meet on an appointed schedule), as well as (wa) for days (yowm – the reckoning of time when there is light, the seven 24-hour periods of a week) and for years (wa shanah – the complete cycle of the seasons, a solar year which is a measure of age and the renewal of life). (Bare^e*syth* 1:14)

Therefore, they will exist (wa hayah) as luminaries (la ma – to ponder the implications of light) in the expanse (ba raqya – within the spreading out of the matter and space) of the heavens (ha shamaym) to provide illumination and enlightenment (*la owr) for (al*) the earth (*ha erets).’ And therefore (wa), it continued to exist like this thereafter based upon what preceded it (hayah ken). (Bare^e*syth* 1:15)

God (*wa elohym) acted and engaged to appoint for this particular task (asah*) both (eth shanaym* – the two) of these substantial and empowering, important and influential

God (*wa elohym) saw (*ra*ah* – perceived and considered, regarded and distinguished) that indeed (ky) it was good (towb – it was useful and agreeable, valuable and appropriate, productive and beneficial).” (*Bare*syth* / In the Beginning / Genesis 1:18)

It is nearly impossible for me to process the implications of this prophecy, and even more difficult to accept what God is revealing about what He intended to accomplish through these two luminaries. And yet it is sufficiently clear that the brighter of the two is Dowd while Yada is being shown reflecting his light as one fulfills and the other explains the Mow*edym. And all of this was foretold just as life was emerging on our planet.

And these two references to the interplay between the Son and Moon as enlightening witnesses are affirmed by a third acknowledgment. There is an equally enlightening connection between these men and the symbols representing them in the 104th Mizmowr...

“The most highly exalted mountains (harym ha gaboah) are to approach that which prevails and is beneficial (*la ha ya*el*), as an elevated rocky crag (*sela) is a trusted shelter to seek protection (machseh) with the treasured scribe (la ha shaphan). (Mizmowr / Psalm 104:18)

The Moon (yareach) will act and engage (asah*) for (la) Yada knows and acknowledges (*yada – he is aware of and reveals) the Sun’s (shemesh) arrival (mabow huw) as the Eternal Witnesses for the Restoring Appointments (*Mow*edym*).” (Mizmowr / Psalm 104:19)

The moon, while 400 times smaller than the sun, is 400 times closer to the Earth. And the moon, comprised of the essence of the Earth, is illuminated as a result of reflecting the sun’s light. These serve as metaphors that portray the proper perspective to view the Firstborn. By describing him as the most important luminary on Earth, Yahowah is conveying to us that Dowd's arrivals are important markers of time. Even the dates pursuant to when Dowd will fulfill the seven Mow^eedym are predicated upon how we view the sun and moon.

Also, it was in the fullness of the moon's light that Dowd fulfilled Pesach and Matsah. And it will be under the light of a full moon that we will camp out with our King during Sukah.

Dowd is not only Yahowah's most enduring and reliable witness, but he is also the most readily verified source of restoring testimony. And while he did his part to tell us what he was going to accomplish, even detailing his own crucifixion and journey into hell, no one has been willing to give him any credit for what he has done. And so that is why the greatest man who ever lived has a publicist, someone to reintroduce him to his people.

Christians can take their Madonna and Child, their baby "Jesus," their dead god on a stick, and their "Second Coming" to the grave with them because they do not belong in Yah's world. And as for the Haredi in their horrifyingly morbid mourning clothes, they are perfectly suited to continue worshipping dead rabbis while giving lip service to the HaShem they do not know and the Towrah they have replaced, all while awaiting the arrival of their unknown Messiah.

The enlightened and aware, informed and rational, will celebrate Dowd's life and lyrics while acknowledging our Father's love for His Son.

That said, we have reached the portion of Dowd's Song that was alluded to in Shamuw^eel / 2 Samuel 7 when Yahowah predicted that His people would deny and denigrate the Son of God and Messiah. And yet, even more than Ya^eaqob, Dowd is Yisra^eel. The promises made to him were also made to them, from being the children of God and heirs to the Covenant, to being recipients of the Land. His joys and heartaches, his ongoing battles with gowym, his insights and confusion, the benefits he enjoyed in concert with the Covenant and the consequences he endured when he ran afoul of it, are all shared by the nation he shepherded.

It was in concert with Dowd representing Yisra^{}el, and of Yisra^{}el's contribution to annulling the truths we have just considered, that these words were prophetically inscribed in parallel with Shamuw^oel / 2 Samuel 7. After all, it is Yisra^{*}el that has...

“But now (wa) you, yourselves, have refused to accept, creating a foul stench by snubbing (zanach – your stagnation and lack of movement has caused you to be excluded and thrown out for a time (qal perfect)), such that (wa) you have rejected by diminishing the merit, even spurning over time by repudiating the essence (ma^oas – you have minimized the value of, thereby limiting your relationship with and reliance upon so as to incur a festering wound caused by dissolving every sensible connection (qal imperfect)), improperly, and on your own initiative, meddling while presumptuously passing over (*abar – unjustifiably passing right by in antipathy, somehow displeased with the affairs, and yet acting on your own initiative, thereby eliminating (hitpa^el stem perfect conjugation – for a time, and on their own initiative, moving right past) [*abar is the basis of Pesach and thus Passover) your Messiah (*im Mashyach *atah – your Anointed, the One set apart and prepared to serve you)!” (Mizmowr / Psalm 89:38)

In the long litany of belligerent, arrogant, and errant Jewish reactions to Father and Son over the past 3,000 years, this is likely the most condemning. As frustrating as it had to be for God to endure the constant, exceedingly overt, and caustic rejection of those He was saving between Mitsraym and the Promised Land, as appalling as it must have been to witness their love affair with their own words and religions as He was speaking to them, this was worse.

It's not just that Yahowah is devoted to Dowd, it's that His Son made the ultimate sacrifice for his people, told them a thousand years in advance what he was going to do for them, and they rejected everything he represents, denied his fulfillment of Chag Matsah, and then replaced him. And that attitude toward the Messiah, Son of God, and Savior remains pervasive today, 3,000 years later.

Since God is as disappointed as He is disgusted with Jews for having committed this grievous crime, since our goal is for them to see the error of their ways and change their attitude toward God, let's consider it from His perspective. Able to see the future, long ago in our past, before *Adam, Noach, and *Abraham, Yahowah foresaw His people's preference for religion over the relationship He would be offering, thereby precluding the one thing our Father craved – a family to call His own. So, He came up with a plan, a way of wooing His Chosen back, all while remaining honest, honorable, and fair. He would choose the best among us to be His Firstborn, a boy who was obviously smarter than everyone. He anointed the boy, placing His Ruwach | Spirit upon him, and over the next sixty years they would unite Yisra*el, claim and build Yaruwshalaim, and defend the nation, all while leaving the greatest prophetic legacy ever scribed. And that was just the first of his three lives, because Dowd | the Beloved would return exactly 20 Yowbel, or 1,000 years, later to fulfill Pesach, Matsah, and Bikuwrym during the 80th Yowbel of year 4,000 Yah, becoming our Savior. By enabling the promise of the Miqra*ey, the Messiah and Son of God offered the gifts of eternal life, perfection, and adoption into Yahowah's Beryth | Covenant Family.

With only the Towrah before him, he was able to discern what no one else had seen, and knew that he would and should serve as the Passover Lamb and then fulfill UnYeasted Bread. Yahowah had written about this in the opening chapter of *Bare*syth* / Genesis pursuant to the fourth day of creation. He exposed His timing as He explained what occurred on each of the seven days of our genesis. God then presented *Adam as a prototype for Dowd in the Garden, with the Sun representing the Tree of Lives and the Moon the Tree of Knowledge. Noach, representing Dowd, was spared in an Ark just as Dowd will spare the remnant of his people when he anoints the Ark of the Covenant on Kipurym.

*Abraham would be the next exemplar of Dowd as he listened to Yahowah and gave birth to the Beryth. And it would be during its affirmation on Mount Mowryah, with his beloved son, Yitschaq, who was spared because Yahowah provided the Lamb, that Dowd saw himself in this dress rehearsal for Pesach on this same mountain, in his city, Yaruwshalaim, on this same day, 40 Yowbel, or 2,000 years thereafter.

I am certain that the Messiah saw himself, as we have, as the fulfillment of Moseh's prophecy regarding the one who would do more for the Children of Yisra^{*el} than any other. He knew he was the antidote for religion and the resolution for false prophets as all of this is presented in Dabarym 18. And should that not have been sufficient for Dowd to perceive his future, as the recipient of the prophecy on houses, who builds them, and for whom, as recorded in *Shamuw^{el} / 2 Samuel 7, he put all of the pieces together and volunteered to serve as our Savior.

Dowd did what no other Jew has done. He correctly discerned his role in our lives based upon these prophecies. Thereafter, so that we wouldn't miss what he envisioned and performed, Dowd was taken forward in time to witness his sacrifice and then write about it, detailing what it would be like to be crucified and then enter Hell in the process of fulfilling Pesach and Matsah. The lone eyewitness accounts were scribed in first person and are found in Mizmowr | Psalms 22 and 88. And if that were not enough, each of the first 30 Songs sung by Dowd address his decision to serve in this manner. The crowning jewel is the 89th Mizmowr, Dowd's Song, where all of this is made so very obvious for us. And yet, to the embarrassment of Yisra^{*el} and Yahuwdym, God's people have missed the bold pronouncements of Father and Son.

It is in denying all of this, and thereby nullifying the gift Yahowah and Dowd are offering, then replacing them with false gods, false messiahs, and religious rubbish that caused Yahowah to reveal what we have just read: “But now (wa) you, yourselves, have refused to accept, creating a foul stench by snubbing (zanach), such that (wa) you have rejected by diminishing the merit, even spurning over time by repudiating the essence, negating the value (ma^{as}), improperly, and on your own initiative, meddling while presumptuously passing over (abar*) your Messiah (im Mashyach atah)!”

Yahowah has affirmed this profound truth through His prophets so many times and ways that it’s befuddling that as few as one in a million Yahuwdym acknowledge Dowd as their Messiah, or that five billion Gowym bequeath the Greek variation of this title on another. After enduring 2,000 years of harassment for failing to accept “Jesus” as their Lord, it turns out Jews were correct in rejecting the mythical misnomer. Now it’s time to take the next step and recognize ha Mashyach for who he truly is so that the Family can be reconciled.

If you are a descendant of Ya^aqob, pause now and reflect upon this. Almost everything religious and secular Jews have claimed regarding Dowd | David, the Mashyach, and the fulfillment of the Mow^eedym, is untrue, upended, and incongruent. Please try to view this from God’s perspective and embrace what Dowd represents. He is not only ha Mashyach | the Messiah but, also, the Son of God who served as the Pesach ^{*}Ayil. Do not pass over him in an ill-conceived attempt to validate Judaism or cultural mores.

I understand that Yahuwdym have been plagued over the centuries by those who believe Jesus Christ was the Messiah. And because Christians blame Jews for killing their god, the very idea of the Messiah being the Son of God and fulfilling Pesach is disorienting. And while there never was any rational reason for a Messiah named “Jesus Christ,” no validity to the religion of Christianity, no justification for the New Testament, or credibility in calling oneself a Christian, there has been incalculable harm perpetrated under these delusions.

And while that may have been the most horrific and anti-

Semitic fraud ever perpetrated, the truth is sweet revenge. The Messiah returned, and he, as the Son of God fulfilled Pesach, Matsah, and Bikuwrym to enable the benefits of the Covenant. One does not have to change his name or upend his identity to claim any of the many hundreds of prophecies which acknowledge his greatness.

Second only to removing Yahowah's name 7,000 times from His testimony in the Towrah, *Naby, wa Mizmowr and replacing it with the Adversary's title, "the Lord," this error in judgment and lapse in scholastic rigor has caused more harm to Yahuwdym | Jews than any other. They have rejected the heart which restores their soul and the only Spirit capable of reconciling them.

There has never been a need for them to pray for the arrival of a nameless Messiah to save them when ha Mashyach has already done so – and will do so again. Moreover, he is familiar as the most prominent descendant of Ya^aaqob. Had the actual identity and purpose of Yahowah's Messiah been acknowledged by his people, Dowd would not have been replaced by "Jesus Christ," and Christianity's New Testament would have been stillborn.

Let's affirm a heartbreaking reality: Jews have been their own worst enemy. The hitpa^l stem, modifying "abar* – by improperly, and on your own initiative, meddling while presumptuously passing over" your Messiah, proves it. This uncommon stem reveals that the religious have "unjustifiably passed right by him in antipathy, somehow displeased with his affairs, all while acting on their own initiative" and, thus, not God's. Equally telling, abar* is the basis of Pesach and thus Passover, equating the rejection of the Messiah with foregoing the purpose of the Miqra^{*}.

On behalf of Yahuwdah and Yisra^ael, even the Gowym who are listening: embrace the Beloved Mashyach as your brother and Melek as God's Son, even the Zarowa^{*} as your Shepherd and Savior. Listen to Yahowah's Bachar | Chosen One, the Qadowsh | Set-Apart One of Yisra*el and concur with him because when it comes to God, Dowd is right.

As for religious Jews, it is a perplexing irony. Wearing black and bobbing their heads up and down as if to exorcise their demons, they babble to their nameless G-d in minyan | minions facing a stone wall while reciting Dowd's Mizmowr from rote. If only they would consider what he had to say instead. If only their heads were not as hard as the Edomite's wall, some of what they recite might actually penetrate their thick skulls. But alas, it is not to be. Dowd's Mizmowr and Yahowah's Dabar are for the unreligious.

As a result of doing what Yahowah railed against, it didn't take long for Yahuwdym to hit rock bottom. The fall from the reign of Dowd was swift and painful. It began with Solomon capitulating to accommodate the religious interests of his wives and concubines. Israel would crumble shortly thereafter and never retain her fleeting glory.

Reminding Yisra*el of their fall, of the religions they begot, and those they beguiled, Yahowah asserts that by denying the Messiah Dowd, they were renouncing the Covenant he enabled by fulfilling Chag Matsah....

“You have repudiated and renounced (*na*ar* – you have disavowed, refusing to even acknowledge and actually lack any respect for (piel perfect)) the Covenant (beryth – the Family, Home, and Relationship Agreement) with your coworker (ebed atah – of the one doing your work as your official advisor and associate; based upon abad* – to work).

You have dishonored and defiled (chalal – You have treated with contempt and desecrated by making common and no longer uniquely special, sully and polluting (piel perfect)) his dedication (*nezer huw – his respect and his unparalleled devotion) to the Land and Earth (*la ha erets).” (Mizmowr / Lyrics to Sing / Psalm 89:39)

When Dowd is renounced, so are the Mow*edym he fulfilled and the Covenant he enabled. When Dowd is dishonored, the Land to which he was devoted suffers.

Yahowah's point, and as God He can be trusted in this regard, there is an inseparable connection between "snubbing and passing over the Messiah," and "desecrating the Covenant" because the result is "to dishonor his dedication" to his people and planet. This is only said with regard to Dowd because he is the one through whom Yahowah engaged to reconcile His relationship with His wayward children. Reject him at your peril. Accept him for your benefit.

What I do not understand, and I don't think Yah does either is, with the conditions of His Covenant so liberating and uplifting, with the benefits so enriching and empowering, and with Him proving that His promises are reliable, why disavow and replace what God is offering through His chosen Messiah? With Dowd so generous, why recant what he accomplished and reject what he is offering?

For those who may be protesting, saying that they haven't repudiated Dowd because they honor David by wrapping themselves in a flag emblazoned with his six-pointed star, may I challenge said assumption by categorically stating that there was never a Star of David and David isn't his name. Creating a false caricature of a man in this manner degrades his authentic nature. He is not one of many stars nor part of a religious zodiac. Not only would Dowd's number be three, representing his lives, or seven, demonstrating the synergy of man with God, the six-pointed star of intersecting triangles is a pagan religious icon predating the Messiah. Further, since this sign was forced upon Jews by the Roman Church and later by Nazi Germans to denigrate and demonize them, why pick this of all symbols?

One last thought before we move on: the juxtaposition of the preceding two statements not only serves to reinforce that Dowd has been rejected and denied by Yahuwdym and Gowym, but that Yahowah is enormously displeased His Son's lives and lyrics have been disavowed. Dowd is unquestionably the exemplar of the Covenant, and in this regard, God's Family is severely curtailed without the Messiah's contributions to it. And this serves to affirm the Zarowa's fulfillment of the first three Miqraey which provide the benefits of the Beryth.

A little explanation may be helpful as we consider the next statement. The sheepfold whose walls have been torn down represents barriers around the Covenant which were designed to keep the religious, political, conspiratorial, and ignorant out.

“You have broken down and destroyed (parats – you have breached and in hostility shattered, negatively impacting with your opposition to (qal perfect)) his entire sheepfold and all of its walls (*kol gaderah huw – the entirety of his protective enclosure and its hedges; from gader – the fences put around it and the way he constructed it). You have caused (sym – you have brought about) the undoing, the degradation and destruction (machatah – the demolishing and ruination, to the point of disrepair by corrupting; from ma – to question and *chata – what it means to miss the way) of his fortifications (*mibtsar huw – of its defensive structure; from batsar – to restrain from gathering, to cut off and make less accessible, withholding access).” (Mizmowr / Lyrics to Sing / Psalm 89:40)

As a rebuke to every religion, Yahowah has deliberately restricted access to His Covenant, effectively keeping the religious and political out. Whether ignorant of or averse to the five beneficial conditions God established for entry, men like Akiba and Paul have sought to annul the Almighty's intent while projecting their own rules.

If I may share an insight worth considering: the Garden of *Eden had walls. They were not there to keep *Adam and Chawah locked inside as if they were prisoners but, instead, to keep the rest of humankind out because they were religious and vicious and did not belong. The Gan | Protective Garden Enclosure of eden* | Great Joy was, as the name implies, fun because the curmudgeons were excluded. And as was eden*, so will be Shamaym. As was God's relationship with Dowd, so it will be with all of the Covenant's children. That is why this Mizmowr | Psalm is so important.

Dowd and the Covenant continue to be integrated and indistinguishable, with the Beloved upholding the Family. So, from God's perspective, an attack on one is an assault on the other.

“All who pass by this way (*kol abar derek – everyone crossing this path) plunder him (*shasas huw – they pillage and ransack him, looting him). He has become (hayah – he is) scorned and abusively ridiculed, defied and upbraided (cherpah – insulted and held in contempt, even taunted by this disgraceful reproach) by those who claim some affinity with him (*la shaken huw – by those settling in close proximity, especially nations of people existing all around it and him, even as residents and neighbors).” (Mizmowr / Lyrics to Sing / Psalm 89:41)

The pretense of sharing an affinity with “David” is common. His name appears in the New Testament, Talmud, and Quran. Similarly, Christians, Jews, and Muslims, with wholly contradictory belief systems, all claim to be Abrahamic religions even though they degrade *Abraham's legacy. Alleging similar origins, their gods share nothing in common. Christians are particularly guilty, lugging around the “Old Testament” with its tribute to Dowd | David adjacent to their revisionist counterfeit which plunders his legacy. They claim to admire the boy who slew the giant and who sang the 23rd Psalm, not knowing that it is Yahowah, for whose name's sake, the song was written and the Philistine performed the first prostration.

Then of course, in that they blame Jews for all of their problems, they deny that the Messiah and King was the most Yahuwd of all men. Even in the Quran, there is an entire surah devoted to “Dauwd.” The only problem is that this imposter was a Muslim and worshiped Allah, well that, and the stories attributed to him were inane. So now confronted with the Dead Sea Scrolls parchment memorializing this Psalm a thousand years before their religion was invented, I wonder how a literate Muslim would react after seeing Yahowah's name rather than Allah's.

Many of those who pass this way ransack the Covenant, ridiculing everything Dowd represents by taking it from him and giving it to themselves or others. They jeopardize countless lives by flagrantly falsifying the Messiah's identity and contribution to the Covenant. And sadly, many of them have settled in proximity to Yisra*el. Today we know them as the practitioners of Judaism, Christianity, and Islam – with their delusions coming to roost where they clearly do not belong.

Speaking against the religious, whether they be pilgrims or refugees, crusaders or jihadists, God says...

“You have lifted up and exalted (ruwm – you have raised up and have sought to bring credibility and distinction to, even tried to justify) the upper hand (yamym – the right side, condoning the orientation and good fortune, even the direction) of his foes and adversaries, especially those who try to constrain and limit him (tsar – his opponents narrowing his scope by being contentious and troubling leading to an unfavorable result). You have caused all those who demonstrate animosity and rancor toward him (*kol oyeb – you have made the opposition totally) to be delighted (samach – elated).” (Mizmowr / Lyrics to Sing / Psalm 89:42)

Yahowah continues to be annoyed by what those who falsely claim to speak for Him have done to denigrate His Son and diminish all He accomplished. And in the end, antagonizing God has never worked out well for anyone. So, it's best if those who have been religious stop irritating Him before it's too late. And as for Jews, they are guilty of giving the upper hand to Christianity by abandoning the true Messiah and Son of God and then for Islam by selling Muhammad the Talmud recitals he needed to finish his Quran, making it appear religious and *Abrahamic. And through their denials, they helped justify all forms of Replacement Theology.

For Christianity to differentiate itself from Yahowah and Dowd, from their Towrah and Covenant, sufficiently to appeal to the religious Greeks and Romans God warned His people about, they would need a New Testament. And yet for it to be believable, it would have to borrow heavily from Yahowah's testimony – claiming its prophecies as their own. Therefore, the new religion proposed that it was authorized by the same God and justified by the same prophecies. But how is that possible when one proposition is so contradictory to the other?

The answer for Christianity became Replacement Theology. This sleight of hand wasn't simply about assigning the blessings and promises offered by God for Jews to the Gentiles who seek their eradication, it's about replacing one Covenant with another, and then Dowd with "Jesus."

Should you not concur, do what I've done. After scrutinizing Paul's renunciation of Dowd for the sake of his "Jesus," go to any Christian site and read their assessment of the prophecies pertaining to "David." You'll find that "Jesus" isn't named in a single one, but every time Dowd's name appears, Christians insist that it actually applies to "Christ," as if God didn't know the difference between the two names nor was aware of which one He anointed as His Mashyach | Messiah.

The problem for Christians was as simple as it is profound. Without the Towrah, Prophets, and Psalms, they have no God and no credibility. But with them, they present a jumble of contradictions. Their only hope was for people to believe their lies and for their faith to occlude judgment. They banked upon apathy and ignorance, then fear.

Fortunately, at long last, there is an open debate once again, even if those who prefer false gods or no god outnumber those who have come to know the one true God by a million to one. Considering the score previous to Yada Yahowah, that's progress.

"Adding to the resentment (aph* – all the more to begrudge), you are turned around again (shuwv – you have pivoted such that you are pointed in the opposite direction (hifil imperfect)), having assaulted, besieged, bound up, and constrained the rocky crag (tsuwr – having been adverse to the stone (qal infinitive)) of this battle over Choreb (*choreb huw – over his fight with sword and chisel for the fire of Yah and revelation of His Towrah) such that (wa) you do not stand with him or support him (*quwm huw – you do not rise up or take a stand with him (hifil perfect)) in this conflict (ba ha milchamah – in this fight between opposing parties; from lacham – to engage in battle over yeasted bread [4QPs says “for” battle]).” (Mizmowr / Lyrics to Sing / Psalm 89:43)

There is a plethora of tantalizing insights in this statement beginning with the realization that aph*’s primary connotation is to engender resentment and wrath. Those who continue to turn against Dowd will endure the sting of his judgment.

Also interesting, while tsuwr is rendered as “the edge” in the Jewish Publication Society Holy Scriptures According to the Masoretic Text, it was scribed as a verb. There was no definite article in the text and “edge” is not among tsuwr’s meanings when presented as a noun. Had it been written as a noun, our options would have been “rocky crag, sharp flint, or stone.”

In the qal infinitive, tsuwr is not only active, but it also intensifies the ongoing action of “laying siege, enclosing, binding up, and confining in a hostile and harassing fashion.” These connotations fit this context because the perpetrators engendering Dowd’s wrath continue to be the Jewish religious leaders who have sought to constrain the Savior by assaulting his achievements. Further, if we are to read “rocky crag” into this depiction, it was upon this sharp rocky edifice that Yahowah first revealed His fiery light to Moseh and then the Children of Yisra*el upon Mount Choreb – where He would also reveal His Towrah. Moreover, it is my contention that Dowd’s Song is the Cornerstone of the Covenant Home and that it was revealed in the Yowbel year of 3000 Yah, 968 BCE, four years into Solomon’s reign as construction began on Yahowah’s Home. And if that were not enough, the Basar heralding Dowd’s contribution to our lives is named Craig, which is the Celtic transliteration of this tsuwr | crag.

Furthermore, the Hebrew name for the mountain upon which Yahowah introduced Himself to Moseh and then revealed the Towrah is Choreb. Spelled the same way in the text, it also serves as the Hebrew word for “dry and desolate, battle and conflict, sword and chisel.” And while we can choose any definition that fits within this sentence, it's prudent to include every viable connotation so as to not deprive anyone of the full intent.

In this case, I see Dowd standing between the two mountains of God – Choreb and Mowryah – bringing the Towrah to the heart of the Land and fulfilling it in the City of Dowd. This is not only evident by the King's marvelous dissertation on the Towrah's Teaching in the 119th Mizmowr but, also, by his serving as the Pesach *Ayil.

In this battle for the souls of humankind, the religious are on one side and Father and Son are on the other. And while Judaism and Christianity have written Yahowah and Dowd, Choreb and Mowryah, the Towrah and Miqra*ey out of their story, they are holding a losing hand.

During this war of words, the ultimate question boils down to where we stand with Dowd because this characterizes where we stand with God. Therefore, with the exception of those who have come to know Yahowah and His beloved Son, many through these books, this remains true of almost everyone else...

“You have truncated, causing a cessation to all of the work (shabath – you have made this like a Sabbath for doing nothing), removing and taking away from (min) his purifying brilliance and means to restore, along with his glorious status (*tahar huw – his majesty and ability to renew, his clear and illuminating approach, especially the means to being purified and pronounced clean). And his position of honor, dignity, and power (*wa kise*huw – his throne, royal authority, and appointed status, even his brilliant adornment) you have hurled to the ground (*la magar ha erets – you have thrown into the dirt, tossing it from the Land (qal perfect)).” (Mizmowr / Lyrics to Sing / Psalm 89:44)

Clearly, God is annoyed. He is disgusted that the beloved Son that He anointed as His Mashyach, the Shepherd He chose to guide His Covenant Family, and the Sacrificial Lamb who opened Heaven’s Door, has been so universally discounted by religious Jews. They have done to Dowd what they have done to the Shabat – reducing both from a celebration of our relationship with God to doing nothing. And in this case, by either failing to read the words Yahowah inspired in Dowd’s song, or failing to act upon them, religious Jews brought untold misery upon God’s people.

The failure of rabbis to recognize and accept what Dowd represents and has accomplished is the fulcrum upon which the Jewish people have descended when they should have ascended. They were given the opportunity to restore their relationship with Yahowah by accepting Dowd’s fulfillment of Chag Matsah. They would have been welcomed back into the Covenant by embracing Dowd’s glorious status as the Chosen Messiah and Glorious King, the Shepherd who became the Sacrificial Lamb – the ultimate nepesh and basar.

But the rabbis tossed it all away, hurling Dowd’s dignity and legacy to the ground to be trampled upon by Christians, just as their animosity toward Yahowah would give rise to the Beast of Islam. Rabbis have long been the most debilitating enemy Jews have ever faced.

By contrast, Dowd was chosen by Yahowah and anointed with His Spirit. His most profound spiritual insights were distilled within these Songs, many scribed when his mind was young and receptive and when he was fraught with the fewest distractions. So not only was Dowd’s youth spent writing the songs that would liberate mankind from the bonds of religion, his basar | corporeal body would likely have been reconstructed from his DNA three to four years prior to sacrificing it. And it was through the fulfillment of the spring Miqra^{ey}, the first each year, Pesach and Matsah leading to Bikuwrym | Firstborn Children, that the Harvests of Shabu^wah and Taru^wah become possible...

“You have cut short, so as to deprive yourselves of what is required to reap the benefits of the harvest (qatsar – you are lacking what is needed by depreciating his essential essence) the days (yowmym – the time) when his robust presence was concealed as a young man (aluwmym huw – when he was vigorous and obscured, manifesting tremendous strength of character (plural); from alam* – to cloak and veil, alam* – in the past and forevermore, elem* – while young).

You have covered over him (atah *al huw – you have enveloped and clad him, enwrapping and veiling him) shamefully by diminishing his status (buwshah – plundering, dishonoring, and dismissing his purpose).

Take a moment and consider the implications (selah – pause now to reflect on this).” (Mizmowr / Lyrics to Sing / Psalm 89:45)

There is a consequence to being wrong, especially when what we believe is in conflict with what Yahowah has made known to us. We cheat ourselves when we deny what Dowd achieved because it shortchanges what he can offer us.

In this case, religious Jews are being accused of depriving themselves of what Dowd has provided such that they are not harvestable. They have vigorously obscured what he achieved during the fulfillment of Pesach and Matsah. They do not even acknowledge Dowd’s robust presence in Yaruwshalaim in the Yowbel year of 4000 Yah in 33 CE – even though he provided them with the exact day he would enter the city as their Messiah to fulfill Passover in Daniel 9.

While we are not told, there are clues which suggest that Yahowah would have placed Dowd’s nepesh | soul in a basar | corporeal body constructed of his DNA in year 3996 Yah | 29

CE, four years in advance of his fulfillment of the Miqr^oey during the 80th Yowbel. Four years in advance would have been exactly 1,000 years after the conclusion of his first life which ended four years before the Cornerstone of Yahowah's Covenant Home was laid and this Mizmowr was scribed. It was not only foretold during the fourth day of creation regarding the fulfillment of the Mow^oedym at the dawn of the fourth millennium, the Passover Lamb enters the home four days before the sacrifice. And also, Dowd reigned as King for forty years, concluding in Yaruwshalaim – the City of Dowd.

Again, while we are not told and do not need to know, since men are in their mental, emotional, and physical prime between thirty and forty years of age, I think this will be the returning and perpetual age of our Shepherd and King throughout his third coming.

As the Cornerstone was being laid, and while listening to Yahowah rave over His Son while condemning those who would deny him, the Psalmist asked a sensible question – one that would not be answered for 3,000 years...

“For how long (ad mah* – until when will the eternal witness and restoring testimony of), Yahowah (Yahowah – the proper pronunciation of the name of elowah* – God as directed in His towrah – teaching regarding His hayah existence and our shalowm – restoration), will You remain hidden, concealed, and virtually unknown (sathar – will You be a secret to many)?

Your righteous indignation, overt displeasure, and furious antagonism (*chemah atah – Your hostile response to all that is wrong) is kindled and burns (*ba*ar* – is ignited and ablaze (qal imperfect)) eminently and prominently (la netsach – majestically for an enduring period) like fire (*kamow esh – similar to burning flames).” (Mizmowr / Lyrics to Sing / Psalm 89:46)

The last time the majority of Yisra^{*}elites knew Yahowah was in year 3000 Yah, three millennia ago, during Dowd's initial reign as King. Since that time, and until quite recently, that number dwindled to none. It would not be until we began to post the Yada Yahowah Series online that this began to change.

And yet, knowing Yah is not for everyone. The 1.8 million Haredi are so intellectually incapacitated by their rabbis, even with the truth served up to them on a silver platter, they will continue to engender Yahowah's overt antagonism.

These books are labeled Yada Yahowah for a reason. With 1,800,000 shrill Jewish voices and another 5,000,000,000 Christians and Muslims fanning the flames of Divine wrath, I thought God might enjoy something less irritating.

Three millennia is a very, very long time – at least by our standards, but perhaps not by God's. Time does not flow for Him as it does for us. Unlike creatures bound to the earth, Yahowah, as a Spiritual Being, determines how He experiences time, varying the pace of its flow to suit His needs. The twenty centuries which have crawled past since the Messiah, Dowd, fulfilled Chag Matsah were so horrid, it's unlikely God paid attention to anything that occurred during that span.

Fortunately, we have reached the conclusion of this interval. With each word we translate and share, Yahowah becomes less hidden and better known to His people.

When Father and Son return on Yowm Kipurym | the Day of Reconciliations in year 6000 Yah (October 2nd at sunset, 2033 in Yaruwshalaim), He will be known to the extent it is possible among the surviving remnant of Jews. Not surprisingly, this awakening, along with maximizing the productivity of the Shabuw^oah and Taruw^oah Harvests is the stated purpose of Yahowah's Choter | Stem and Sucker, His Nakry | Observant Foreigner, His Nes | Sign of the Son, Basar | Herald of the King, and Zarowa^o | One Sowing the Seeds of the Harvest. Moreover, within six years of this writing in 2024, we can expect eLyah* | Yah is God | Elijah and Yada | He Knows to enter Dowd's City, Yaruwshalaim | the Source of Instruction on Reconciliation, to let the world know in no uncertain terms just how displeased

God is with humankind – particularly Christians, Muslims, Progressives, and the Haredim.

The realization that Yahowah has been unknown to His people and to all mankind for millennia is not only an essential reminder of man's overwhelming preference for religion over the relationship God intended, this underscores the need for a Choter and this Nes. Without them, mankind's ignorance of Yahowah would have remained. There would have been no Shabuw^oah or Taruw^oah Harvests, no Yowm Kipurym return, nor camping out together during Sukah. It would all have been for naught. And so now you know why Yahowah spoke so vociferously about our work together.

And so it should be no surprise that the ultimate truth and greatest discovery, that of Dowd fulfilling the Mow^oedym as the Son of God and returning as our Messiah, Shepherd, and King, was found and shared by the same Witness who would reintroduce Yahowah's name to His people. Further, God concealed Himself from His people as a direct result of their treatment of His Son and His name, so these things are related.

So, now it gets personal, as it should with all of us...

“You have chosen to remind me (*zakar any – Your will is to recall this information and these events to me, asserting these truths for me (qal imperative second-person masculine singular)) to ask about the duration of life in this world and temporary things by contrast to eternity, especially how time flows differently relative to the observer (mah cheled – what is one lifetime and how long will things continue to transpire in this world at the present pace).

Was it for nothing (al mah shawa – was it for this worthless religious vanity) that You created (*bara – that You conceived and brought into existence once upon a time (qal perfect)) each of the sons of *Adam (*kol beny adam – all of humankind)?” (Mizmowr / Lyrics to Sing / Psalm 89:47)

Revealed in the exact center of mankind's journey out of the Garden and back to *Eden, in 3000 Yah, Dowd's Song serves as a marker in time. One thousand years to the day, on Passover in year 4000 Yah, God's Beloved Son served as the Zarowa® | Sacrificial Lamb and fulfilled Pesach, Matsah, and Bikuwrym to redeem his people and enable the Covenant's blessings. Forty Yowbel thereafter he would return to reconcile the remnant of Yisra*el on Yowm Kipurym.

The thought of the Messiah suffering in this manner is hard to fathom from our perspective – but not from his Father's or from his own. What are two hellish days compared to an eternity with one's Father and Family, with thousands of Covenant members now at Home as a result of the sacrifice? The anguishing memory would fade while the Covenant he enabled would endure forever.

The three epochs of 40 Yowbel, each lasting 2,000 years, may seem like an interminable period, however, for God, and for those with Him in the Spiritual Realm of the Heavens of the 7th dimension, it equates to the blink of an eye. Time is relative, albeit not here for us, not now.

The period from the expulsion from *Eden to the affirmation of the Covenant with *Abraham allowing us to reenter would be forty Yowbel. Another 2,000 years would pass from our perspective looking back until Father and Son delivered the benefits of the Covenant by fulfilling Passover, UnYeasted Bread, and Firstborn Children. And from the fulfillment of the first three Mow*edym in year 4000 Yah to the return of Father and Son to fulfill the final three Miqra*ey in year 6000 Yah, 40 Yowbel would pass, bringing us to 2033 CE – just seven years from now.

This is the duration of things, God's timing as these events play out and we witness them. So much of it revolves around Dowd – the Messiah, Son of God, and Passover Lamb – that this Song was written to commemorate him and them.

Rest assured, Yahowah did not conceive humankind for us to be religious and antagonistic. Therefore, to save us from ourselves, Father and Son resolved the issues which separate us and composed these lyrics to showcase their resolve. And now, three thousand years later, I am sharing their thoughts to prepare the people for the harvest.

As we have discovered, Yahowah initiates the relationships He desires to form, leaving our response subject to our own freewill. He picks and chooses from among the men and women who either amuse Him, impress Him, or just pique His interests in some way. They all share something in common, in that each has walked away from religion and politics prior to Yah's introduction. They are all willing to listen, even go where His words lead.

Freewill works both ways. Yahowah enjoys it which is why He offered it to us. So, since it is His universe and His home, He is entitled to invite whomever He pleases to spend eternity with Him in it so long as He is consistent in His approach. That isn't to say that it is impossible to find Yahowah independently, but as the previous statement suggests, God is hidden from most because the preponderance of people are either religious, political, conspiratorial, patriotic, militant, or too otherwise distracted to learn the truth.

But more than any other reason that so few know Him is because men like Paul have plagued the world with their lies. So just as Sha'uwl was called out by name and condemned as the Plague of Death in Chabaquwq | Habakkuk, the Son of Evil is similarly identified in the 89th Mizmowr / Psalm. He authored the New Testament's fourteen most deadly tomes and inspired Mark, Luke, Acts, and Matthew. And if that were not bad enough, in response to his demonic appeal, Akiba and company would conceive Judaism in rebuttal.

“What man of great strength and character, empowered to prevail (my geber – who, as the most capable and courageous of men) lives (chayah – is actually and continually alive (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) and (wa) will not witness (*wa lo*ra*ah* – will not see (qal imperfect third-person masculine singular)) death as a result of the plague (maweth – dying from the pandemic disease which infects and destroys a great many people (piel imperfect third-person masculine singular)), saving his soul (*malat nepesh huw – delivering and sparing his consciousness, rescuing his inner nature (piel imperfect third-person masculine singular)) from the hand and influence (min yad – from the effects and acts) of Sha*owl (*Sha*owl* – Question Him, the Benjamite wolf in sheep's clothing who as a result of being demon-possessed changed his name to reflect his affinity with Rome, becoming Paul, the principal author of the Christian New Testament, the Father of Lies and the Son of Evil)?

Pause now and consider what this implies (selah – take the time required to contemplate the implications).” (Mizmowr / Lyrics to Sing / Psalm 89:48)

Every verb, and there were four in this question, was scribed in the third-person masculine singular, designating a single man as the subject. And he is the one initially presented as a geber | great man, a person of courage and character, imbued with the strength to prevail. God is, therefore, addressing His Son who is very much alive. And while he would experience the death of his corporeal body twice, once from old age and the other at the torturous hands of Rome, mankind's most acclaimed civilization, his soul endures. It has and will never experience death.

Moreover, Dowd is the antidote for the toxic venom spewed from *Sha*owl's* | Paul's poison pen. He was not only immune to the Plague of Death, but he is also providing the antibodies with which to fight the viruses of Christianity and Judaism. So, while many are saved by what he accomplished, he is the only one who offers salvation.

Let's be clear, this is addressing Sha*owl, the man, not She*owl, the place. She*owl does not have hands or influence. This place of separation can neither plague us nor kill us. In fact,

She*owl, as the place of eternal incarceration, is the antithesis of death for those who endure it. As a Black Hole, nothing reaches out from She*owl.

However, it was the hand of Sha*owl which wrote the fourteen epistles which have plagued mankind. It is under his influence that Christianity was conceived and popularized among Gowym. He is the master manipulator behind diminishing Dowd's influence, the hand that has sought to denigrate the Messiah, Son of God, and Passover Lamb such that he could replace him.

*Sha*owl* | Paul has plagued far more people than the billions of souls who were coerced or beguiled into placing their faith in the religion he fathered at the behest of Satan. Without the Son of Evil and the Father of Lies, Gowym would not have come to blame or hate Jews sufficiently to cause Rome (which was where Paul's allegiance lay) to massacre and enslave the Chosen People, robbing Yahuwdym of their homeland. The Roman Catholic Church, which was based on Paul's letters, would not have propagated the anti-Semitic culture and conspiracies which culminated in the Holocaust without Paul's jealousy and covetousness. Muhammad, likewise, would never have succeeded in establishing a religion predicated upon anti-Semitism without the foundation laid by his predecessor. And without Paul's propensity to promote a cult following and promulgate ignorance and irrationality such that they became commonplace, and indeed, established as politically correct, the growth of Multicultural Socialist Secular Humanism would have been truncated in the West. The entire impetus behind liberal politics was sanctioned by Paul on behalf of the Romans to impose and integrate religion and government.

*Sha*owl* | Paul has become the Chosen People's fiercest and most embittered adversary. He is responsible for the death of more souls than anyone who has ever lived. To escape his grasp is difficult, and often impossible, as the integrated religious and political scheme he concocted (read Romans 13) has tread upon the entire world – suppressing truth and impeding freedom. He will endure eternity in She*owl, and His Replacement Theology will die at the hand of Dowd, the man whose life and lyrics he sought to disparage. And while I have begged for the opportunity to convict him, it's Mizmowr like this which will be brought to bear against him. Dowd will get the debate he has sought. And the outcome is written in stone. Sha*owl will become synonymous with the place whose name he shares: *She*owl* | Hell.

“Where (*ayeh – posing a rhetorical question regarding an individual’s position) is Your unwavering love and enduring favoritism (chesed *atah – Your devotion to the familial relationship and unfailing kindness, Your genuine affection and merciful treatment) which was expressed first and foremost in the beginning (ri*shown – as the initial priority, as the most important consideration of what was occurring from the start, preceding this and of old) which You promised (shaba* – You truthfully proclaimed and affirmed as part of Your binding oath on seven occasions) to Dowd | the Beloved (la Dowd – to love and be loved in return), in harmony with Your steadfast commitment to being trustworthy and reliable (*emuwnah *atah – by way of Your honesty and dependability, by being completely truthful, genuine, and real such that You can be trusted and relied upon), my Upright One (*edown *any – my Upright Pillar, addressing the vertical beam which secures and enlarges a home, especially the Tent of the Enduring Witness)?” (Mizmowr / Lyrics to Sing / Psalm 89:49)

When we read a question in an inspired text such as this, the prophet not only knows the answer, but he has already provided it. Such is the case here with emuwnah* | trustworthy and dependable presented throughout Dowd’s Song and repeated within this question. Therefore, because Yahowah is consistent and forthright, He is reliable. The things which He has favored from the beginning are the things He loves. These would include being creative and enjoying an active and conversational relationship with humankind in a pristine environment. And since the formation of the Beryth | Covenant with *Abraham and

Sarah is the dominant theme of *Bare*syth* | Genesis, the Family is Yahowah's first love.

This is underscored by the realization that the remainder of the Towrah is focused on liberating the Children of Yisra*el from human religious and political oppression, then teaching and guiding them so that they might come home and live with their Father. However, since it takes two to Tango, and Yisra*elites could not refrain from stumbling over themselves in a nauseating fashion, Yah returned to His original preference, which was to form and enjoy an individual and personal relationship with one man!

God chose Dowd | the Beloved. He became His Bakowr | Firstborn Son. And through this single solitary life, the entire story of Yisra*el and the Covenant is relived, retold, and resolved!

Rather than give up on people, God worked alongside the best among us. And even then, as it was with *Adam, he was unsteady, at one moment soaring into the Heavens and in the next stumbling on Earth. But this time would be different because of the attributes Dowd manifested. He was brilliant and articulate, a voracious reader and voluminous writer, God's most learned student and most effective teacher. Dowd achieved where *Adam failed. He not only paid attention and valued Yah's advice, but he also understood it and shared what he had come to comprehend with us.

Under Dowd's guidance, Yisra*el was united in God's home. They were protected and thrived, at least until they lost focus and stumbled once again and fell. This time, however, Dowd, recognizing that he had become part of the problem, solved it once and for all. He realized what has taken us a score of years to learn – although, to our credit, we are the first since Zakaryah and Mal*aky to share his conclusion with his people.

While confirming the Covenant on Mowryah, and in the midst of a discussion between Father and Son, Dowd understood that there had been a promise. He recognized that in the Yowbel year of 2000 Yah, as a harbinger of Passover, God said that He would provide the lamb.

Dowd further realized that the Pesach *Ayil had also been instrumental in providing life and liberty for the Children of Yisra*el in Mitsraym. He read that on Matsah, they had walked out of the realm of religious and political oppression. He saw that they were reborn into the Covenant as they emerged from the sea. And as a bright lad, he rightly concluded that the Towrah's enriching enlightenment had been initially offered during Shabuw*ah. The stage was set for the fulfillment of the first three Miqra*ey at a later date – presumably 40 Yowbel from the day of the promise in year of 4000 Yah.

Having written the ultimate treatise on the Towrah in his 119th Mizmowr, Dowd would have understood as we have, that with the fulfillment of the first three Mow*ed, the benefits of the Beryth would be assured. So, he manned up, gibowr-ed in God's parlance, and volunteered to do the right thing. His basar | corporeal body became the Passover Lamb while his nepesh | soul carried Yisra*el's guilt into She*owl, depositing it there, never to be seen again. The Father's Firstborn was Bikuwrym-ed, living up to his title while fulfilling Chag Matsah. The Covenant was now firmly established. Its benefits were reliably provided. Problem resolved. Thanks to Father and Son, those who accept their gift would live forever, perfected and adopted, enriched, and empowered.

The geber would prevail given three lives, his soul and ours saved. Heaven's Door was opened. Our relationship was reconciled. We were invited back into the Gan *Eden.

Since he clearly understood what I'm sharing with you, I'd like to quote my favorite prophet...

“For indeed (ky – because truly, emphasizing this statement while revealing an important contrast), a child (yeled – a boy, an infant who grows up to become a man; from yalad – brought forth) was born (yalad – was conceived and brought into view through a woman impregnated by the father of the

Yasha^oyah and the Mizmowr are hand and glove. They are most useful when brought together. And so, it is from that perspective the Song of the Son elucidates Isaiah’s most acclaimed prophecy regarding the Son of God.

This Mashal | Articulate Leader is the Gibowr | God’s Most Competent and Courageous Man, our *Yasha | Savior because he is the *Ra*ah* | Shepherd and *Zarowa | Sacrificial Lamb.

Many would lead God’s people astray, but one would save them. Many have been wrong, but one was right.

Our questions have all been answered, but one remains for you. What are you going to do about it?

“A prophetic pronouncement about the impending burden (*masa) of the Beasts (bahemah) of the Negeb | Parched (negeb), within (ba) the Land (erets*) of Tsarah | Anguishing Confinement and Trouble (Tsarah), even (wa) oppression when besieged in dire straits (tsowqah).

The *Labya | White Lioness and (wa) the Lysh | White Lion, against them (min hem) Ephe^oah* | the Hissing and Negating Viper (wa) and the flying (wa ^ouwph) Saraph | Fiery Serpent, they lift up and carry away (nasa) upon (^oal*) asses and donkeys (^oayr), their strongest and most capable (chayl hem – their wealth, capability, strength, political authority, military power, and noble character as part of a large group), and on the humps of camels (wa ^oal dabesheth gamal) their treasury, arsenal, and food supplies (owtsar hem*) among and over (^oal) a people (^oam) who have no value or benefit and will not succeed or accomplish anything (lo ya^oal*). (Yasha^oyah / Isaiah 30:6)

Then (wa), the assistance and support (^oazar) of Mitsraym | those who control and oppress through politics, religion, or a military will be in vain, utterly meaningless and a waste of breath (habal), a delusional fantasy, empty words without merit (ryq). As a result, and for these reasons (la-ken), I will call (*qara) what pertains to this one (la zo^oth), ‘Rahab hem | their insolent and arrogant, boisterous and pretentious Afflicter, this audacious monster with a mythical god (Rahab hem – their conceited and stormy, frenzied and haughty, contentious and idolatrous, defiant and confused, emboldened and overly verbose, senseless and insubordinate, self-absorbed and self-motivated, Abuser falsely claiming divine status and authorization) is inactive and incapacitated, sitting this one out and doing nothing (shebeth).’ (Yasha ʿyah / Isaiah 30:7)

So, now (°atah), go (bow*) because it is imperative that you write it (kathab hy *) upon a tablet (°al luwach) to accompany them (eth hem). And also (wa), upon a written document, a scroll and book (°al sepher), you must inscribe it, as if engraving it by chiseling it in stone, portraying it as decreed (chaqaq hy).

Then it will come to exist (hayah) pursuant to (la) a day (yowm) to come in the end (*acharown) for the °Ad | Restoring Witness °Ad | of the Eternal Testimony, continually providing evidence throughout time °Owlam | from antiquity perpetually into the future and forevermore (°ad °ad °owlam).” (Yasha ʿyah / Isaiah 30:8)
